Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Some of the drivel (that's an opinionated word) coming from various government agencies, departments and individuals indicates how far along the road to government control rather than public control we have gone. All we hear is how much more money is needed for this and that program, and the idea seems to go unchallenged as to whether such programs ought to be undertaken on the scale that they are. We are far from a "free" society today and the future looks worse rather than better, despite the grumblings of a good many people—because they go right out and vote back into office the same candidates who have brought government into your life and mine more and more.

Among the "drivel" in the past week was this from the Social Security office:

"For those of you who have been served by ...., you will be happy to know he has been promoted. Beginning January 6, ... will be in training for a Claims Representative position at the .... office. We all wish him the best.

"Happy New Year."

It irks me to have to pay for the salaries of those in government agencies who make out their staffs to be part of the public's "one big happy family."

Who in Hades cares about the promotion of a government worker—except that worker. If it was in private industry, it would be an accomplishment. But not in government offices. And it's an abuse of public funds to take time to boast of how well someone is doing at getting more of the public's tax money.

To add to the situation (if you think I'm a bit radical in my comments), let me tell you that another mailing from the Social Security office was a Christmas greeting, a full page on which a drawing of a covered bridge appeared and "We wish you season's greetings" —from the Social Security office. Another mailing was from the Indiana US Savings Bonds Division, a "Merry Christmas" from the staff whose names were listed.

Involved in those inappropriate mailings were paper, time and postage—and you and I pay for it!

What is most frightening, however, is the fact that many people in these government offices and agencies consider their jobs essential and an integral part of everyday living. And if the public is going to "buy" that outlook, too, and keep on asking for more things to be done for them, then it will be a certainty that in the past several years, we have failed to teach and remember the real meaning of "a free society."

Am I against Social Security? NO! My concern is that the program has gone beyond its intent—that of supplementary income—and has become to many a pension program. I'm upset because I must pay this year, as a self employed, OVER $100 PER MONTH in Social Security taxes, in addition to income taxes.

And the chummy "one big happy family" image being painted by workers in Social Security is absolutely wrong!

"Is Social Security 'untouchable? Doubtless it is today, but a prediction is in order: If Congress fails to act within the next few years to bring the illusions of Social Security into line with reality, we will see a political explosion that will blow the system sky-high. Young men and women entering the labor force in the 1970s are not stupid. Vast sums have been spent on their education, with the result that many of them can read, write and do their numbers. They are bound to recognize Social Security as a fraud so massive that its sponsors, if they operated in the private sector, WOULD BE HUSTLED OFF TO PRISON. . "

If you ask me, the chickens are coming home to roost now—what with all the problems we face, particularly inflation. And it's a shame that we have degenerated into an attitude that says work as little as you can, get as much money as you can, and retire as soon as you can. Along with it goes the un-American outlook which makes a government employee a necessary public benefactor. We're not telling them what we expect as payers of the bill; they're telling us what we have coming.

Happy New Year.

Deaf Man Designs Tiny Hearing Aid

Offers free model

A remarkable tiny hearing aid has been perfected by a man who has been hard of hearing for nearly ten years.

This small device has no dangling cords or separate transmitting units and is worn completely in your ear.

It was developed especially for those persons who can hear but can't understand. This hearing instrument provides "ear-level" hearing with the wearer picking up speech, sounds, television and radio at his ear. Due to the use of transistors, the user cost is extremely low.

A true life actual size replica of the smallest all-in-the-ear hearing aid ever made will be given absolutely free to anyone sending in this advertisement while supply lasts. So we suggest you write for yours now. No obligation whatsoever. Write to A. J. Wilder, 809 Steuben Street, Wausau, Wis. 54401. (Adv.)

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

A news item seen this week probably won't get too much attention. It noted that attorneys representing Richard M. Nixon contend his constitutional rights have been damaged by government control of his White House tapes. They point out that no such action was taken during the attempted impeachment of Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas concerning his writings; that no such action was taken when Representative Adam Clayton Powell of New York was under fire and no such action was taken against President Harry Truman when there was a scandal during his administration. Every other President was given title to his papers—but not Mr. Nixon. Wanna bet he doesn't have a chance to win?

It brought to mind, also that Wilbur Mills' recent problems have not been splashed time and time again across the news pages, nor have memers of the Republican Party jumped on the man while he is down. His admission of emotional problems has not been ridiculed by Republicans and the news media have been comparatively considerate in their reporting. But not for Mr. Nixon who almost died. He's different!

And it brought further to mind that when Senator Tom Eagleton was embarrassed in the 1972 election campaign about his emotional problems several years ago, it was George McGovern, the liberal, the concerned, the broad-minded, who dumped Senator Eagleton like a hot potato—his own potential running mate!

And it was a man they call "Tricky Dick" who sent orders to his presidential campaign cohorts—"Lay off Eagleton"—out of consideration for the Senator's personal welfare.

You know that kitten that wandered away while we were on vacation—and then Mark got her back again? Well, that kitten is a comedian—a nut.

We have had more pleasure and laughs than you can imagine. She's spoiled—has the run of the house. So you'll find her anyplace, snoozing comfortably, or watching us. She tears from one end of the house to the other on occasion, just for kicks, plays "like a kitten" with a single small kernel of Cocoa Puffs, has curiosity that is unbelievable.

Sometimes at night, we are awakened by her playing. Sometimes the wind chimes in an archway in the kitchen start tinkling at night—there's no wind—it's just Chessie who has climbed up on the shelf in the archway and is standing up to swing at the chimes.

When Mark sits down at the piano, Chessie hops up and watches the hammers go up and down, occasionally taking a leap at one of them to try to catch it. Or she'll just sit quietly on the piano and watch Marks hands.

A picture in the Butler Record Herald a couple of weeks ago showed Sue Stoffer, fetchingly clad as Mrs. Santa Claus, and Lynn Kaiser, also fetchingly clad as one of Santa's elfin helpers, distributing gifts at a classroom Christmas party at the Riverdale school. Lynn is short but, oh boy. She always reminds me of that little building on the back of the lot in the good old days—built of brick!

Ivan Brown was the recipient of an unusual gift at Christmas. It was probably Joe and Ralphine Robinson who thought up giving Ivan a shepherd's staff, inasmuch as he has been raising sheep in the past year for the fun of it—or something. It must have been fun when the old pickup truck he bought to haul the sheep broke down.

Mark Stuck says, "All you hear is what's bad about the kids nowadays. But there are some of them who are OK and they ought to be given some publicity."

Mark was referring to the conscientious behavior of Dwight Fish who accidently struck Mark's pup last week when passing the Stuck place east of Saint Joe. Dwight stopped, went back to tell the Stucks about the accident, helped get the dog in the Stucks' car and went along to Doc Hornbacker's to help in getting the pup taken care of.

The pup now has splints on both front legs—and Dwight has a halo!

I don't know—maybe it's me. But something just doesn't sit right about taking a group of 4Hers to the most expensive supper club in Fort Wayne on an "Achievement Trip."

The State Chamber of Commerce says Hoosiers are "lucky" this year—they will be working for the tax collector "only" 117 days in 1975. In 1974, we worked 123 days before starting work for ourselves.

New Owners At Kone Kastle

Tim and Cindy Kuker of Fort Wayne have purchased the Kone Kastle in Saint Joe and have been operating it since January 1.

The restaurant was purchased in 1973 by Richard and Lois Strombeck who did extensive remodeling and installed the latest equipment for a soft ice cream and sandwich-snack facility.

Mr. Kuker is head of Kuker & Associates of Fort Wayne, an insurance and financial consultant firm. The Kukers have two children, Laurie 8, and Larry 5.

The Kukers plan to expand the menu to include Sunday dinners and perhaps other daily specials.

They invite everyone to stop in, enjoy a snack or lunch and get acquainted.

This coming Sunday the Kone Kastle will feature sugar glazed ham as the dinner special.

EHS Lettermen Chili Supper

The Lettermens Club of DeKalb Eastside High School will sponsor a chili supper Saturday, January 11, from 5 to 8 pm—"all you can eat."

Prices are $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12.

The supper will be served in the EHS cafetorium.

Arminta Steward

Funeral services were held at Baidinger & Walter Funeral Home in Spencerville Dec. 31 for Arminta G. Steward, 88, who died Dec. 27 at DeKalb Memorial Hospital where she had been a patient nine days.

A Spencerville resident for 80 years, Miss Steward was born January 20, 1886, the daughter of Lewis Wallace and Cora (Barr) Steward.

Miss Steward had lived at Meadowhaven Nursing Home in Butler for two years and had previously lived in Garrett Community Hospital for five years.

Survivors include nieces and nephews, among them Mrs. Joe Baidinger of Garrett and Mrs. Paul Drerup of Auburn; several grandnieces and nephews.

Rev. Elbert Tingley officiated at the funeral. Burial was in White City Cemetery.

Dr. Coleman Asks For Opinions On ERA

State Representative Dr. Floyd B. Coleman is asking his constituents to let him know how they feel about the proposed 27th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, the so-called "Equal Rights Amendment."

The Waterloo physician voted against the amendment in 1973, but has indicatede he may reassess his vote if he finds the overwhelming opposition of the past has shifted in favor of ERA.

Doctor Coleman says he "has never been in favor of laws which limit the opportunities of one sex or laws which confer an obligation based on sex." He further stated that he "favors correcting such inequalities by amending or repealing state law, rather than depending upon federal statutes or constitutional amendments."

A study committee of the Indiana State Legislature has reviewed laws dealing with sex discrimination. Several bills will be forthcoming in the current session, Coleman said. His decision woud be based on what he believes "would be in the best interests of all people in Indiana." And he said he is "leery of an all encompassing amendment to the constitution." In his judgment, many meaningful protective measures could be lost if ERA becomes a part of the constitution.

Residents of the area may send their views to State Representative Dr. Floyd B. Coleman, State House, Indianapolis, Indiana 46204.

Two recent letters to the editor of the Auburn Evening Star indicated that the writers were not in favor of the ERA. One letter gave a detailed account of efforts to get answers to questions about the ERA from those who strongly support the amendment. It was stated that only vague and indefinite answers were received.

However, in asking questions of those leading the opposition to the ERA, definite and informative answers were given. The letter writers were impressed by the well-organized and and informative nature of the ERA opposition and indicated their opposition to the proposed amendment.

Gas Utility Seeks Raise

Northern Indiana Fuel & Light Co., Inc., has filed new gas rate schedules with the Public Service Commission of Indiana to cover increased gas cost as a result of new rate schedules filed with the Federal Power Commission by pipeine suppliers, to be effective February 1, 1975. The increase for the average residential non-heating customer will amount to $1.78 per year, and the increase to the average residential heating customer will amount to $9.92 per year.

The filing is in accordance with the procedure required when pipeline suppliers raise their rates to the utility companies.

Meanwhile, a hearing was set for Tuesday of this week at 9:30 am at the office of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, 907 State Office Building, Indianapolis, on a request for a general rate increase for gas users. The rate increase is the first one sought in 19 years for general purposes. In the last few years, Northern Indiana Fuel and Light has increased its rates only when necessary to reflect higher prices of the gas it purchases from its pipelines and suppliers.

The company seeks $661,000 in additional revenues, an average increase of 15 percent. The increase in revenue is needed due to increased cost of labor, supplies and other expenses.

If the proposed rates are approved, the average monthly bill for residential non-space heating customers would increase 47 cents a month and the average monthly bill for residential space heating customers would increase $2.66 a month.

If approved, the rates would go into effect this coming spring.

The company sells natural gas to 11,700 customers in Allen, DeKalb, Noble and Steuben counties. Its corporate officers are in Auburn.

Though the company does not serve customers in the Saint Joe area, the above information is provided to indicate the situation faced by all public utilities, that of requiring rate increases to offset mounting operational costs. General Telephone Company and Indiana & Michigan Electric Company are also seeking higher rates at the present time.

Several years ago, the gas company obtained an option from the then town board members for installation of natural gas service to Saint Joe. Thereafter, however, the interest rates on borrowed money increased substantially and the gas company was not able to carry out its intentions related to Saint Joe.

'Rapping' With Youth About.....

Are You 'Free'—And A 'Slave'?

One of my "favorite"—if that is the proper word—passages in the Bible is that written by Saint Paul concerning fulfillment in life. I don't know the exact location of the passage; I don't have my Bible knowledge exact enough to be able offhand to quote book, chapter and verse. But the general thoughts do remain. And this one has to do with Saint Paul's declaration that he did not become "free" as a child of God until he became a servant or "slave" of God.

In a way, the thought sounds contradictory—how can you be free when you are a slave? I wonder if that is one of the reasons we have such problems as young people today—we do not find fulfillment in doing "our own thing" or there would not be so much effort toward "escapism" as represented , for instance, by the use of drugs. The reason could be that there has not been adequate consideration given to this particular passage and other passages, written centuries ago by a man who was engaged in the persecution of Christians, then became the leader in Christian discipleship and writing to proclaim Christ as the saviour of man.

So much has been done in schools and churches to make a person's life "relevant" (but with "modern" ideas and gimmicks) that life has become irrevelant, simply because it has been led to think only in terms of today. This does not give much foundation for growth. The past, or the "heritage" of a society, is necessary for growth and understanding. Contrary to what young people have been led to believe in recent years, history is very relevant to today's living.

What does Saint Paul mean when he says he did not find freedom until he became a slave? From the history of people who believed in God, as we read in the Old Testament (or "The Law" as it is referred to in total), man's outlook was that fulfilling "the law" was the true measure of a person's belief in God. "The law" was the Ten Commandments, from which the believers branched out and expanded "the law" to make it "relevant" to their times. In their eagerness to be "right" with God, they became intent on simplifying "the law" to make it "relevant" to those living in those ancient times. It was the same attempt we make today to bring more understanding to more people about what they should or should not do. Thus, in those days the Ten Commandments were expanded into some 620 or so laws in an attempt to make faith "relevant" to the times, to give quick answers when believers might ask "what shall I do" in matters related to their everyday living. They became, in a sense, "muscle bound" in law, basing their faith on following prescribed practices, going through the motions as they were supposed to do according to those 620 or so religious laws.

If you think of the Ten Commandments as the "constitution" of Godly faith, you might say that the ancients amended the "constitution" to try to help; they had a better idea —or so they thought. But instead, the "amendments" served to blot out the guidance of the "constitution." "The law" became man speaking, not God. (Sound familiar?)

Saint Paul's reference to serving and slavery did not have to do with the religious practices which prevailed before his conversion. He is speaking of the time after he was confronted by God, rendered blind in fact, so that he would gain sight of the truth. Paul's profound revelation of fulfillment simply stated is: before, he was thinking in terms of self gain ((all those laws were to help gain favor with God for the do'er of the religious practices). After his conversion, when he knew the meaning of God's love, his life was directed toward others. Instead of condemning as he had done before, he now counselled, taught, preached, enlightened, in light of God's love. Man's feeble efforts to justify himself through religious acts and practices were set aside.

Centuries have passed since Saint Paul's words were written. There have been good times, good cultures, good leaders (even dictators have been benevolent from time to time). There have also been downfalls every time, simply because people lost sight of serving and became concerned with self.

Saint Paul's words are as true today as they were in the past. We have so many unhappy people in our society today simply because they have fallen victim to self-gratification, self comfort. We try to solve all our problems with the dollar bill, with "good deeds" as we think we are supposed to do according to "the law." Until this outlook is changed, until we begin thinking in terms of serving God by serving our fellow man with genuine interest, understanding and compassion, our problems will continue . . . . because many of our "problems" are really a reflection of individual and group selfishness — "I'm entitled to this, I'm entitled to that" — "We have a right to this, we have a right to that"—and so on. The environment is endangered because we have become lazy. We are obsessed with push buttons, electronics, throw-away "conveniences" and so on—all demanding energy—except human energy. Our recreation oftentimes involves sitting, for the most part, while others "entertain" us for huge sums of money—all because "we are Americans—we have it coming, the easy life."

Thousands of words are being written and spoken today suggesting "cures" for our troubles. But very few if any of them look back to the Bible to gain the benefit of one man's experience from which came an eternal truth—a man who went from a proud and dutiful "religious" leader to a devoted and humble "slave" of God wherein he found fulfillment.

Saint Paul was quite a guy. His experience has a message for all of us.

Giving The President A Chance

"Honesty" and "integrity" were two words used extensively prior to the November 5 election. Because of the Watergate affair, Republicans had an obvious rough time combating public opinion about Watergate, even though those candidates had nothing to do with Watergate and in all probability did not condone the wrongs of Watergate.

So, it was a nice situation for Democrat candidates to cash in on — public resentment against dishonesty and violation of trust by elected and appointed officials. In some instances, however, there was public inconsistency, such as in Indiana where Larry Conrad was re-elected Secretary of State even though he was caught spending our state tax dollars to pay his personal campaign telephone bills and was involved in the publication of a derogatory document referred to as a "master plan" to get him elected governor. And at the national level, Representative Wilbur Mills got re-elected even after being caught playing footsie with a "stripper."

The situation was enhanced for Democrats when Gerald Ford was installed as President of the United States. Congressional Democrats publicly voiced support of Mr. Ford and pledged to "stay in session until something is done about inflation." To me, that meant THEY were going to help do something about inflation.

But did they deliver? You answer the question. When Mr. Ford "pardoned" Richard Nixon, he lost Congressional enthusiasm in both parties, and he lost public favor. Our attention was directed almost solely to the pardon matter, even though inflation was still hanging around. At a time when everyone was (and is) concerned about the decreasing purchasing power of their earnings and savings, Congressional leadership under Democrats played politics and devoted its attention to a matter totally unrelated to inflation.

Then when the President presented his suggestions for combating inflation, including a 5 percent surtax on middle and upper income groups, his opposition cashed in on the appeal of alleged unfairness. They doted on the idea that the "little man" must bear the load while corporations and business get away scot-free—or so they would lead you to think. Instead of considering the relatively small amount the surtax would mean on those affected, the public listened instead to those who made a mountain out of a mole hill, in a sense.

I don't like to pay more taxes any more than anyone else. But if the President of the United States is expected to "do something" about inflation by the public AND THE CONGRESS, then he ought to have the cooperation especially of the Congress in supporting his program, whether they are in total agreement or not. How can you determine whether or not something will work if you don't try it?

The public looks to the President to take action. But he cannot do it on his own. It is amazing to me how Democrat leadership can time after time hoodwink the public by such tactics as howling how much power the President exercises (as they did when Richard Nixon was in office) when Congress has given the President that power. It amazes me that so many people can be hoodwinked by Democrat leadership into criticizing the President for "not doing anything about inflation" when it is THE CONGRESS which must institute much of the program suggested by the President. Under our system of government, Congress passes legislation, not the President. He has veto power, yes. But that can be overridden by the Congress—and has been in recent weeks on legislation which the President called "inflationary." In addition, the Democrat-controlled Congress refused to postpone a pay raise for government workers, a request from President Ford to help slow the inflationary spiral. And government workers are already getting 50% more than their counterparts in private business!

Keep that in mind when you hear or see any criticism of President Ford's "inaction" on inflation.

50 PLUS CLUB

—Galen Markle, secretary

The December 19 meeting of the Fifty Plus Club was held in the basement of St. Peter Luthern Church in Spencerville with MM Andrew Ward, Elizabeth Hart and MM Arthur Bottoms as hosts.

At 6:30 the group was called to order and after prayer by Harold Stiver all enjoyed the delicious potluck supper.

A short business meeting was then conducted by President Ida Reed. She extended greetings to those present, then read a poem, "A Tribute To December." A motion was passed that the committee for the evening also furnish the entertainment. The group voted to purchase two poinsettias and present them to St. Peter Church in appreciation for the use of the basement for club meetings. Lovely poinsettias were also presented to the president and secretary.

"Happy Birthday" was sung to those having December birthdays and their birthday offerings were received.

The committee on making programs for the coming year is: Alice Hollabaugh, Sarah Amstutz and Ida Reed. The secretary's report was approved as read. The president had a treat for those present, after which Marie Ward conducted the white elephant Christmas exchange which was a lot of fun.

Mrs. Nellie Shaffer is chairman of the committee for the January 23 meeting, same time, same place.

DAR News

Members of the John Houlton Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, were pleasantly surprised to find themselves mentioned in "The Daughters of the American Revolution Magazine," thanks to the coverage given by all the DeKalb County newspapers—The Garrett Clipper, The Auburn Star, The Butler Record Herald, The Saint Joe News and The Waterloo Press.

The recognition came through the publishing of the local church histories. The DAR magazine stated:

"Right in line with the Bicentennial Action Theme 'Make Local History Live,' is the project of John Houlton Chapter as they research churches 100 or more years old. The Chapter submits regular articles to the local press covering historic local churches, their leaders and architecture."

The magazine pointed out a prize of $7500 for the composer of lyrics and melody which could be suitably used as "The Army Hymn." This is to celebrate the Bicentennial and also commemorate the 200th year of the Army Chaplaincy.

The contest is open to civilians and the military. Those interested should write Office of the Chief of Chaplains (DACH-AMM), Dept. of the Army, Washington, DC 20314.

Deaf Man Designs Tiny Hearing Aid

Offers free model

A remarkable tiny hearing aid has been perfected by a man who has been hard of hearing for nearly ten years.

This small device has no dangling cords or separate transmitting units and is worn completely in your ear.

It was developed especially for those persons who can hear but can't understand. This hearing instrument provides "ear-level" hearing with the wearer picking up speech, sounds, television and radio at his ear. Due to the use of transistors, the user cost is extremely low.

A true life actual size replica of the smallest all-in-the-ear hearing aid ever made will be given absolutely free to anyone sending in this advertisement while supply lasts. So we suggest you write for yours now. No obligation whatsoever. Write to A. J. Wilder, 809 Steuben Street, Wausau, Wis. 54401. (Adv.)

Letters to the Editor

Dear Ted,

A few days ago I was discussing your editorial of November 28 with a friend from West Virginia. Your editorial dealt with the problems of choosing suitable textbooks for the high school level. My friend happened to have copies of passages from textbooks now under fire in West Virginia, and I thought that perhaps you would be interested in reading these copies. After going through these, I must give my support to parents who are sincerely concerned about their children's mental, emotional and academic growth. Somewhere someone must establish a dividing line between literature and trash.

Sincerely,
Michele

We appreciate the interest of any reader in the textbook matter, especially from the teaching profession. It confirms our belief that not all teachers agree with what has happened in education, also that the layman's fears are well-founded. Anyone wishing to examine the copies which Michele sent to us may do so at the News Office. We consider much of the content unfit for presentation in any newspaper. —Ed.

Dear Ted,

I would like to comment on your letter to the Editor (in the Auburn Evening Star in December). I certainly agree with everything you said concerning the release of Kenneth Pierce, just before he murdered our daughter in law. It is unbelievable that anyone at all familiar with this man's history, could have thought he was safe to send back into Society, at that time.

However, I cannot agree that justice has been done, Ted, this isn't an 'eye for an eye, or a tooth for a tooth,' as you say. It is just good common sense. As I sat in that court room, listening to the testimony of those psychiatrists, I became more convinced than ever, that it was time to return the administering of Justice to the Judge and the Prosecutor. Neither of these men said one word that convinced me that they were any better able to do the job. Now, as you said, if this man is to remain in an institution for the rest of his life, fine. However, one of the psychiatrists, suggested only ONE YEAR of treatment.

In the interview with Judge Stump, in the Evening Sart, he stressed the need for new insanity standards. Another thought, is a mandatory 20 year sentence in a mental hospital, for this, all too common plea, of 'Innocent, by reason of Insanity', I am told, this has been put into effect in another state.

In a conversation with Dr. Coleman, he suggested that he would be glad to 'put our recommendations into the hopper', in the state legislature. I am going to give you the name and address of both our representatives, in the hope that other people who think as we do, will take the time to write these men. Perhaps, someone will come up with a better idea, than anything we have suggested, here. Whatever it is, let's get a law that will keep men such as this, from repeating their crime, and protect the lives of our younger women.

Floyd B. Coleman, MD, 425 South Wayne Street, Waterloo 46793
Woodrow Wilson, R2 Payne, Ohio. Mr. Wilson is an Indiana resident.

Sincerely,
Mary Mathes
(Mrs. V. O, Mathes)

Dear Ted:

We have a change of address. Also, It's about time for me to get my subscription paid. Will this pay up till August '75?

Since I last wrote, Sue was graduated from Ohio State and Kim is in the Navy, stationed at San Diego, California.

Sincerely,
Louise Brown

St. Joe News

The DeKalb County Soil and Water Conservation District wishes to extend its deep appreciation to the St. Joe News for its assistance in helping promote the conservation efforts of the DeKalb SWCD. Many news articles and news releases have received greater exposure due to your efforts and helpfulness in making soil and water conservation a part of your news content during the preceeding year.

The District has an unwritten policy that all newspaper and radio stations receive the same news releases on the same day in order to be fair and equal to all organizations. We want you to feel free to edit our news releases as we know space and time are problems that you have to contend with.

As you know, all of our programs are voluntary and our services are available to any one without charge, therefore making our information program one of our most important efforts. With your assistance, our conservation efforts are magnified many fold so we can do an increasingly better job of conserving, protecting and enhancing the natural resources of DeKalb County.

We extend many thanks to you and anticipate building a stronger working relationship in the upcoming new year.

Sincerely,
Victor Timmerman, Chairman

Work Begins On Branch Bank Site

Lane Builders of Butler, contractors for the construction of a building to house a branch bank at Saint Joe, began work this week in preparing the site for the new building.

Knisely National Bank of Butler will open the branch when the new building is completed. The branch will offer complete banking services in serving the Riverdale area.

Construction work began after several months of discussion and planning for the facility. Several approvals were necessary at the federal and state level. Knisely Bank purchased the site, two lots on the main street, from the Town of Saint Joe last year. The lots had been purchased by the previous town board as a potential location for a new town hall, a project which was on a tentative basis.

A survey by the Booster Club of Saint Joe a year ago brought sufficient response about the need for local banking facilities to impress the board of directors of Knisely Bank. Thereafter, the board took positive action to make the new bank facility a reality for the local community.

Riverdale Little Hoosiers

—Cindy Bissell, secretary

The Riverdale Little Hoosiers held their monthly meeting on January 14, 1975, in the Riverdale Cafetorium. We discussed the rubber car project we are working on for the Auburn—Cord—Duesenberg Museum. Ideas for the Little Hoosier State Convention project were given and a discussion was held concerning our February Valentine Project for Glen Oaks Nursing Home. The group then played Pioneer Games such as Rabbit and Hound, Poisoned Bean Bag, Bean Bag Throw and Bean Bag Go Foot. Refreshments of cupcakes, cookies and koolade were served.

Suit Filed In Mathes Case

An amended suit for damages totaling nearly $400,000 has been filed by Kenneth Mathes as a result of the murder of his wife, Brenda Joyce Mathes, in 1973. The suit was filed by Mathes' attorney, Howard Grimm, Sr., on January 8, 1975, amended to include Oakawn Psychiatric Center, not included in the original suit filed in May of 1974 against Kenneth Pierce, his parents and his grandparents.

The suit claims that Oaklawn "negligently released" Pierce from treatment in August of 1973, although it "knew or should have known . . that it would be extremely dangerous" to release Pierce without extended treatment.

Pierce was found not guilty by reason of insanity of the October 12, 1973 drowning murder of Mrs. Mathes. Circuit Court Judge Harold Stump said Pierce was "guilty of the act, but not of the offense" because of insanity, and committed him to Norman Beaty State Hospital in Westville.

At the trial, a testifying psychiatrist said Pierce had been psychotic for several years. Another psychiatrist said Pierce was compelled by an inner drive and unable to control it. The damage suit contends Oaklawn's staff knew or should have known these factors.

Mathes seeks $398,334 in damages. The main factor is $270,400 for his wife's potential wages during the remainder of her life expectancy; $100,000 is for loss of "society and companionship" and care and training of their daughter. Other factors include child care expenses, funeral costs and Mathes' lost work time.

Pierce was sent to Oaklawn for treatment in August of 1973, two months before the murder. He had been apprehended in a similar kidnap attempt at Auburn. He apparently was released a short time later as an outpatient at the Northeastern Center in Kendallville.

ACAC Tourney Next Week

The annual Allen County Basketball Tourney will be held January 21, 22, 23, 24 and 25 at the Memorial Coliseum at Fort Wayne.

Season tickets for the tourney will be sold at Eastside High School from 8:30 am to 4:30 pm starting Thursday of this week. Sales will end next Tuesday afternoon at 3:30. No season tickets will be sold thereafter.

A season ticket consists of five stubs and any of the stubs is good for any session. For example, a family of five may use the five stubs for one game. Or the stubs may be divided for different sessions.

Cost of a season ticket is $5 and they will not be available at the door. Door admission is $1.50 for each session. Kindergarten and preschoolers are admitted free but they must be carried through the turnstiles.

The Sportsmanship Award will again be presented by the Allen County Sheriff's Department to the school displaying the best sportsmanship. Eastside won the award last year and fans are urged to continue their fine sportsmanship again this year.

Eastside faces Southern Wells at 7 pm Wednesday.

Tax Cuts Not The Answer

I must look in bewilderment and wonder at the sight of Democrats and Republicans, up to the office of President, falling over one another in their haste to get a tax reduction bill passed. If you wonder why the President is in on tax reduction now, too, after proposing among other things just weeks ago that a 5 percent income tax surcharge be instituted on certain incomes to fight inflation, just remember that Congressional leadership said "no" to his suggestions. He has no other way to go.

I am disappointed that a voluntary program has not been pushed. I know there are those who say the voluntary way didn't work after President Gerald Ford made his "WIN" suggestions. But I wonder if the voluntary way was really given a chance, really "sold" to the American public. I don't think one TV appearance is enough for any program to be sold to the public. There should have been more emphasis on the voluntary approach; it should have been played up by top government officials, by the news media AND by those in the Congress—for the sake of America. But it wasn't; I read comments by more than one Congressman opposed to the President that "the voluntary way won't work." And sure enough, it didn't. And so now we have more regulations facing us, a gas tax increase facing us to cut the use of petroleum, and of all things an income tax reduction. The last named is to put more money in the hands of the public. It also adds to inflation.

So—I'm rather confused. I think we are being sold a bill of goods. The promise of a tax reduction soothes the upset about higher prices to some extent. But we need to spend less, not more, to combat inflation. However, because of emphasis on unemployment, our attention has been diverted and the same old story is about to begin—more government spending, higher national debt, more government regulation.

It has surprised me how many people have expressed the thought that unemployment has been overplayed—and this thought has been expressed by people regardless of their political party affiliation. I share the same view—though I must admit I would hate to be one getting laid off. Or would I? With many unemployed getting up to 95 percent of their regular pay through unemployment compensation funds and regulations, it can't be too rough at the present time. In fact, the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette sent a couple of reporters into four counties a few weeks ago to gather some hardship stories from the unemployed. They found none!

Another thing. Unemployment is based on individuals. With some 40 percent or more wives now employed, the layoff of either the husband or wife still leaves a source of income from the other (though there are cases where both have been laid off). Therefore, the unemployment figures ought to be based on UNEMPLOYED FAMILIES, that is, the number of families without a full or part-time source of income. This would seemingly be more accurate in determining how bad off we really are and would seemingly help to stop the jumping from one approach to another, almost week by week, in trying to cope with the situation. As it is, we just keep rocking the boat.

It is disappointing to see a President come up with sound long range suggestions, only to get clobbered by an opposition Congress and be virtually forced into doing what we don't need in matters related to inflation.

Our problem is NOT recession; we don't need a tax cut. Our problem is inflation. We need to cut spending, starting with the federal government.

Parents Have Text 'Champion'

If you are a parent and concerned about what's happening in education and are displeased with the social emphasis in schools today in which "the past" and "Mom and Dad" are made to look anything but good, take heart. You have a champion in State Senator Joan Gubbins, R-Indianapolis. The Senator spoke at a meeting in Fort Wayne last week and pulled no punches in describing today's educational system as one in which children are being "brainwashed" into accepting the "controlled society of a socialistic state." She is a member of the State Education Committee.

Senator Gubbins said that "humanism, the concept of education in use throughout the country, strives to place man as a 'product of his heredity, his environment, to be perfected through the hierarchy of education'." Humanism was described as the idea that "no deity can save us, we must save ourselves."

In comments about citizens' attitdes toward this nation, she said many social studies books, including the state-approved Silver-Burdett texts, are "hate America books." One text "equates the American Revolution with a Watts riot," she said.

"These books give a muddled view of the formation of our government. America is put in a bad light continually," the Senator said. One of the books in fifth grade social studies depicts the "Daughters of the American Revolution" as "witch hunters and calls the American Civil Liberties Union the defender of liberty in America. I resent that bitterly," she said.

Senator Gubbins' solution to the problem is not "throw them (educators) out." Rather, it involves cooperation—which sounds to me to be reasonable, rational and sensible. She urged her listeners to "give school people the first chance. Go to them with a smile and be active in the school . . . . read your children's textbooks." Another part of the solution is to make the General Education Commission one comprised of all lay persons. She has introduced a bill to this effect and it would also make four members of the Indiana Commission on Textbook Adoption lay persons, with three educators as members, including the State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Teacher training and licensing would not be affected by her bill.

In remarks related to parents, Senator Gubbins said that many educators have decided parents are not capable of raising their own children; that only "experts" are qualified for the task. They want children under control of the state by the time they are two years old, she said. These remarks struck me as being significant because licensed "day-care centers" and pre-school groups provide the perfect background for such early child thought-control

Concerning textbooks, Senator Gubbins said some of them downgrade parents and their beliefs by portraying parents in a bad light; downgrading respect for parents and others in authority; excusing or rationalizing stealing and lying as not always being wrong and thus undermining honesty.

It is refreshing to have an elected official making statements which reflect the fears of many parents today and trying to do something about it. Senator Gubbins deserves the support of those who, like myself, resent the mounting expenses related to education and the diminishing returns. If you have a chance, drop her a line of encouragement (State Senator Joan Gubbins, State House, Indianapolis, Indiana 46204). I did, because it has been so long since an elected official expressed pointed thoughts with which I agree AFTER an election. Generally, it seems the elected ones get "cold feet" once they get in the State House.

Senator Gubbins' remarks are made even more significant in view of thoughts expressed in a "letter to the editor" in this issue from an Eastside graduate now in the education field.

Suits Start With People

A week or so ago, there was a story in the dailies about a young woman who had been attacked in a rest room of a major bus company. She sued the company and was awarded something like one and a half or two and a half MILLION dollars.

An earlier news story told of the situation facing an Indianapolis hospital as I recall, because eight anesthesiologists couldn't obtain malpractice insurance any longer; the insurers refused to renew such protection because of high awards in malpractice suits against that specialty group.

A feature article in the News-Sentinel last week was headlined "Insurance Agencies Cause Doctors Malpractice Crisis." The headline was misleading, but much of the content of the article was informative—that doctors generally are finding it increasingly difficult to obtain insurance protection.

What do these events have in common? Just this — they all reflect problems created by public demands that money — not responsibility, not fault, not negligence, not omission — but MONEY be the basic ingredient in damage suits involving business and the professions. This is a dangerous trend and it is costly. It is also unfair because it destroys the true quality of justice.

How could a bus company know that a man was going to lurk in the ladies' room and attack someone? How could they control such a situation—unless they close the rest room. And that's against public health regulations. It is unfortunate that a young woman was attacked and suffered injuries, but to make the bus company liabile for it? Our justice is getting out of whack.

If doctors are finding it more difficult to obtain professional protection because the insurance companies have been compelled to pay tremendous awards in recent years, let's ask an objective question: who is asking for all that money in damage suits? The answer is—the public. There are those who keep telling the public that health care costs are going up because of high malpractice insurance rates. They are half correct. The other half is that high rates are necessary because the public, encouraged and urged by many in the legal profession, seeks more money and the courts, under "liberal" influence for many years, along with juries who are made up of the public, have been granting high awards.

If malpractice insurance rates have anything to do with high medical care costs, the culprits are the public, not the insurance agencies and insurance companies as the feature article stated in the News-Sentinel. The public has fallen for the sales pitch that, if an adverse result occurs, SOMEBODY ought to pay in dollars and cents. We have thrown out the fundamental of justice that guilt must be proven. In its place we have the philosophy that, if the unexpected happens, the "victim" should be paid. Even if the most highly skilled physicians, surgeons and dentists do the best job of their lives on a patient, but a bad result occurs, we look for money. That is NOT justice.

If you really want to know one of the reasons why medical and dental care costs have gone 'way up—look in the mirror.

Newman Is Good Reading

I have enjoyed many laughs recently in reading Edwin Newman's book, "Strictly Speaking." The noted TV commentator pulls no punches in showing how many of our well-known political personalities "murder" the English language. In so doing, in using "big words" and too many of them, these people have left the public more uninformed than informed, more confused than enlightened.

While the book is humorous basically, it is also serious in its undertones, since an informed public is essential to a free society. Mr. Newman rightfully puts public officials on the spot for their lack of honesty and candor in making public statements or giving "explanations." He also points out that some of these self-appointed "intellectual giants" use certain words in an entirely opposite or wrong meaning.

I highly recommend the book—for laughs —and for serious consideration about our ability to communicate with one another.

—that State Senator Thomas Teague, D-Anderson, a political science professor, has introduced a teacher "bill of rights" in the Indiana Senate. It would establish "due process' rights for probationary teachers, require that a teacher who has taught in a school system less than three years and who is to be dismissed be given written notice stating specific reason for non-renewal of contract, change the present five year minimum work for tenure status to three years and create a state teacher employment commission of seven members that would supervise the "teachers rights" provisions and handle hearings on disputes between tenure teachers and school boards that cannot be settled by negotiation between them. The Indiana State Teachers Association and the Indiana Federation of Teachers are reported to support the bill. "Tenure" means that a teacher cannot be released by the school district once the minimum tenure time has been reached, except for extreme circumstances. Under the proposed bill, therefore, a teacher would have a guaranteed position upon signing of a third contract with a school district.

—that MM Ralph Bard of Butler are parents of a son born last Thursday at DeKalb Memorial Hospital.

The true essence of freedom is not in the extent to which human rights are exercised; rather, it is in the restraint exercised in pursuing those rights.

Dissent in a free society is like the cultivation of the crops in the field. A little agitation promotes growth; too much destroys the roots.

In unity there is strength; in diversity there is freedom.

Self-discipline is a matter of courage. Anyone can do as he pleases; but it takes courage to do as one ought.

Wisdom is like good whiskey. The best of ingredients are essential; but the proof requires age.

The dissenters of the 1960's-70's sometimes point to Jesus Christ to justify their actions, claiming Him to be the greatest revolutionary of all time, attempting by such comparison to give a holy aura to their own ambitions. They overlook one thing: Jesus did not force Himself nor his teachings upon anyone. He spoke, surely, positively, then left the decision to His hearers. Thus did He grant to all men the freedom God created. Today's reformers could well be admonished, as in the Scriptures: "Go thou and do likewise."

Failures are the rungs on the ladder to success.

WITH THE EDITOR

I gave credit to the wrong parties a couple of weeks ago concerning the donors of the shepherd's staff to Ivan Brown at Christmastime. The correct givers were "the barbershop bunch," Dave Hagar, Royce Gibford, Elwood Savage, Mark Stuck and Rich Musser.

As an indication of how un-free our society is getting, legislation is being talked about in Washington to compel auto manufacturers to build cars which get a certain minimum miles per gallon. The President recently had a White House conference with auto manufacturers on the subject.

It's rather disappointing. Can't we do ANYTHING beneficial in this country any more without a law!!!

Of course, we bring it on ourselves. Detroit doesn't do anything until foreign competition sets the pace. Then the unions get all hot and bothered about foreign imports—but they've gone along with the big gas guzzlers because the bigger the car, the bigger the engine, the more gadgets—the bigger the pay check.

I've heard several comments about the layoffs in the auto industry. And one impression is prominent—most people have little sympathy for the auto workers because the factories have been putting out more cars than we need in the first place. And the auto workers have had little concern for the public when it comes to strikes and the effect on others. The general thought about layoffs for auto workers seems to be, "They have it coming."

Chili Supper

The Riverdale PTO will hold a chili supper to raise funds for anticipated projects during the coming school year. The supper will be held Friday, January 24, from 5:30 to 8:00 p.m.

Prices will be $1.25 for adults and 75 cents for children under 12 years of age.

Saint Joe Valley Homemakers

—Pat Roberts, reporter

The meeting was called to order by the president, Doris Yeiser, with the reciting of the club creed in unison.

Devotions were given by Pat Roberts. She read from II Corinthians—9. We were reminded that even though we were going through troubled times, we still have many blessings to be thankful for, and if we keep our trust in our Heavenly Father who said He would never forsake us, we will always be taken care of. So let us put our trust in Jesus and never let go of His hand. She closed devotions with prayer.

The club song of the month was led by Edith Sailer. Roll call was answered by seven members with a quotation, many great sayings from wise men were brought to life.

The president reminded us that our election of officers will be held in March. She asked all members to think about the office she could hold through the coming year lasting from July 1975 to July 1976.

The meeting closed with the prayer song.

The hostess served a delicious lunch. Then Rose Means again taught us ceramic work. She explained to us the beginning of ceramics, then gave us all an article to work on which we hope to finish at our next meeting. We all thank MM Means for the interesting lessons and the privilege of doing the work.

With busy hands and the felship of good friends, the afternoon flew swiftly by and troubled times were erased from our minds as happily we returned to our homes.

Blazers Lose Friday Game And Wednesday In ACAC Tourney

The DeKalb Eastside Blazers had what is refered to as "a bad night" last Friday, losing to Adams Central 53—25. A zone defense prompted the locals to shoot from the outside, and they were cold.

The Blazers didn't score in double figures in any quarter and came up with only two points in the final period. Quarter scores were 11—8, 25—16 and 35—23.

The reserve squad won its game 40—37 to make its record 4—9 thus far in the season.

Southern Wells outscored the DeKalb Eastside Blazers 24—9 in the final quarter Wednesday night at the Coliseum in Fort Wayne in the ACAC tourney to take a 72—57 win. However, the winners didn't pull away to a commanding lead until half of the final quarter was gone.

Southern Wells threw an all court press in the period and this caused the Blazers some trouble. The locals lost the ball on errors and suffered a cold streak in field goal and free throw shooting. All these combined to turn a close contest into a runaway.

Earlier in the game, the Blazers did trail by as much as 8 or 9 points. But they rallied and made it a see-saw game, until the final few minutes.

The Blazers made 22 of 62 field goal attempts while Southern Wells had 27 of 59. Eastside made 13 of 24 free throws while their opponents had 18 for 27.

Quarter scores were 18—17 Eastside, 33—32 Southern Wells and 48—48 tie.

To Correct A Misunderstanding

In a letter to the editor appearing in this paper last week, Mary Mathes made reference to my letter to the editor which appeared in the Auburn Evening Star recently concerning the circumstances related to the murder of Brenda Mathes and the ensuing trial and court decision. Readers of this paper may have been in the dark about some of the comments made by Mrs. Mathes because they did not know what had been said in the letter to the Star editor. Comments from another reader last week end about the matter indicate that maybe some people have an erroneous impression of my outlook in the matter. A couple of phone calls from an Auburn resident recently included remarks to the effect that "you and others in the mental health organizations get 'brainwashed' by the experts (the psychiatrists) who think they know all the answers." His comments were not in anger; rather, they were an honest expression of how things look to some people.

Inasmuch as I have been on the board of directors of the county mental health group and also the board of the Northeastern Psychiatric Center in Kendallville, there may be a feeling that the court's ruling of not guilty by reason of insanity is entirely acceptable to me. Such is not the case. Under the circumstances, it appeared there was no other verdict Judge Harold Stump could render. It seemed that "justice was done" but only as best it could be, again, under the circumstances. Because of the lack of concise laws regarding insanity, as Judge Stump pointed out later, he had only one verdict open to him. Had he rendered a verdict of guilty, there is absolutely no doubt that an appeal would have been made because of the confusion in the ranks of the psychiatric field about the state's technical definition of insanity. In all probability, a verdict of guilty would have been thrown out, on appeal.

Another point to remember is that the defense of Kenneth Pierce by attorney John Martin Smith was not for the purpose of "getting Pierce off." Mr. Smith has been active in mental health matters in the county and in the area for some time. He is also well aware when society's protection is endangered. And his defense of the accused was, in my opinion, based on humanitarian principles regarding the welfare of a human being who may not have realized the seriousness of his actions not only in this case but also in previous incidents related to young women.

So, under the circumstances, with two psychiatrists refusing to examine the accused because of their disagreement with state definitions of insanity, with the testimony of other psychiatrists who did examine the accused and said he had deep emotional problems for some time, with the need to be fair to someone who may not be mentally stable, with past court decisions in insanity pleas, Judge Stump rendered the only decision he could, to all appearances. And my observation in the letter to the Star that "justice has been done" was based ENTIRELY on the assumption that Mr. Pierce will never be left out into society again.

BUT — if, as some people fear, he is released after a year or so of "treatment" (although one of the testifying psychiatrists said Pierce may "never" be helped in his emotional conflicts), then justice will not have been done, because there would be justifiable fear of what the young man would do after his release.

Treating emotional problems is a tricky field. There is never any exact answer to any of these problems; there is never any exact prediction which can be made about such treatment. The Mathes murder is one of those unfortunate instances where "the experts" were either fooled or somebody goofed terribly, and there is nothing which can be done about the sadness and grief that resulted. The matter placed a tremendous burden on the shoulders of Judge Stump who, in my opinion, rendered the only decision he could.

It is unfortunate that a lawsuit has been filed in the matter. While I sympathize with the murdered woman's husband (who has since remarried) in the burdens placed on him (and his daughter) not only financially but also emotionally, it seems hardly fair to blame the parents and grandparents of the accused who had apparently been cooperative in past problems related to the young man. And it seems unfair to a known and respected agency in the mental health effort to cloud its reputation and burden its financial position with such a suit for monetary damages, other than actual incurred expenses.

Though I believe somebody "blew it" in this case in the treatment of Pierce by letting him out in society on an outpatient basis in view of past circumstances, we should keep in mind that with each individual, we are dealing with so many variables. And the damage suit dollar bill is not the solution to these sad experiences.

Public Pays As Congress Panics

One of my pet peeves is newspaper headlines which are either misleading or totally wrong. Another is the tendency of Congress to panic when things aren't "normal" (everything going at breakneck speed in production and pay and so on), only to act in haste and make legal something which is totally unjustified.

The two peeves were combined in the past week. A headline in the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette said: "Teachers Get Pay Warning." Warning??? They were getting plenty of notice, not warning, that they qualify for unemployment compensation under the Emergency Jobs and Unemployment Act of 1974 which the Congress passed hastily to pacify the harbingers of doom who dote on unemployment. The act includes anyone, who is not self-employed and was not covered by unemployment compensation before. Not covered are teachers who are on graduate work toward a degree during the summer and those who have summer jobs.

Ron Jensen, executive director of the Indiana State Teachers' Association, was quick to get out a news release in an attempt to counteract reports of a teacher "bonanza" in the emergency act. Even teachers who have their pay spread over 12 months for their nine months of work in the classroom can get the emergency unemployment funds. Instead of a "warning" as the headline stated, the news release was more of a rallying call as well as an attempt at justifying the act.

First report of the situation came from Regional Employment Security head John Coppes who seems to be somewhat of a public protector of a sort and a realistic administrator. Prior to his making the far-reaching elements of the emergency act known to the public last week, he earlier had stated the need for Americans to keep in mind that, while unemployment had risen recently and was something to be concerned about, it is also important to remember that some 98 million Americans are still working. And the number of employed workers goes up every year.

Unless the law is amended, teachers will be able to apply for unemployment benefits under the act at any of Indiana's 44 Employment Security offices beginning in June.

It should be noted in all fairness that some calls have been received by the ISTA office from teachers who were "mad about the unemployment because they don't want to be classified as welfare people." But—general indications are that most of those eligible will apply.

Who made this bonanza possible? Why, the Congress did. Where will the money come from? Why, from general tax revenues paid by John Q. Public.

— — — Let's see—whom did we elect to Congress last November????

Keep In Mind—

A few weeks ago President Gerald Ford asked Congress to postpone a pay raise for federal employees, as a step to slow inflation. Congress refused.

President Ford has now asked Congress to reduce a scheduled Social Security hike from 9 percent to 5 percent. Congress has indicated it will not go along with the request.

Keep these things in mind when you hear complaints about President Ford's "inaction" in fighting inflation.

New Campaign Law Usurps Free Speech

Congress so loves constitutional liberty that, aroused by Watergate, it passed the Federal Election Campaign Act Amendments of 1974. At midnight, Jan. 1, the law went into effect, and Americans' First Amendment freedoms of speech and organization were diminished by it. THE ACT IS AN UNPRECEDENTED ASSERTION OF GOVERNMENT POWER TO REGULATE POLITICAL EXPRESSION.

On Jan. 2 Sen. James Buckley, R-Con,, NY, and former Sen. Eugene McCarthy, D-Minn., and others filed suit to have the most important provisions of the law declared unconstitutional. The suit challenges (among other provisions) the limits on the amount of money a citizen can contribute to a campaign, and the limits on the amount a candidate can spend.

The suit charges that these limits are unconstitutional abridgements of freedom of expression. This charge unquestionably is correct.

Communication Limited

To the extent that large-scale communication, including political communication, is made possible only by money, limits on the giving and spending of money effectively limit such communication. And as Justice William Douglas has said:

"It usually costs money to communicate an idea to a large audience . . . The fact that it costs money to make a speech—whether it be hiring a hall or purchasing time on the air—(does not) make the speech any the less an exercise of First Amendment rights."

Political campaigns are exercises in communication. Advertising often is the largest expense of a campaign.

The Supreme Court has ruled that advertising which addresses public issues (e.g., a political candidacy) is speech within the meaning of the First Amendment. Yet abridgement of free political speech-through-advertising is the obvious intent and certain effect of the 1974 campaign reform act.

Law forbids?

Prof. Paul Freund of the Harvard Law School defends the Act's limits on giving and spending political contributions:

"We are dealing here not so much with the right of personal expression or even association, but with dollars and decibels. And just as the volume of sound may be limited by law, so the volume of dollars may be limited without violating the First Amendment."

But it is odd to argue that a law limiting campaign giving and spending is analgous to (say) a law limiting the loudness of loudspeakers.

A law that limits the giving and spending of money limits the amount of communication individuals and organizations can have with the district, state or national constituency they want to persuade. Such limits have a political purpose: the government is stipulating that it knows just the "right amount" of political communication.

But a law regulating the loudness of a loudspeaker has no political purpose. Its purpose is simply to protect individuals from the nuisance of noise they do not want to hear.

Limit demonstrations?

If the Freund defense of the new campaign giving and spending limits is valid, then there could be no valid First Amendment objection against a law limiting (say) the size of political demonstrations to 100, or limiting the numbers of demonstrations an individual can join in a year. Congress could claim that such a law did not abridge the right to petition for redress of grievances, that it only stipulated the "right amount" of demonstration "decibels."

In recent rulings concerning libelous, obscene or provocative ("fighting words") speech, the Supreme Court has continued pruning the government's power to limit expression. It is barely conceivable that the Court will sustain the campaign law's limits on political advocacy. Why, then, did Congress pass them?

Incumbents favored

The most charitable explanation is that Congressmen cannot be indignant and rational simultaneously. But, inevitably, some incorrigible cynic will note that spending limits leave untouched, and hence magnify, the importance of the many advantages (e.g., staff, Capitol Hill radio and TV studios, franking privileges, etc.) that only incumbents enjoy. Hence, the cynic will say, we should not forgive the people (incumbents all) who passed these limits; they knew exactly what they were doing.

Long after the Supreme Court has dismantled the 1974 campaign reform act, historians will be marveling about this fact: responding to the anti-constitutionalism of Watergate, Congress concocted a law that violated the First Amendment more systematically and comprehensively than the Alien and Sedition acts did.

The true essence of freedom is not in the extent to which human rights are exercised; rather, it is in the restraint exercised in pursuing those rights.

Dissent in a free society is like the cultivation of the crops in the field. A little agitation promotes growth; too much destroys the roots.

In unity there is strength; in diversity there is freedom.

Self-discipline is a matter of courage. Anyone can do as he pleases; but it takes courage to do as one ought.

Wisdom is like good whiskey. The best of ingredients are essential; but the proof requires age.

The dissenters of the 1960's-70's sometimes point to Jesus Christ to justify their actions, claiming Him to be the greatest revolutionary of all time, attempting by such comparison to give a holy aura to their own ambitions. They overlook one thing: Jesus did not force Himself nor his teachings upon anyone. He spoke, surely, positively, then left the decision to His hearers. Thus did He grant to all men the freedom God created. Today's reformers could well be admonished, as in the Scriptures: "Go thou and do likewise."

Failures are the rungs on the ladder to success.

Rapid Progress Made In Building Of New Branch Bank Facility

Workers from Lane Builders are changing the complexion of the main street in Saint Joe, almost by the hour. Once the site for Knisely National Bank's Saint Joe branch had been inspected and staked out, progress was by leaps and bounds.

The 25x60 building now going up will house complete banking facilities, including a driveup window. The exterior will be finished with brick.

The accompanying photos indicate the rapid progress made by Lane Builders, Even as this was written, sidewalls and rafters were going up on the foundation.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Ted:

First thank you for taking the time to print our Christmas letter. Then Maurice appreciated your letter very much, Ted, only wish it could have been earlier, but, feel good results will come from its contents another year.

Now if you have time to listen, Ted, would like to tell you of a problem that our parish will try to solve in our church this summer—namely what to do with our brick parsonage. What brought the matter to a head was a motion by one of our members to demolish the old parsonage and turn it into a parking lot!— — — something we definitely do not need in Spencerville—because as you well know, we have the whole town street, Laube, Chaneys, Timmermans, etc.—also, community lot—all in short and easy walking distance to the church—that is for the members that live far away and must drive. But now it seems that even that is too far in this day and age. Of course, quite a few of us walk—something I can do and enjoy—and probably walk the greatest distance of anyone. I remember a few years ago a faithful family walked 2 miles to church and home again.

As our churches continue to grow we may each need a parsonage, therefore, feel ours should be restored regardless of the cost—it is one of the few remaining landmarks outside of our church—St. Peter—I feel that time and experience have taught me that years and use actually increase the worth—especially our parsonage with its rich heritage—a new one in Spencerville could never replace or have the true value of the old.

The faith of our fathers is handed to us laden with both treasure and trash, good and bad hymns, commendable and atrocious practices, priceless and worthless literature. In the words above Jesus reminds us that living in the Kingdom involves the continuous process of drawing together the treasures of the past and the present. Ours is the task of preserving the best and purging the worst.

Today, "hate what is evil, hold fast to what is good"—Amos 5: 15.

Thank you, Ted, for listening to me and I believe you think as I do.

Sincerely,
Janice Hollabaugh

Though the above letter is somewhat personal, the writer asked specifically to have it published in this paper. —Ed.

DAR News

Mrs. Everett Allen and Mrs. Virgil Cowan were hostesses at the January meeting of the John Houlton Chapter DAR held at the home of Mrs. Allen.

Mrs. Calvin Carnahan, Regent, opened the meeting with the regular ritual which was followed by the pledge of allegiance. She read the President General's message for the month.

Mrs. Ernest Harter gave the National Defense Report, predominantly concerning population growth and its "race" with hunger. The countries which already have hunger problems are also the very ones which have the greatest population growth and seemingly feel that their population rate is their own business and have no responsibility to put population into proportion to food supply.

Mrs. Cowan reported that clothing was ready to be sent in the Indian clothing project.

Mrs. Carnahan said that all information for American History Month concerning grades 5, 6, 7 and 8 as well as JAC and Scholarship information has been sent to the schools.

It was decided that members should contact the local libraries and prepare a display for American History Month for each library.

There was much discussion concerning projects for and funding of projects for the nation's bicentennial with different members to research and find needed information.

Mrs. David Bowes, chairman of Genealogical Records, reported she had just completed and sent to the state office 13 pages of Bible records.

The nominating committee is composed of Mrs. Bowes, Mrs. Harter, Mrs. James Roberts and Mrs. John Martin Smith.

The meeting closed with The American's Creed.

BANKING IS EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

A Gold Investment—Will It Tarnish?

Gold bullion is coming back—for the first time since 1933 when Congress banned private ownership of gold other than coins or jewelry. With President Ford's signature on a bill lifting that ban beginning Jan. 1, 1975, and the option open, would a gold investment pay off, or is it likely to tarnish beyond repair?

As an investment, says the American Bankers Association (ABA), it's wise to remember that gold is a commodity; and consequently is subject to rapid and extreme ups and downs. True, it's a scarce commodity; and theoretically, there is no limit to how much it could one day be worth. In fact, it has been estimated that all the gold ever found could be condensed into a cube the size of a baseball diamond.

It's only been in the past three years, however, that the increase in the price of gold has justified its historic reputation as the best hedge against inflation in this country—where there's no real fear that the dollar will become totally worthless and the government will fall.

From 1935 to 1971, the official price for an ounce of gold was $35. It was not until 1968 that speculators' pressure on the dollar led to a "two-tier" gold market—with the price of privately traded gold allowed to fluctuate with the market. The official price between governments has since been raised once to $38 an ounce, and again to $42.22.

Beginning in 1971, with the rate of inflation increasing, private demand for gold grew, and its market price went as high as $180. Today it's down around $140 an ounce. Potential investors would be wise, therefore, to watch the market and buy low, rather than be caught up in a first day stampede. After all, a gold bar pays no dividends and no interest. Its only return is in the form of capital appreciation.

Is there any indication that gold will appreciate in the foreseeable future? The ABA, many of whose 14,000 member banks have indicated they will offer gold bullion for sale as a service to their customers, says it's a very "iffy" question.

If Americans rush to buy when the ban is lifted, the price of gold could surge—providing rapid short-term gains. But, on the other hand, the recently expected increase in demand for gold coins never materialized. And the U.S. Treasury has already announced that if the price of gold were to rise substantially, it would consider selling some of its $11.7 billion stockpile, which would level off prices—and might even drive them down.

The best advice from the ABA is to watch the track record, buy low and only from a reputable dealer. And if you do, get certification of exactly what you have bought.

The true essence of freedom is not in the extent to which human rights are exercised; rather, it is in the restraint exercised in pursuing those rights.

Dissent in a free society is like the cultivation of the crops in the field. A little agitation promotes growth; too - much destroys the roots.

In unity there is strength; in diversity there is freedom.

Self-discipline is a matter of courage. Anyone can do as he pleases; but it takes courage to do as one ought.

Wisdom is like good whiskey. The best of ingredients are essential; but the proof requires age.

The dissenters of the 1960's-70's sometimes point to Jesus Christ to justify their actions, claiming Him to be the greatest revolutionary of all time, attempting by such comparison to give a holy aura to their own ambitions. They overlook one thing: Jesus did not force Himself nor his teachings upon anyone. He spoke, surely, positively, then left the decision to His hearers. Thus did He grant to all men the freedom God created. Today's reformers could well be admonished, as in the Scriptures: "Go thou and do likewise."

Failures are the rungs on the ladder to success.

Ernie Goldner Wins Cub Scout Rocket Race

—Judy Parker, reporter

"Cape" Spencerville Community Building was the launch site for Cub Scout Pack 3172 and its Space Derby Friday, January 31.

18 boys in all competed in the heat races for fastest rockets. After 13 elimination races, excitement was high as only four boys were left still in the race. Mike Gettys raced Louis Ortiz and Ernie Goldner raced Scott Seiler to see which two boys would race for the championship.

Participation ribbons were given to Scott Richardson, Gilbert Ortiz, Dick Tejan, Duane Snyder, Frank Scott, Fred Rhoades, Andy Bowyer, Randy Miller and Brian Strong.

Third place ribbons went to Stuart Hood, Bob Gettys, Jeff Parker and Barry Ross.

Second place ribbons went to Mike Gettys and Scott Seiler.

Runnerup ribbon went to Louis Ortiz and the first place championship trophy for the fastest rocket went to Ernie Goldner, a Cub Scout for just one week.

Rockets were then judged on overall best design. Mike Gettys was the winner.

Refreshments of orange drink and pop corn were served. As a surprise for Louis Ortiz, Betty baked a birthday cake for all to share.

Thanks to Byron Richardson for handling the registration, Tom Parker for lineup, Tom Gettys and John Swihart as windup men, Walt Miller for serving as starter, John Scott for serving as flagman, Ben Rhoades for the rocket garage and Ed Seiler and Bud Strong as mechanics—and several frantic mothers for their help.

The Cubs agreed it was a neat night.

Universal Gives Boost To Sales

Universal Tool & Stamping Company of Butler has instigated a two-step plan to alleviate the distressed condition of the auto industry. It's goal is aimed directly to the local level, but indirectly should help the entire economy.

During the month of February, employees of Universal will recevie a $100 cash bonus for a new car or truck purchase. The bonus covers cars or trucks manufactured by or distributed by General Motors, Ford Motors, Chrysler Corp. or American Motors.

The second step involves an agreement with Maxton Motors of Butler that during the period February 1—14, Universal employees will enjoy a special discount price on most of the cars in present stock at Maxton's.

Management of Maxton Motors and Universal are enthusiastic over the prospect of the benefits to their employees and the industry in general.

Tax Cut Seems A Mistake

A few weeks ago, Edward Schantz, minister of the Saint Joe Church of Christ, gave me a copy of a magazine. It is a new publication, contains no advertising, devotes each issue to but one subject. This particular issue deals with inflation. The magazine is a collection of articles, opinions in complete or condensed form according to original length, to give all sides of the particular subject contained in the issue.

I haven't finished it yet, but have better than half of it read. The other day, the pastor stopped in and I asked him what his general reaction or impression was of the many articles contained in the issue on inflation. His reply was something like, "Well, they have some different ideas in some respects; but the overall impression I got was that we are doing everything wrong today." I was gratified to hear that reply, because it was exactly the impression and conclusion that I have reached in my reading thus far. And the primary "wrong" thing is deficit spending.

It makes me wonder. How many other Americans, regardless of party affiliation, are leery of the "emergency" measures being proposed and undertaken at the present time? How many other Americans are amazed that tax cuts are in the making when we are going into debt farther and farther each day at the national level? How many other Americans wonder how giving tax rebates or increasing deductions can help to correct our economic woes?

The headline in the daily paper the other evening told of a budget deficit of $52 billion for 1976. Other statements indicated that the deficit could be even higher, if revenues fall off, as they might. It makes me wonder what in the world our elected representatives in the Congress, in both parties, are thinking about when they talk about such over-spending so matter-of-factly. So far, I have heard of only one voice disagreeing with the proposed budget. That voice is that of Senator Barry Goldwater who this week said he disliked differing with the President, but he couldn't see how a budget with such a deficit could be tolerated. I don't know that he offered any exact solutions, possibly because such solutions come back to one thing and one thing alone — that the government quit spending so much. But just try to do something about it with the present Congress.

President Ford asked that a federal pay raise be held off last fall to help slow inflation. Senator Henry Jackson as I recall said that government workers should not be the ones to carry the load in cutting back. What he did not seem to understand is that such a movement must begin SOMEWHERE. He also overlooked the fact that government workers receive more pay and benefits than their counterparts in private business. The President's request was ignored by the Congress.

President Ford proposed a 5 per cent surtax on joint incomes over $15,000 and single incomes over $7,500. What a howl that raised from—of all people— many Democrats in Congress who dote on taxing higher incomes with higher taxes. Even with the comparatively few dollars involved in such a surtax, the fuss was so loud and long that the idea has been abandoned by the President.

The President now proposes that an increase in Social Security benefits be held to 5 per cent and that those who purchase food stamps pay more for them. Once again he is opposed by the majority in Congress who use these two areas of emotional involvement to thwart the President's efforts. The opposition in Congress says we shouldn't hit those on retirement and disability income—but they forget that Social Security benefits in the past five years have gone up substantially MORE than the cost of living, according to the New York Times News Service. So, in reality, the President doesn't propose to "hit" the elderly and the disabled; he proposes to level off the expenditures of government to deter inflation.

The opposition in Congress says it would be cruel to make those who buy food stamps pay more, without explaining why—or how—you can have others paying more but not those who get federal assistance through food stamps and increased welfare income.

A panel of economic "experts" has been available to the Presidency in recent months. One of the "experts" is Sylvia Porter whose syndicated column appears in daily newspapers across the country. The other morning, her column was headed something like, "Budget Deficits Not Necessarily Bad." Oh no? Then why are we coming out on the short end all the way around with deficits? Why aren't we in better shape economically?

And through it all comes the recurring fact —not just opinion but fact—that government involvement in problem areas ALWAYS increases the problem—and the expense. We have not solved one single problem for any social or economic group through government programs and left individual rights, responsibilities and privileges intact. Yet, we go on and on, time after time, submitting to programs and legislation for this and that crisis only to find that such efforts have no lasting good effect. It is quite the opposite.

Tax cuts in the face of a $52 billion deficit in 1976? We must be crazy.

Super Star Super Baloney

I saw one of the funniest programs ever a couple of Sundays ago on TV. Well, actually, I saw only part of the program; I could only take a bit at one time. And I heard some of the funniest lines ever from a TV announcer who, to my knowledge, does not ordinarily dabble in comedy.

The program I refer to is the one where a bunch of women were running races and throwing balls and this and that in a "sporting event" similar to the one put on with male athletes from all different sports. One of the women was shooting baskets just as I stopped in front of the TV, and I started laughing. The gal made a layup shot, then stepped back a bit farther and made another shot, then stepped back farther and missed a shot, then stepped back even farther for a long shot, displaying an awkward form you would naturally expect from someone unfamiliar with handling a basketball. Lucky shot—she made it.

The TV camera quickly focused into the spectators to show tennis queen Billie Jean King clapping and jumping with delight at the success of the other woman on the basketball court. It was delightful to see someone getting paid for having such fun.

The comedy line used most by the announcer was the one in which he enthusiastically pointed out to the watching TV audience that they were viewing "super stars" in action. I nearly split on that.

Son Phil asked me, "Do you know how much they have riding in this tournament?" I said, "No—and don't tell me." I knew I could take only so much comedy at a time.

But I quit laughing a couple of days later when I saw the Auburn Evening Star with a photo of volleyball professional Mary Jo Peppler with a big trophy which went along with the $49,000 in prize money she received for winning the "Women's Superstars." The story said she hadn't had to file income tax for the past four years but will this year because of her big winnings.

A professional volleyball player but she hasn't had income tax for four years????? Super star????? $49,000 for getting the most points in competing in physical activities in which she is a novice?????

Well, maybe it is kind of funny after all—especially when you stop to think that there are millions who are "entertained" by watching others get a lot of money for doing something in which the participants have no unusual skills. And the viewer may be having a tough time making ends meet nowadays, but is entertained by watching both professionals and non-professionals make more money in a day or two than the viewer will make in five years.

Yep—come to think of it, that really is funny. I can hardly contain myself.

Others say. . . .

Ode To A Farmer

What is a farmer? Well, he's a big man—or a small man. He comes in all assorted shapes and sizes. Happy, sad — wide and lean.

A farmer is tomorrow's breakfast, with a grin on his face. He carries nations on his shoulders, and holds the earth in his hands—and lives by the sun and the rain.

He's America riding a tractor! Democracy wearing a straw hat! A farmer is freedom, holding a hoe—and the future of the world in a pair of blue overalls.

What is a farmer? Well, armies march on his muscles, cities eat on his labors. Politicians promise him things, bankers respect him and middlemen live off him.

He's a farmer! He's a strong and gentle man. Strong enough to challenge nature itself, and gentle enough to caress a newborn calf with loving hands.

He's a day laborer and capitalist—handyman and boss—toolmaker, mechanic—veterinarian, salesman—purchasing agent, production manager—weather forecaster—AND GOOD NEIGHBOR.

He's the meat and potatoes of a nation — he's the ham and eggs on the menu at the restaurant—he's Halloween pumpkin and cold watermelons at a Fourth of July picnic —he's the turkey and yams on a Thanksgiving Day dinner table.

He's a farmer. He's a gambler. He throws his seed like dice on a giant gambling table of land. He bets his muscles and his knowhow on the heat of the sun and the turn of a rain cloud.

He's America's best customer, the world's most constant hope—the most useful man in the nation! He's a farmer!

The meeting was opened by president Audrey Wilmot who greeted the nine members present and thanked Lela for having us in her home.

Ida Reed had the opening number for the day and gave a review of past and present Presidents of our country. She also had pictures that were very interesting as she talked about the man, of days gone by. She selected the six greats and did reports on special men from Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Wilson, Roosevelt and some of the highlights of their years in the White House. She closed with the very fitting poem, "A Man Called Lincoln."

Secretary's report was read and approved. Treasurer's report was approved. Roll call was answered with presidents' wives.

Marjie Dwyer read a letter from Bernice Wilder. They must be keeping very busy with garden and all kinds of hand work. Harriett Hood had sent a Valentine greeting to the club members.

Oddly enough, a major college football team once played all its home games in another state! The University of Idaho's stadium had a fire in 1969, and in that season, and in 1970, Idaho moved all their home games to the town of Pullman, Washington. That's only about 10 miles from Idaho's campus, but it is in another state.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Indiana Senator Birth Bayh sent out a two page news release last week denouncing President Ford's request for a lower Social Security benefit increase and an increase in the price of food stamps. The Senator then failed to vote on the latter—as did also Senator Vance Hartke.
Neither one voted on a major rail aid bill recently, though Senator Hartke has been loud in his voicing the need for improving the nation's railroads. He has been on a transportation committee for some time. Then Senator Bayh issued a news release this week telling how fortunate it is that he has been put on the transportation committee and can thus be of greater help!

Marie Meese Called last week to say that the photo brought in by Lois Strombeck is at least 70 years old. As a little girl, she and a friend gathered chips at the saw mill for two old ladies living near by who used the chips for heating purposes.

I failed to give Dick Roberts credit last week for bringing in the photo of Kenny Roberts and Bob Stiver doing some cleanup work in town.

No, I haven't given up on the "Community Appreciation Banquet" such as we had last year. It was held on Friday, February 22, last year purposely to relate to our American heritage and the special place February has as the birth month of Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

Frank Sechler suggested after the get-together last year that a lot of folks interested in such a program are wintering in Florida and can't make it for a February date. So, I'm going along with his suggestion and holding off until a later date.

So, keep it in mind. And if you have any ideas on improving the idea, let me know.

Methodist Plan Heritage Dinner

The public is invited to attend.

Limited Postal Service Feb. 17

Mail will be received as usual at the Saint Joe Post Office, according to Postmaster George Armstrong. The post office lobby will be open from 7 to 9 am for lock box patrons to pick up their mail.

There will be no window service and no rural delivery on that day.

Shelley's parents are MM DuWayne Richmond. She plays first clarinet in the DeKalb Eastside High School Band under director Richard Foster.

The invitation to join the organization was received from Professor Al G. Wright, director of bands at Purdue University at West Lafayette, conductor of the collegiate band. The associate conductor, Gladys Wright, is the founding president of the Women Band Directors National Association.

Band membership is limited to a maximum of 95 college wind instrumentalists and mature senior high school band students.

The collegiate band will travel from July 25 to August 14 in England, Belgium, France, Germany, Italy and Switzerland. Concerts will be given in London, Paris, Lucerne, Altdorf, Florence, Milan and Venice.

The group will assemble in New York City for rehearsals prior to its July departure. In New York the group will play an invitational concert at the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts.

Bike Riding Yes - License No

State Representative Dr. Floyd B. Coleman of Waterloo was pictured this week riding a bicycle to the Indiana General Assembly, to draw attention to his proposal for an annual $3.00 bicycle license fee in the state, with revenues from the fees to go toward bike trails and routes and their upkeep. A previous suggestion that 1% of state highway funds be used for such purposes has not received much support.

While Dr. Coleman's proposal contains a provision that young cyclists be taxed at one-half the suggested $3.00 for adults, and thus seemingly gives the kids a "break," there would still be the fact that we burden our citizens at an early age with a tax in the form of a license fee. Some might say, "That's a good idea—it starts the kids early on learning their responsibilities." I say, "It's not good—it indoctrinates them at an early age into the idea that they must submit to the state." I can't get enthused about the bike license proposal—for adults as well as young people—because we are more and more inclined to think of revenue in seemingly everything we do. Can't we even ride a bike anymore without having to pay for it? Can't we do ANYTHING anymore "for free"? Is it in the American tradition to place a tax burden on virtually every activity the private citizen engages in, from business to pleasure?

There are no doubts about the benefits to be gained from riding bikes. It's a healthy thing to do. I've done it for years in running errands around town. And I have gotten some funny looks in years past for doing it — like "What's the matter, isn't your car working?" Our society has become so comfort and convenience-oriented that, until recently, an adult riding a bicycle was almost a sign of eccentricity. It took air pollution and gasoline "shortages" to bring greater use of bicycles, and those of us who were "odd" a few years ago for riding bikes aren't so "odd" now. Bike riding is fashionable; what some of us have done for a long time, in recognition of its pleasure and benefits, is now "in."

I'm all for any program, including bike riding, which will lead people to greater physical activity; it's for their own good. But they shouldn't be penalized for it; I can't go along with the idea of licensing bicycles. In the land of the free, there is a certain amount of activity which we have a right to enjoy without having to pay a fee for it. Our kids are faced soon enough with tax burdens as it is. I believe we owe them the opportunity to do certain things without the red tap of licensing and paying a fee.

So, as far as riding a bike is concerned, I'm all for it. But as for licensing bicycles, I'm an "aginner." We're entitled to do some things without owing the state even a token fee or tax. This is a matter of principle, if you ask me, and we're long overdue in sticking to principles.

Whether you agree with me or not, why not drop Doc Coleman a line and tell him what you think.

On Sloppy English

If we wonder sometimes why the quality of American occupational efforts is getting lower all the time (or so it often seems), perhaps it might be well to consider that the civil rights emphasis in recent years is at the center of the problem. All too often nowadays, jobs are being filled not by qualified individuals but by those who would like to do a certain job and they have a "right" to do what they want; talent and training become secondary. Or the applicant MUST be hired because he or she is a Negro or because a woman wants the job and the employer MUST hire her to protect "equal opportunity."

One of the areas of widespread diminishing quality is in the field of radio and television news reporting. The mispronunciation of of words is a daily occurrence in those media. In newspapers the problem is spelling, phrasing, hyphenating, headlining with the correct content of the story, and so on—other than the occasional typographical errors which are not caught and corrected.

There are some slips of paper around the News Office on which I have jotted down radio and TV newscasters' "goofs" in pronunciation. But they are scattered throughout several piles of other notes and clippings, and I'm not going to take time to hunt for them. So, I'll just mention some of the errors off the top of my head. Why be concerned? Because anyone using the English language as a basic element of their vocation ought to know what they're talking about. So here goes; see if you recognize any of them.

"Vehicle" — the "h" is silent; it's not "vee HIK kl," it's "VEE eh kl." But if you're talking about the type of traffic, then the "h" IS heard and it becomes "vee HIK kular."

"Negotiate" has no "see" in it, even though former Fort Wayne star newscaster Ken Kurtz put it there and other announcers in the area copied him. The word is "ne GO she ate," not "ne GO see ate." Stephanie Shelton on national CBS news is also guilty of using improper pronunciation of that word. She also throws in, or did recently, an extra "s" in "statistics." The word is not "stas TIS tiks," it's "sta TIS tiks." Many people make the same error.

In recent months, the word "junta" has been in the news. And I was all set to jump on those announcers who pronounced the "j" like a "j" for "JUN ta." I thought it was "HUUN ta" but upon looking in the Readers Digest encyclopedic dictionary found that I was wrong—or half wrong. The first pronunciation is correct; the second is the Spanish pronunciation.

Two other words that have caused difficulties (with me included) are "respiratory" and "Caribbean." On investigation, I found that both words have two acceptable pronunciations (assuming that Readers Digest knows what it's talking about). It can be "res PIRE eh tory" or "RES per eh tory." It can be "CARE eh BE en" or "ca RIB ee en."

"Mischievous" often comes out "mis CHEEV vee us" instead of "MIS chev us."

"Tarpaulin" often comes out "tar PO lee en" instead of "tar PO lin" or "TAR peh lin."

In addition to mispronunciations, there seems to have crept in, in recent years, an inclination to give emphasis to the first syllable of a word. The other day we heard about "INsurance" on the radio. Fort Wayne announcers have an inclination to call a suburb "NEW Haven." In the sports world, football has corrupted "de FENSE" to "DE fense" and "off FENSE" to "OFF fense." There isn't room to go into what Howard Cosell has done to the language.

Why be so "picky"? Well, man's biggest problem—other than woman—always has been communication. Loose use of our language leads to misunderstandings. Misunderstandings lead to conflicts. Our first goal in education ought to be proper use of our language, not vocational training. The person who knows the language and how to use it (without being a smart-aleck about it) seldom, if ever, has trouble fulfilling the basic obligations of whatever vocation he or she may choose.

The idea behind the above thoughts on the use of the language is to challenge everyone to a higher degree of excellence. But my approach is 'way out of step with the course being set by English teachers. Newspaper Enterprise Association reported in the Tuesday edition of the Auburn Evening Star as follows:

"At their annual convention in New Orleans, members of the National Council of Teachers of English (NCTE) decided that the new English usage section of the Scholastic Aptitude Test is 'linguistically invalid' and should be dispensed with.

"As reported by Education USA newsletter, the teachers agreed that the new test attempts to 'limit students' linguistic expression to an arbitrarily established correct form.'

"Horror of horrors. But that's not all. This 'superficial concept of "correctness" ' is racially and socially biased, the NCTE found, because it excludes the dialects of millions of students. This is especially distressing since the new test is used around the country to determine college admissions and placement in English courses.

"Bye-bye Shakespeare. Bye-bye Declaration of Independence and Gettysburg address. Junk everything else that represents an 'arbitrarily established literary standard and 'superficial concept of "correctness".' And we certainly can't deny anyone college admission just because he don't talk English so good, or expect him to take a remedial rather than an advanced English course.

"Whatever happened to the 'quest for excellence' the educators were urging on us a few years back? Obviously, it ain't no more."

Note that these educational "experts" appear to equate "correctness" with "dialect." That's like adding apples and oranges—and coming up with bananas.

Who suffers? The taxpayers who shell out the billions for "education" — but more significantly, the student, who doesn't get what he or she is entitled to.

What's the problem—lack of money, as the teachers always say? No. The problem is more far-out ideas from education "experts."

Blazers Split 4

Over the past two weekends the DeKalb Eastside Blazers won a pair and lost a pair. A week ago last Friday, Prairie Heights thumped the locals 82—60 hitting on 35 of 68 fielders. The Blazers got only 24 of 67 shots for a cold 36 percent.

Tom Hollabaugh had 16, Steve Bellamy 14 and Rick Rinard 10, the only ones in double figures.

The next night, Steve Bellamy scored a layup with only seconds to go to give the Blazers a 58—56 win over the Carroll Chargers. The Chargers won the recent ACAC tourney at Fort Wayne.

Rinard led scoring with 14, Hollabaugh had 13, Bellamy 12 and Brian Conway 10 to lead the scoring. Both teams had 24 field goals, the winning margin coming on 10 of 14 free throw attempts while the Chargers got 8 out of 14.

Then last Friday the Blazers hosted Garrett and saw a close game go to the visitors with only seconds remaining 60—59.

The Blazers outscored Garrett from the field 22—15, but committed 28 fouls in trying to keep the Railroaders from scoring. The visitors sank 30 free throws to but 15 for the Blazers and that overcame the field goal disadvantage for Garrett.

The Blazers' record is now 6—10. They play Hamilton and DeKalb Central at home this coming week end.

The articles referred to are related to Senator Joan Gubbins' efforts to gain for parents a voice in removing from school textbook lists those texts which many parents consider corrupting and immoral.

And Senator Gubbins IS having difficulty in getting her proposals out of committee and before the General Assembly. —Ed.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

I finally got around to getting subscription renewals up to date last week. They had accumulated for six months! So, the expiration date next to your name this week is the up to date expiration. If I goofed any, let me know.

Things I like to hear about department—the Morrs are a family again, Norman and Joan re-tying the knot a couple of weeks ago.

Three From EHS Advance In Art Contest

Dennis Thacker, Bonnie Graham and Melody Fisher of DeKalb Eastside High School have advanced to the finals of the National Scholastic Art Awards Contest. The three students will now have their entries judged in New York, competing with students from all over the country.

There were 1250 entries from 41 schools in the Northeastern Indiana Regional Exhibition sponsored by L. S. Ayres Company and the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel, held last week end.

Dennis won as a "Gold Key Finalist" while Melody and Bonnie were winners in the "Hallmark Award" category.

Bonnie also competed as a "Gold Key Finalist."

Honorable mention awards were won by Mark Miner and Bonnie Stevenson.

Centennial Plates Can Be Ordered

St. Mark Lutheran Church at Saint Joe will observe its 100th birthday this year. The congregation was founded in August of 1875.

Plans are being formulated for the centennial observance in May. One of the projects is a centennial plate which has a color painting of the church as the focal point. The cost of the plates is $5 each. Orders are being taken now from congregational members and from any other friends of the church who might wish to obtain one.

Order blanks are available in the church vestibule and at Brown Furniture & Hardware in Saint Joe. Deadline for ordering is March 15.

Order blanks should be filled in and given or sent to Opal Mason, Jeri Sechler or Penny Sechler. Telephone orders will not be taken. Those who order will be notified when the shipment is received.

Bloodmobile Coming

Delores Hicov has announced that the Bloodmobile will be at the Riverdale School this year on Friday, March 21, from 1 to 6 pm.

Anyone 17 years of age and older is eligible to donate blood, subject to certain restrictions concerning current medication and past medical history.

A request has been made for new donors to participate in the program, in addition to those who have donated in the past. There were 69 blood users from the Riverdale area in 1974, according to Mrs. Hicov, and their withdrawals from the blood bank were replaced by local donors last year.

It is expected that there will be a heavier demand for blood this year and this means that new and additional donors will be greatly appreciated.

Injuries Are Serious

Mary E. (Betty) Rediger of Saint Joe, who was seriously injured Wednesday of last week at a railroad crossing west of Spencerville, is confined at Parkview Memorial Hospital in Fort Wayne where she was taken after treatment at DeKalb Memorial Hospital. Her room number is 425.

Mrs. Rediger suffered a multiple skull fracture, severe cuts to the scalp, several broken and dislocated fingers and a puncture wound to the thigh.

When she drove across the track, her attention was diverted to a railroad repair crew and she did not see the northbound freight train which hit her car broadside. Mrs. Rediger is employed at Rhinehart's and was just leaving work when the accident occurred.

Hollabaugh-Baker

Donna Baker and Parks Hollabaugh of Saint Joe were united in marriage Saturday at St. Peter Lutheran Church in Spencerville. Rev. Dennis Kuchera led the exchange of vows.

Donna is a teacher in the DeKalb eastern school district and Parks is a semi driver for Sechler's Pickles.

A reception was held Saturday evening at the Spencerville Community Building. Adding to the festivities of the evening was music by Ren Thomas and his combo.

Style Bridge

Spencerville Community Club ladies are planning a Style Bridge to be held Friday, April 4, at the community building.

The "Stretch & Sew" firm of Fort Wayne will present the style show starting at 7:30 pm.

The admission price will be $1.50 per person and there will be an advance sale of tickets by ladies of the club. Door prizes will be awarded during the evening.

Retta Hathaway

Funeral services were held at the Johnson Funeral Home in Butler Saturday for Retta Florence Hathaway, 97, who died at Meadow Haven Nursing Home Thursday. She had resided at the home for two years. Her home had been on Green Street in Butler before she went to the nursing home.

Mrs. Hathaway was born at Spencerville September 7, 1877, the daughter of Melvin and Emma Ayers Bishop. She married Henry C. Hathaway in Spencerville December 27, 1898, and the couple then moved to Saint Joe. While living at Saint Joe, the couple had two sons, Russell of Cleveland who survives and Clayton B., Sr., who preceded his mother in death. Mrs. Hathaway's husband also preceded her in death.

Surviving grandchildren include Dr. William and Dr. Clayton B., Jr., of Auburn, Pastor Bruce Hathaway of Toledo, Margaret Hathaway who is instructor of nurses at Parkview Memorial Hospital in Fort Wayne, Dr. Harvey Hathaway of West Palm Beach, Florida, David of Berea, Ohio, Melvin of Zanesville, Ohio, and Shirley Kranstauber of Sarasota, Florida. 15 great grandchildren also survive.

Rev. Steven Archer, pastor of St. Mark Lutheran Church at Butler, officiated at the funeral service. Burial was in Riverside Cemetery at Saint Joe.

Blazers Split

The sectional basketball tourney pairings at DeKalb Central for next week include Hamilton vs DeKalb Central at 7 pm Wednesday, and Prairie Heights vs DeKalb Eastside at 8:30 pm.

The Thursday games are Garrett vs Fremont at 7 pm and Leo vs Angola at 8:30 pm.

Tourney season tickets will go on sale Friday at the high school. Price is $5. Eastside has 466 tickets as its allotment.

Tom Hollabaugh sank 12 of 15 free throw attempts Friday on the DeKalb Eastside Blazers' home court to lead his team to a 56—45 win over Hamilton. He also had 7 field goals for a point total of 26. The Blazers canned 20 of 30 free throw attempts and that was the victory margin as both teams had 18 field goals but Hamilton sank only 9 of 17 charity tosses.

Quarter scores were 14—10 Hamilton, 22—18 Eastside and 37—25 Eastside.

Steve Bellamy had 13 points on 5 fielders and 3 free throws.

Saturday night the Blazers got within 3 points of the DeKalb Central Barons with 54 seconds to go after having been behind by 11 points just before the end of the third period 45—34.

However, the Barons managed to hang on and ended with a 58—52 win.

Hollabaugh had another 26-point game on 9 fielders and 8 free throws. Rick Rinard had 12 on 4 fielders and 4 free throws and Gary Randel scored 10 points on 4 field goals and a pair of free throws.

The difference in the score was the reverse of the night before. This time each team had the same number of free throws, 14, but the Barons outscored the Blazers from the field 22—19.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

Thank you for sending me a copy of the editorial concerning the educational area with which I have been so deeply involved.

I have read several of your editorials on education and found them truthful and very refreshing.

I personally want to tell you how much I appreciate your help in trying to change the modern trend in education by informing your readers.

Little Hoosiers

—Cindy Bissell, secretary

The Riverdale Little Hoosiers held their monthly meeting in the Riverdale Cafetorium Tuesday, February 11. Dr. Vincent Westfall, a Fort Wayne historian and past president of the Allen County-Fort Wayne Historical Society, was a guest at our meeting.

The business discussed included our State Convention Project, Little Hoosier Summer Camp, and Antique Day. Tona Shimaberry was elected our candidate for Statewide Council. Daniel Farrer and Cindy Bissell had on display some rubber toys which had been made by Auburn Rubber Company a number of years ago.

Attempted Breakin, Fire Are '1-2'

Just before a fire call was made Thursday night for the Bill Quinn residence, sheriff's deputies were summoned to Saint Joe to investigate another attempted breakin at the Rainbow Farm Center.

The would-be thieves were bold in their efforts, discovered sometime between 7 and 7:30 pm by John Swihart, an employee at the farm center who had stopped at the local grocery before heading toward the farm center.

When the intruders saw the approaching car, they jumped into their vehicle, described as light green with an Ohio license, and sped away from the scene, forcing the Swihart car from the road.

The Saint Joe Volunteer Fire Department was called to the Bill Quinn residence at the west end of Saint Joe last Thursday night to extinguish a roof blaze. The residence is the former Stewart property.

The family was unaware of the fire which was seen first by Richard Musser, a neighbor to the east of the Quinn home.

Extensive damage was done to the roof by the fire, with additional damage coming from the water needed to douse the fire.

Social Security - 'Secure'?

In the past several months, I had noted that syndicated columnists were from time to time commenting on the Social Security system and the financial crisis it was facing in the not too distant future. Former California Governor Ronald Reagan made some pointed remarks, also, about the matter and made comparisons of costs which ought to have jolted the public—or at least the members of national news media who are always looking for a choice tidbit. But nothing happened. I guess Social Security is regarded by many like God, Mother and Country.

However, in the past few weeks, news reports—not opinions expressed in syndicated columns—but news reports have appeared, pointing out that Social Security cannot pay increasing benefits to increasing numbers of eligible citizens without some increasing source of revenue.

The reports had their effect. They brought a response from five former HEW (Health, Education and Welfare) secretaries and three former Social Security commissioners who said that Social Security is "sound and healthy." BUT—at the same time they conceded that inflation is causing benefits to outrun the additional income coming from higher wages. They said income for Social Security would require an increase of 10 to 15 percent over the next 25 years. That's "sound and healthy"???

What does that mean, in plain everyday talk? It means that when I become eligible for Social Security at age 65, there will not be enough money to pay the benefits now received by those who have contributed at the maximum rate thus far. That is, there will not be enough money to pay—UNLESS my sons and grandchildren and YOUR sons and daughters and grandchildren are willing to have more taken out of their pay checks percentagewise than is now deducted. In other words, to put it bluntly, we are on the threshhold of throwing our offspring into the big benefits-liability pot most accurately labeled "Socialism." We are condoning their enslavement.

It is significant that even those employed in the administration of the Social Security program at the local level have, within recent weeks, been emphasizing that the program was never intended to be a retirement "pension" program. The trouble is, those voices are much too late in making such statements. They have in the past remained silent when Congress voted increases in Social Security benefits, when they should have been voicing warnings to our legislators. Even now, President Gerald Ford is under fire for suggesting a cutback on an automatic increase in Social Security benefits. Two of the strongest critics of the President on this point are Indiana's own two Senators, Birch Bayh and Vance Hartke. They, along with others of the same attitude, have voted increase after increase, using the emotional appeal that to deny such increases is to penalize the elderly—but they pay no Social Security tax on their $40,000-plus annual salary as Senators. They ignore the fact that Social Security increases in the last five years HAVE EXCEEDED THE RISE IN THE COST OF LIVING (as reported by the New York Times News Service).

It is also significant that, in nine out of ten articles dealing with Social Security and its costs, statistics are used relative to "employee and employer"—that is, that the employee "contributes" half and the employer contribues half of the individual liability as determined by individual income. So, while publicity mentions that a worker under the maximum income liability "contributes" $824.85 and the employer a like amount in the current year, no mention is made of the self-employed who are now paying in OVER $100 PER MONTH under maximum liability. The self-employed, the backbone of American business under free enterprise, rarely get recognized—perhaps because the amounts involved are getting unbelievable.

Just ten years ago—think of it, only ten years ago—the maximum liability was but ONE-FIFTH of the above amounts.

On occasion, when I have editorialized on Social Security, I have faced the same condemnation that Senator Barry Goldwater endured in 1964 when he was crucified at the polls because what he said about Social Security was distorted by his enemies, even by some within his own party. He was made to sound, unsympathetic, cruel, inhuman, etc. He was said to be "against" Social Security. He was not. His concern was about the DEGREE to which the program was developing—and that has been my concern, also, when I have spoken about Social Security.

I am positive that some of the elderly in this community, who are drawing Social Security benefits, think (one of them told me so) that I am against Social Security. I am not. I am against the compulsory tax burden of the program, increasing all the time. I am also positive that some older citizens think I am exaggerating when I say I'm paying out over $100 a month this year into the Social Security fund. They simply cannot believe it—because they remember the tax THEY paid in their earning years and it was a comparatively small amount. So, my question to them today is, "NOW do you understand my concern—when it's costing me over $100 a month to help keep you?" And I can't even claim it as a charitable deduction on my income tax return. My money helps keep someone else, but I can't claim a deduction!

The public has been led to believe that they are putting their money in a "trust" fund, that their Social Security tax is being held in a fund to be paid back to them. The truth is, there IS a fund amounting to some $50 billion at the present time. But it is not a "trust" fund. It is more accurately called a reserve fund. The truth is, the money paid in each year is paid right back out in benefits, and that now amounts to 65 BILLION DOLLARS FOR THE CURRENT FISCAL YEAR. The so-called "trust" fund wouldn't pay for one year's obligations!

Recently, Congressman J. Edward Roush sent out a news release concerning Social Security. I got the impression that he was perhaps trying to justify the present setup in the minds of recipents, in view of the increasing warnings being heard about the stability of the system. He said that those receiving Social Security "are not on welfare"; they paid into the fund, they are getting their money back, or words to give that impression. He is dead wrong, if you ask me; he is deceiving the people, especially the elderly. Any time you get money to live on and someone else is paying it in, I'm sorry, that's welfare. Anyone receiving a Social Security check is "on welfare," whether they like it or not.

The Social Security system is in trouble and I'm upset—as I have been for many years—because I have had no choice in the matter of participation. As a self-employed family, we have no one making the "painless' deductions from a pay check; the obligation is paid out-of-pocket; it is a tax, as is the case for every other self-employed household. And I am paying MORE as a self-employed but stand to get the same as anyone else when the time comes—IF the program is still going.

The "experts" have noted that the smaller working force in coming years may not be willing to stand the additional costs to maintain the program of benefits as it is now set up for the future. If my kids and yours get up for the future. If my kids and yours get enough spunk to raise holy ned in the not too distant future and say "no" loud and clear to our Congressmen on paying higher and higher Social Security taxes, I won't blame them a bit. It'll hurt—but I won't blame them a bit.

If you ask me, the failure to honestly describe what Social Security is intended to be, properly, adequately and accurately down through the years, is the biggest and most destructive "coverup" of the century.

Planned To Death

Some of the services which are already being provided or are proposed for various social or economic groups in our society sound worthwhile at first glance. But when you put them all together, the picture becomes confusing—and frightening.

Though we call ourselves a "free" nation and talk about our "free society" rather boastfully on occasion, there is much in it which is far from "free," whether you are talking in terms of dollars and cents or the privilege of living much as you please in your own way.

It scares me to read of—and to receive at the News Office—information from many and varied government agencies involved in "planning." We have groups involved in planning "community services" (which takes in a wide variety of subjects), we have groups planning land use and conservation matters, we have groups involved in health planning, and on and on. Some of the planning gets so involved that it isn't quite clear who should do the planning. Right now, I'm not sure whether the Three Rivers Planning Council is functioning or whether it was dropped to allow a multi-county planning group to take over. I don't know that it matters much whether I do or don't know about it — whatever whoever decides, that's it, period.

What brought this on is the fact that the Region Three Health Planning Council has sent several news releases to the news media, which is the way it ought to be. But someone evidently thinks it requires an impressive letterhead to do justice to the group. The envelopes and letterheads are of higher quality paper, and the letterhead is quite eye-catching—big numbers across the top of the page with the "3" darker than the others to signify Region Three. The design takes about one-third of the page. If you wonder where your money goes on some of these programs, part of it is for impressiveness. Too many tax dollars are spent for fancy and needless professional services totally unrelated to the basic program. Fortunately, not all agencies are as extravagant. I believe it's the Environmental Protection Agency, or one of its departments, which sends out a single sheet, folded double and sent without the use of an envelope. And that particular information sheet carries ten times the amount of information as does the Region Three Health Planning Council sheet.

In the health planning field, controls are exercised over local programs, such as the Emergency Medical Services effort. Controls are exercised over what expansion a Fort Wayne hospital may undertake, or what equipment will be available at that hospital.

In the county, we have a Plan Commission which must be consulted for every little thing (or so it seems) when a farmer or rural resident wants to do something. This may be all right, basically; but I think a point is reached where "planning" cuts into the rights of private ownership. Or the planning can go the other way and compel the participation of the public in a program which the public may know little of or may not agree with.

There is planning for the elderly, planning for youth, planning for this and planning for that. While there are volunteer workers involved to some extent in those programs, there are also dozens of others who are on full time pay at public expense whose efforts in their planning jobs have no productive benefits. We are supporting a lot of people from whom nothing is received; they are engaged only in telling others what to do or what they ought to do.

I'm not quite certain of what I'm trying to say; I am confused and frightened. You may be more uncertain, too, having read this, so these words may have no constructive value—except perhaps to reflect concern that in "the land of the free," we are becoming more and more subject to someone else's ideas because of their official "planning" for which they get paid, but they may not know any more about it than you do. And the tendency is for those people to become impressed by their own importance (they think) and to become less and less respectful of the fact that they are servants of the public, not the public's masters. Bureaucracy has a high opinion of itself.

One of the most unusual shots ever scored in basketball history was made by the man who is now the director of athletics at Notre Dame, Moose Krause. When Krause played for Notre Dame in a game in 1933 against Butler, he fell down and while still lying down, threw the basketball toward the basket. It went in for one of the most amazing shots ever made.

Lions Club

—Andy Crow, reporter

On February 10, the Saint Joe-Spencerville Lions Club met at the Spencerville UM Fellowship Hall. Our special guests for the evening were the Lady Lionesses who were treated to a salad buffet and excellent dinner with comments from some of the ladies that they were thankful for a nice home-cooked meal with no dishes to wash.

After dinner, Lion Richard Crow introduced our speaker of the evening, Dr. Howard K. Morris from the IU Medical Center in Indianapolis. His opening remarks were about the Lions Eye Bank. In the last 13 years since its inception, 1300 residents of Indiana still have sight who would otherwise be blind. The overall rate of success is approximately 92%.

Dr. Morris' main topic for the evening was the new 40 million volt Linnear Accelerator. The cancer control program was started in 1944, stressing the early detection of cancer. The next step undertaken by the Indiana Lions was the purchase of a 40 million volt cathode radiation treatment machine, purchased in 1947. The last major project of the Lions was a three-year goal of $750,00 for the purchase of the new Linnear Accelerator.

The goal was reached in two years and nine months, three months ahead of time. The machine is paid for, built and now in the last stages of testing. The Medical Center expects to be ready to treat the first patient before the first of March. Because of the advanced design of the machine, it can treat cancers which could not be reached by previous machines.

President Joe Smith then began our business meeting. Each Lion introduced his Lioness and as a Valentine treat related the incident that has most embarrassed his spouse, some of which were very amusing and embarrassing—and unprintable.

President Smith then announced the Lions District Meeting at Wayne High School March 16. The state convention will be held April 19—21. The induction of Ron Beard into our club was the highlight of our business meeting. We are always interested in gaining new members who are willing to work and contribute his time and efforts to further the goals of Lionism. Ron then introduced his wife, the former Martha Kagey. First Vice President Jerry Storer then announced a committee meeting to start planning for our 35th anniversary next year.

DAR News

The John Houlton Chapter NSDAR met at the home of Mrs. Marlin Yoder with Mrs. Ernest Harter as cohostess February 8.

The program included introduction of the winners of the chapter's "History Month Essay Contest." The eighth grade winner was Rick Schippers, son of MM Jerry Schippers of Auburn. His essay was on Paul Revere.

Kenny Middleton, son of MM William Middleton of R2 Auburn, was next and his essay was on Patrick Henry. The two boys are from McIntosh Junior High at Auburn and their teacher is Tim Brown.

Susan Dudash, daughter of MM Robert Dudash of Garrett, was the sixth grade winner. Her essay was on John Hancock. Ed Davis, son of MM Charles Davis, was second and his essay was on John Paul Jones. Their teacher is Mrs. Susan Boyer at the Ober Elementary School.

Todd Carnahan, son of MM Calvin Carnahan, was the fifth grade winner. He also is a student at the Ober school and his essay was on Margaret "Molly" Corban.

Rev. John R. Johnson of the County Line Church of God was the speaker concerning American Heritage. His topic was, "What Is Americanism?" Some of the highlights were:

One definition could be, "An attachment or loyalty to the United States or its ideals." One should cling to the last phrase as it indicates the moral conviction of each and every one.

The colonists' grievance of "taxation without representation" went uheard and unheeded and King John lost the brightest jewel of his empire.

Americanism is also of the spirit—the spirit of Love and Service. It is God Given, Blood Spilled, Glory Filled.

"When we return to these ideals, this nation under God shall experience a new birth of freedom," he said.

This small device has no dangling cords or separate transpletely in your ear.

It was developed especially for those persons who can hear but can't understand. This hearing instrument provides "ear-level" hearing with the wearer picking up speech, sounds, television and radio at his ear. Due to the use of transistors, the user cost is extremely low.

A true life actual size replica of the smallest all-in-the-ear hearing aid ever made will be given absolutely free to anyone sending in this advertisement while supply lasts. So we suggest you write for yours now. No obligation whatsoever. Write to A. J. Wilder, 809 Steuben Street, Wausau, Wis. 54401. (Adv.)

Insurance Queries

How can I find out how much cash value I have in my policy?

Every permanent life insurance policy has a table showing the amount of cash value that has accumulated since you took out the policy. Cash values generally begin after the first or second year, the size depending on the kind of policy you have and the face amount. The table shows the value for each year for the earlier years of the policy and at selected intervals for later years. However, if the table does not show the value for any year in which you might be interested, you can request this information from the company.

How many beneficiaries can I have for my life insurance?

As many beneficiaries as you wish to name. You can specify how you want the proceeds of the policy divided among them. You can also name contingent beneficiaries to receive the money in case the primary beneficiary dies before you do.

If I overlook a premium payment, will the company cancel my policy?

You have a grace period of one month during which your policy remains in force. If you pay your premium within this period, the protection continues.

If you have an automatic premium loan provision in your policy, your cash value will be used to continue your coverage until you resume payments or until the cash value is used up. You can have such a loan provision added to your policy.

Companies also have provision for reinstating policies that lapse through non-payment of premiums.

The January 23 meeting of the Fifty Plus Club was held in the basement of St. Peter Lutheran Church at Spencerville with Nellie Shaeffer, Dorothy Hodges and Ida Reed as hostesses.

The group was called to order at 6:30 pm and after prayer by Nellie Shaeffer, all enjoyed the delicious potluck supper. The president, Ida Reed, then conducted a short business meeting. She extended greetings to all, then read a poem entitled "Club." A motion carried to reimburse the president for a new coffee maker and two sets of salt and pepper shakers.

"Happy Birthday" was sung to those having January birthdays and their birthday offering was received.

Since February is the month of two former Presidents' birthdays as well as Valentine Day, we were asked to wear something red at our next meeting to be held Thursday evening, February 27, with Rose Trammel, Bea Hollabaugh and Janet Woodring as hostesses.

The meeting was then turned over to Nellie Schaeffer, chairman of the committee for the evening. She introduced Jeanne Zigler of Harlan who told us of her life and experience as a missionary in India. Her talk was very interesting and greatly appreciated by all present.

Don't forget February 27—same place—supper at 6 pm instead of 6:30 pm—and be sure to wear something red.

Leota Curie Named To 'State'

Leota Curie, daughter of MM Harold Curie of R1 Saint Joe, has been chosen delegate to Hoosier Girls' State at Indiana State University June 15—22.

Brenda Armstrong, daughter of MM Charles Armstrong of R1 Butler, was chosen alternate.

"Spirit of '76" will be the slogan for Girls' State 1975. The American Legion Auxiliary sponsors the Girls' State program and the purpose is to educate the young women in the duties, privileges, rights and responsibilities of American citizenship.

The girls are selected from the top third of the junior class. The citizens must have a definite interest in government, outstanding qualities of leadership, good character and honesty. The girls eligible were asked to write an essay if they were interested in attending Girls' State, and the essays were judged by a panel.

The Auxiliary considers the Girls' State program a good investment for the future. The friends the girls make are priceless and the lessons learned are boundless. All are joined by a common bond, that of love of God, their fellow men and their country.

Blazers Take 61-54 Tourney Win

With "Terrific Tom" Hollabaugh hitting the hoop for 20 points and Steve Bellamy exhibiting some elusive dribbling in the closing minutes of the game, the DeKalb Eastside Blazers downed Prairie Heights 61-54 in a sectional tourney game. It was played Wednesday night.

The teams were neck and neck through the first half. Then the Blazers spurted to a 10 point lead early in the third quarter. Prairie Heights came back with 6 points, but the Blazers again pulled ahead and managed to keep their opponents from breaking down the lead. The Blazers were helped by several free throws toward the end of the game.

About Good Democrats

I am "nailed" occasionally by Democrat friends who take exception to some of my comments here and start talking about, for instance, Nixon and Ford and the big deficits we are having under their presidencies, with a comment such as, "—And you Republicans say the Democrats are big spenders!"

As is often the case, my friends have remembered only what has related to them through the designation "Democrat." They usually overlook the criticisms and concerns I have expressed about Republican actions. Perhaps their reaction is one of embarassment at what their party leaders have done—just as I am embarrassed at the 1973 Indiana legislative session in which Republicans put through a "tax reform" measure which included, of all things, a tax on a tax. That's contrary to American principles, but Indiana Republicans did it.

Several days ago, one of these conversations occurred, wherein I was "nailed," and I found it necessary to point out to my friend that just a few weeks ago I expressed strong disagreement with the idea of tax cuts, and that disagreement included the President of the United States, a Republican. My last statement in that editorial against tax cuts was, "We must be crazy." Do you recall?

Also, in the past I have expressed concern that national health insurance has been supported by Richard Nixon when he was President; now President Ford has indicated support for some such program. Sure, I have mentioned Democrat Senator Ted Kennedy and Democrat Senator Birch Bayh, because they are big pushers for national health insurance, a program which I oppose for two good reasons: (1) a government program has yet to improve the quality of whatever it may be that is involved, but the cost always goes up; (2) where in the world are we going to come up with ANOTHER $80 TO $100 BILLION a year to cover estimated costs of a program such as Senator Kennedy's, when we have the Social Security program putting out $65 BILLION A YEAR right now and it's in trouble.

The following headlines of the past few days are significant: from the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel, "Social Security Going Broke"; from the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette, "Inflation, Unemployment Place Social Security Fund In Danger." The latter is somewhat misleading, because Social Security is in trouble regardless of inflation and unemployment; more money is needed regardless of inflation and unemployment. And that means MORE TAXES paid to government and then doled out to you and me as government sees fit. I don't like that—nor do my Democrat friends who are also paying those taxes.

Why be so concerned? Because welfare benefits paid to individuals represent ONE-FOURTH of our national annual expenses!

So, before the ink was dry on my own editorial last week about Social Security and its impossible future (unless we enslave our children and their children), the above dailies were preparing factual reports of the terrible situation facing - what - Social Security? No, not really - rather, facing YOU AND ME - THE PEOPLE! Under the circumstances, I find it impossible to believe that anyone, Democrat OR Republican, can suggest or propose or support another social welfare program such as national health insurance when we cannot finance the Social Security program any longer UNLESS (as is suggested by some "experts") we take something like $7 Billion from the general fund next year to cover Social Security costs. And we already have a $53 billion deficit coming up for 1976!

Incidentally, the friend I mentioned above said, "You Republicans worry too much about deficits" when I mentioned our financial problems. My reply (which is often ridiculed by those who seem to see no relationship between our financial problems and deficits) was, "If I try to do the same thing, spend more than I make, I get into trouble. The same situation faces the government." If those of us who do worry about deficits ARE wrong, why are we having runaway inflation and a recession at the same time??? Why haven't deficit-spending budgets brought stability??

Democrat Senator James B. Allen of Alabama has been called a "one man wrecking crew." By Republicans? No, by Democrats! A story about his accomplishments against Senate liberals appeared a few days ago. He says he is "out to protect the rights of the minority." Among his accomplishments: successfully filibustering against the Consumer Protection Agency bill in 1973 and 1974; successfully filibustering against a liberal tax reform package last year which was added to a debt limit bill (a good example of "legal trickery" led by Senator Kennedy); successfully filibustering against the Post Card Voter Registration bill.

From such efforts, it seems to me that Senator Allen is too modest in stating his opinion of his efforts. I'd say he is protecting not only minority rights but MAJORITY WILL. The matter which prompted the story of his accomplishments (as I'd call them) involved efforts by Senate liberals (and that means some Republicans along with the majority of Democrats) to have the required two-thirds majority vote lowered to three-fifths in voting to halt a filibuster. Senator Allen correctly points out that, under such a move, the majority in the Senate would be free "to run roughshod over the minority. The minority has rights, too."

Keep in mind that this is a Democrat making points against his own party members who, as the majority for 38 of the last 42 years, have had the power to determine the direction our government has taken. Also, several weeks ago I mentioned that another Democrat in Congress had said in so many words, "Too often we have voted in a massive program because it sounded good, but we haven't considered how much it would cost." Keep in mind that these massive programs have been instituted through the Democrat majority in Congress, assisted oftentimes by Republican liberals. So, as I have suggested many times before, it isn't so much that you are a Republican or Democrat today. The important thing is: how do you look upon the American public, as individuals who ought to be left alone, or as a mass which can't take care of itself, basically.

Therefore, when there is a discussion about national conditions and politics, it ought to be remembered: there are control-minded Congressmen in both parties, but the majority of them are and have been (in my lifetime) under the "Democrat" label. BUT—don't forget that there are also those in the same Democrat party who are fearful of what is happening to our republic and are taking a stand on solid ground, as is Democrat Senator Allen of Alabama, when they challenge their Democrat colleagues in some of the proposals the latter make to exercise more and more power and control over you and me.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

Enclosed find payment for past year and a year in advance. If not correct, let me know.

I liked your comment "On Sloppy English."

Your city has a modern up to date bank building. I hope business can be as good on the inside as it looks on the outside in spite of the present state of affairs.

My thanks for your prompt service.

Resp.
Mrs. John B. House
1320 Front Avenue
Mattawan, Mich. 49071

To the Editor:

I would like to bring an item of great importance to the attention of all gun collectors, sportsmen and hunters. I know that some of you are well aware of the movement to ban hunting. However, there are a substantial number of people who are not aware of the seriousness of this movement.

The US Consumer Product Safety Commission has drafted a proposal to ban hand gun ammunition (38 SPL, 357 mag., 44 mag., 22 S L LR—in fact ALL ammo that can be fired in a hand gun) under "The Hazardous Substances Act."

This would have the effect of banning 18 different calibers of rifles from the market, including all 22 cal. rifles.

If this proposal should ever become law, I feel that it will eventually lead to the banning of all guns and finally to abolishing hunting.

You can let them know how you feel about this matter by sending a letter to the commission. Your letters are greatly needed if we are to stop this movement led by self-seeking publicity-hungry politicians.

The address is:
US Consumer Product Safety Commission PO Box 8137, Washington, DC 20024.

Thanks.
Jerry Culbertson

We would add that letters to our CONGRESSMEN are equally as essential, perhaps more so, since it is the Congress which has the power to protect the public from questionable regulations established by government agencies. And Senator Birch Bayh of Indiana has been one of the staunchest supporters of gun controls. —Ed.

Saint Joe Valley Homemakers

—Pat Roberts, reporter

The Saint Joe Valley Homemakers Extension Club met at the home of Pat Roberts February 21 for their regular meeting and Valentine party.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Doris Yeiser, with the reciting of the club collect in unison. Devotions were given by Myrtle Pugsley who read from I John 5. She gave a lesson on "Overtaking the World." Again it was brought to our attention that if we have Love, Faith and Trust in God, we can overcome any obstacle that comes before us.

Song of the month, "Beyond the Blue Horizon," was led by Edith Sailer.

The president then brought the county news on the floor. We were assessed two dollars for the annual Extension Dinner.

It was stressed we should get more interested in the Senior Citizens activities. Doris also read the tours the bus company was offering through the summer months. Again the county has garden seeds for sale, but none of us having much garden room, we let the sales pass us by.

After the close of the meeting, a lunch was served around a table decorated for Valentine Day. Many beautiful cards were given and read. Then the time was turned over to our good member, Rose Means, who instructed us in the finished project we had previously started.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

Recently Coburn Corners Church of Christ members were challenged by their minister, Larry Carter, to top the 200 mark in attendance at worship and church school. The "reward"? He would shave off his mustach.

Well, a couple of Sundays ago they got up to around 290—and true to his promise, he shaved off the mustach after services in the presence of the congregation.

I didn't know about the promotion until I stopped at Lavon Hart's about a church league matter and in walked a nice, clean-shaven young man. Lavon asked, "You know who this is, don't you?" Then I did—and he told me the score.

While I was out one day this week, Dwight Sebert of Butler stopped in to pay his subscription. He left a note and the money, including 56 cents for "tax or interest"!

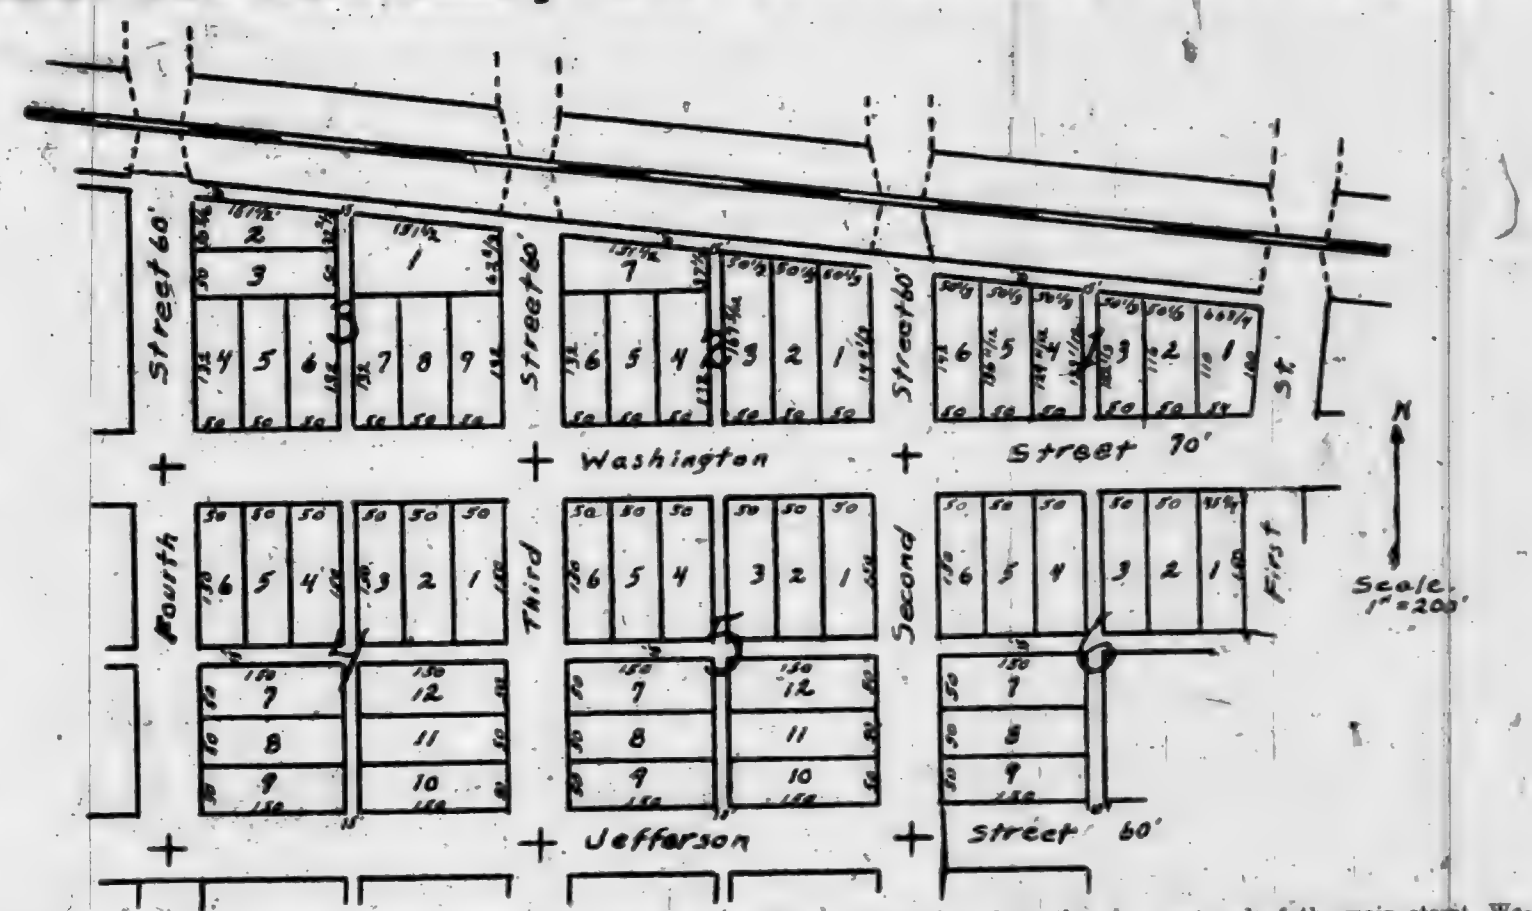
The wife of a former teacher at Riverdale, she belongs to the Acme Club at Hicksville. I was told this week that, at the club's last meeting, roll call was to be answered with "my favorite editorial or feature writer." As the roll was called, names like Sydney Harris, Jack Anderson and the like came forth. When it came to Mrs. Dunson, she answered, "The Editor of The Saint Joe News"!

—Wow!

Saint Joe Community Has 100th Birthday Next Month



Saint Joe will be 100 years old April 27, 1975.

It was on April 27, 1875, that John and J.D. Leighty had the original plat made. It was recorded May 4, 1875. The platting was recorded in Plat Record Book No. 2, page 75, later copied to Plat Book No. 3, page 93. The information came from Earl Bice of Saint Joe, from the abstract of the Bice property in Lot 8 Block 4 in the SW¼.

In the above drawing from the abstract, First Street is the highway crossing of SR1 at the east end of the main street, Washington Street. Other additions came later to extend the boundaries of the community which did not incorporate until a later date.

Booster Club Seeks Centennial Ideas, Opinions

A small turnout at Wednesday night's Booster Club of Saint Joe meeting brought a postponement of election of four directors until a special meeting next Wednesday night at the fire hall at 7:30 pm.

However, a discussion was held about having some sort of celebration or program this year to commemmorate the original platting of the town in 1875. A further discussion of the matter will be held next week.

All members and those who are interested in becoming members and participating in the club's efforts are invited to attend and bring whatever ideas they may have about a centennial observance for the community.

Memberships are available at local businesses for just $1.50 a year.

Auction Planned

SPencerville United Methodist Church plans a public auction March 22 at the Community Building. Richard Hissong will be the auctioneer.

Anyone wishing to sell saleable items, either on a consignment basis or as a donation, should contact Richard Meek at 337—4009 or James Shilling at 238—4879.

The committee wishes to know as soon as possible what is to be offered at the sale so that the items can be advertised.

Texas Cowgirls At EHS

The Texas Cowgirls Professional Basketball Team will play the DeKalb Eastside faculty Monday, March 10, at 8:15 pm in the Eastside gym.

A preliminary game will be played by the Hamilton and Eastside faculties at 6:45.

The event is sponsored by the Adult Boosters to raise money to purchase a pitching machine for the baseball program.

Tickets are priced at $1.50 for adults and $1.00 for students. They may be obtained from any Booster member, at Pugs' News Stand in Butler and at Laub Shell Mart in Spencerville.

Carnival Coming

The Riverdale PTO will hold a carnival Saturday, March 22, in the Riverdale cafetorium. Time of the carnival will be from 1 to 5 pm.

Tickets for the concessions will cost 10 cents each or 11 for $1.

The fun—for—everyone affair includes cookies and drinks, fish pond, bean bag toss, cake walk, dart toss, basketball toss, rope climbing, sponge toss, spook house and wheel of fortune.

Right To NOT Pay Taxes??

"Nation's Business" contains a thought-provoking article this month. It concerns the organizing of government workers at all levels and poses the question: could cities and towns be shut town by Jerry Wurf, the leader of the organizing movement. Strikes are made a "right" under the present movement for government workers.

I say it is a thought-provoking article because it points out how defenseless the private citizen is under collective bargaining and the threat of a strike. Put bluntly, there is absolutely no representation for the public in labor disputes, whether it involves private business or government workers. So-called "negotiations" ALWAYS end with the labor element getting something and business getting nothing. Have you ever heard of a "demand" made by business in contract negotiations?

The emphasis on abuses in business-management has resulted in a low opinion of business in the mind of the general public. Business is pictured as a "Simon Legree" by the efforts of labor leadership to gain more and more reward for less work and lower quality. While the labor movement has gained protection for the working man and woman, protection to which they are entitled, it has also brought protection of inferiority. The wrong is not in the labor union; the wrong is in the abuse of power practiced by a comparatively few individuals at the top of organized labor's leadership. I am convinced that there is a lot more sensible outlook in the mind of the average union member than there is in the powers at the top. But the average member is oftentimes literally afraid to say anything (other than in informal conversation back home) against the direction in which his leadership leans.

The private citizen is at the mercy of the demands, reasonable or unreasonable, of the labor leadership. Our Congress is not providing any protection for the private sector, especially in Indiana where, in the Fourth District, our three Congressmen have been the recipients of considerable financial support from organized labor, and you don't get that support for nothing.

The whole situation presents a thought which ought to be considered by our elected representatives and the private sector:

If government workers have the right to strike, and thus endanger the welfare of the American public, does a private citizen then not have the right to refuse payment of taxes from which government workers receive their livelihood? Is not refusal to pay taxes a right of the private individual, as his only source of protection against the security-laden bureaucracy???

More Laws - Less Law

It seems that with each passing month, events of increasing cause for concern, of dumbfounding effect, are taking over our everyday living. On the promise of "a better life," the civil and human rights movement has instead brought a "lawless" life, an atmosphere of almost perpetual fear of harm in the mind of the average citizen. Education is not exempt from this trend away from that dirty old word—"discipline."

Last week, a decision was made by the U.S. Supreme Court, handed down by a 5-4 margin, which declares school officials liable for damages in carrying out disciplinary actions with students. The case involved two girls who spiked some punch at a school activity. They were suspended. Somehow the matter became a court case (there are dozens of attorneys just waiting for civil rights incidents to pounce upon and reap their lucrative take) way up to the Supreme Court which said students in general could sue school officials IF it could be proved that the students' constitutional rights were intentionally infringed. That's a big "if"—big enough to make a lucrative living for those attorneys who have made civil rights an occupation specialty.

I am amazed at the decision because, with the appointments made to the Supreme Court in the past few years, the philosophy of the court appeared to turn away from the liberal road it has traveled since the 1930's. This particular decision reflects a continuation of the liberal approach which has taken away from those in authority the right to carry out their duties as they see fit. This decision should cause a great deal of concern in the teachers' ranks because, from remarks I've heard from teachers in the surrounding area which is referred to as "metropolitan Fort Wayne," discipline is their number one problem. The "students rights" movement has left the teacher virtually powerless oftentimes in disciplinary matters.

Keep in mind, this did not involve a discrimination charge; there was no racial or religious issue involved. It was merely a case of high school students playing around with the authority which has traditionally been granted to school authorities TO PROTECT the well-being and welfare of the general student body through moral as well as practical guidelines.

In time, perhaps it will be substantiated that the court did not say what it might APPEAR to have said—that students can make or break whatever rules and regulations they wish. However, the general effect seems to make it increasingly difficult to be a school board member or a superintendent or a principal or a teacher. Who is going to seek a position in which maintaining an orderly atmosphere can bring a suit for damages???

Another demoralizing decision came recently from a state supreme court (I don't recall which state). That decision said the use of trained dogs to search for narcotics is an invasion of privacy, except when such search involves an automobile at a state or national border—or something along that line.

In some respects, our society—our system of court justice—has really "flipped."

Others say. . . .

Evolution

Maybe there is something to this idea of evolution proposed by Dr. Charles Darwin. Maybe people did descend from lower animals, for church folk are often seen stubborn as mules about church work; sly as a fox in their own business deals; busy as bees in spreading the latest gossip; blind as a bat to the world's needs; quiet as a mouse in spreading the gospel; but have eyes like a hawk to see the mote in their brother's eye. They are eager as a beaver about a bazaar and bar-b-q but lazy as a dog about prayer meeting; mean as snakes when things don't go their way; but gentle as a lamb when they need the Pastor's aid; noisy as crows for the church to advance but slow as snails in visiting the unchurched. Many are night owls on Saturday night but bed bugs on Sunday morning, slippery as eels on Sunday night and scarce as hen's teeth during revival!!!!

Blazers Lose

The DeKalb Eastside Blazers almost did it again—almost defeated DeKalb Central in the sectional tourney Friday after almost defeating the Barons in the regular season and almost defeating Garrett in the regular season.

Tied at 10 each at the end of the first period, the score went to 27—20 in favor of the Blazers at the half. But the Barons kept picking away at the lead and finally went ahead in the final quarter. Two baskets by Tom Hollabaugh with only a minute or so to go tied it at 47—47. A Baron bucket gave them the lead. On a long pass-in, Hollabaugh was fouled with 2 seconds to go. He missed the free throw but Steve Bellamy rebounded and put the ball through to tie the game at the horn.

In the overtime, the Blazers couldn't get moving and the Barons outscored them for a 60—54 win.

Leo then defeated the Barons Saturday night for the sectional championship.

Laura Burley

Funeral services were held at St. Mark Lutheran Church in Saint Joe Thursday afternoon for Laura Burley, 84, of west of Saint Joe who died at Meadowhaven Nursing Home Monday. She had been there eight days and had been hospitalized at DeKalb Memorial Hospital for a short time before that.

Mrs. Burley was spry and active for her age until just recently. Her husband, Don, has been a semi-invalid and invalid for some time. Mrs. Burley took care of him and did the driving when he was able to get out.

But the death of their son recently seemed to deeply affect Mrs. Burley and her health rapidly deteriorated.

Survivors include the husband, who is also a resident Meadowhaven; a daughter in law, Jean Burley; and two grandchildren, Bob Burley of Chicago and Marsha Burley of Los Angeles.

Rev. Dennis Kuchera officiated at the funeral. Burial was in Riverside Cemetery at Saint Joe.

Hubert Hudson

A heart attack proved fatal Tuesday morning for Hubert W. Hudson of near Saint Joe. He was 58 years old.

Mr. Hudson reportedly complained of feeling ill Tuesday morning. His wife, Iris, went to get the car to take him to the doctor. When she returned to the house, she found her husband on the floor. He had put on a jacket before collapsing.

Mr. Hudson had been a plumber for 25 years. He had been working locally for the past few months after contract work dropped off in the Fort Wayne area.

Survivors include the wife; four sons, Ford of Rt Auburn, Jerry of New Haven, James of Ronie City and Jeffrey at home; four daughters, Mrs. Jeanette Lothamer of Grabill; Mrs. Cheryl Fetters of Butler and Susan and Jenifer at home; two brothers, William and Harold of Spencerville; a sister, Mrs. Garnett Furnish of Spencerville; and eight grandchildren.

Mr. Hudson was a member of the Spencerville Masonic Lodge, the Fort Wayne Scottish Rite, the Butler American Legion, the Waterloo VFW, the Auburn Moose ledge and the Butler Eagles. He was a World War II veteran.

Services were held Thursday afternoon at Gerig Funeral Home in Auburn. Russell Tagge officiated at the funeral. Burial was in Riverside Cemetery at Saint Joe.

Toll-free Number To Legislators

A toll free telephone number has been installed at the State House, according to State Representative Dr. Floyd B. Coleman of Waterloo, for citizens to register their positions on bills. The service began Monday and is provided from 8:30 am to 4:30 pm. By dialing 1—800—382—9966, a constituent will reach a telephone operator who will take any message for Dr. Coleman.

Since the call will be answered by an operator, no information can be obtained immediately. But the operator will notify the State Representative to return the call or will advise him of a person's views on a particular bill.

Calls should last no longer than one minute so that a maximum number of people can take advantage of the service.

The toll free service was operated on a trial basis for selected parts of the state in the past month. Approximately 80 calls a day were received with only 10 legislative districts participating. The results were thought to justify a statewide calling service.

Again, that toll free number to contact the State Representative is 1—800—382—9966.

Local Dairy Tour

DeKalb County dairymen are invited to visit two new dairy setups Tuesday, March 11.

The first viewing will be at the Aaron Holman farm on County Road 52 north of Saint Joe, between State Road 1 and State Road 101 in Concord Township. 100 cows are now being milked with new equipment and a two-stage cooler.

At 11 am a demonstration will be given at Lynn Fuller's new free-stall barn plus a lagoon, on County Road 36A just off County Road 53 in Wilmington Township.

Farmers attending will get a free dinner at the courthouse auditorium at noon, sponsored by the Dairy Businessmen.

At 1 pm Norm Moeller and Don Jones from Purdue will discuss waste handling methods and how to manage cows under distressed feed and milk prices.

The tour is free and open to the public.

DAR Winners

14 fourth grade students from Riverdale School placed in the locally-sponsored DAR project under the theme, "My Birthright —Freedom." Chairman of the contest was Mrs. Orris Wise.

The John Houlton chapter of the DAR sponsored the Junior American Citizen contest.

The contest was in four categories: scrapbook, poster, poem and essay.

Wenda Grimm placed first in the scrapbook division with Sylvia Wagner taking second, Robin Miller third and Lisa Fetters honorable mention.

Hayley King won the poster division, Linda Mickelson was second, Becky Olson third and Nancy Lothamer honorable mention.

Dear Mr. Haberkorn,

The issue of the St. Joe News dated Feb. 20 arrived today.

My Mother's obituary was the most complete and best written of any published to my knowledge.

If you have 7 or 8 copies of this issue of the News I shall appreciate your sending them to me.

Please include my bill for my subscription to the News as well as for the extra copies.

Your editorial on Social Security is especially good. I would enjoy talking with you.

If I ever retire, I might return to St. Joe. Think I should like to write about my boyhood and some history of St. Joe in 1908 to 1918.

Sincerely,

The January 1975 meeting of the Joy Belles Home Ec Club was held at the home of Gloria Parr with six members present. We decided to exchange a club meeting with another club, and also to sponsor an October party for the Willing Workers 4H Club.

Sarah Anstutz gave us a lesson on special diets, and Gloria Parr had a craft project in which we made note paper and a project to cover jars to look like milk glass.

The February meeting was held at the home of Sally Schambers with seven members and a guest present. Pat Haley led in devotions and Dorothy Lepper gave a consumer report.

After a short meeting we all tried our hand at molding an object to later bake and paint.

The next meeting will be held March 17 at the home of Shirley Richardson. We invite anyone interested to attend this meeting.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

A crowd of DeKalb Eastside fans went to the Blazer gym Monday night to see some razzle-dazzle from the Texas Cowgirls, a barnstorming girls basketball team. They were pleasantly surprised by some razzle-dazzle shown by the Eastside faculty who romped over the Hamilton faculty 96—65 in a preliminary game.

I don't remember all the names, but I do remember that the boys are as hefty a bunch of players as you will see anywhere and they played as if they knew what they were doing. Mark and I got there some time in the second quarter, and "Big Al" Peugeot went on a scoring rampage for a while for several buckets.

The local crowd gave a big cheer when Leon Strange entered the lineup. Shortly thereafter he didn't see a Hamilton player in front of him as he ran down the floor, and literally ran down and over the hapless faculty member from up north. Referee Burt Campbell covered his eyes and turned his head when it happened—waiting for the other ref to call the foul, which he did.

Then with about three minutes to go, head basketball coach Bill Peden entered the lineup amid loud cheers and a standing ovation. He didn't do much—until it got down to a few seconds to go—then he scored on a hook shot and the fans lifted the room. He had a foul shot, too, on the play and missed, but the hook shot was a good enough crowd pleaser to end the game.

The Texas Cowgirls were no match for the faculty. But somehow they managed to get a pretty good lead—at least the scoreboard showed that they did. Then in the closing minutes, after some girl-chasing, boy-chasing and other diversions, the faculty broke the Cowgirls' lead and the game ended a tie.

At halftime, one of the gals (there were only six of them) sank 7 free throws out of 10 attempts while blindfolded, Steve Bevington tried with his eyes wide open and lost his shirt—and a few other things for halftime laughs.

In the closing minutes, a ref exchanged places with one of the Cowgirls, but couldn't keep abreast in the contest.

I enjoyed the evening, except for one put-up play involving a football diversion which was a bit crude and in poor taste. The EHS Adult Boosters might send a note to the girls and suggest taking that bit out of their routine; I think it would improve the Cowgirls' public relations.

They had a couple of cute ones on the Cowgirls' team. But the real treat of the evening for me—believe it or not—was the talent shown by our faculty basketball team.

—On second thought, the cheerleaders came in a close second.

RIVERDALE MENU

Monday—chili soup, cheese slice, peaches.

Tuesday—ham and beans, cornbread, lettuce salad, pears.

Wednesday— hamburger sandwich, green beans, plums.

Thursday—goulash, bread and butter, peas, fruit jello.

Friday—fish sandwich, cream style corn, applesauce.

EHS MENU

Monday—hot dog sandwich, cheese slice, mixed vegetables, pink applesauce.

Tuesday—spaghetti and hamburger, lettuce salad, apricot halves, homemade roll and butter.

Wednesday—sloppy joe sandwich, buttered peas, ice cream.

Thursday—fried chicken, mashed potatoes and gravy, bunny salad, bread and butter, cookie.

UM Auction Date Changed To April 19

Spencerville United Methodist Church has postponed their public auction from March 22 to Saturday, April 19, starting at 11 am. There was a conflict with other sales in this area.

Anyone wishing to sell saleable items, either on consignment or as an outright donation should call Richard Meek at 337—4000 or James Shilling at 238—4879.

The committee wishes to know as soon as possible what is to be offered at sale so that the items can be advertised.

Gretchen Noragon

Funeral services were held at Baidinger-Walter Funeral Home in Spencerville Wednesday for Gretchen G. Noragon, 64, of Saint Joe. She died Sunday at DeKalb Memorial Hospital after four days' confinement.

Mrs. Noragon was born in Lima, Ohio, December 3, 1910, the daughter of Ralph and Rose Secrest Johnson. She married Harold Noragon in Harlan in 1937. They have resided at Saint Joe 30 years.

Mrs. Noragon was a member of the Saint Joe Church of Christ and the American Legion Auxiliary.

Survivors include the husband; two sons, Donald of Saint Joe and Ralph of Auburn; and seven grandchildren.

Edward Schantz, pastor of the Saint Joe Church of Christ, officiated at the funeral. Burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery at Auburn.

Game Room Open House

In recognition of National Wildlife Week which starts Sunday, Thomas Wagner of Bryan, Ohio, will hold an open house of his game room. It will be held Saturday and Sunday this week end from 2 to 10 pm and Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday from 7 to 10 pm.

There are mounts of deer, elk, moose, pine martin, 35 species of birds, fish, plus many more.

There will be guided tours throughout the week.

The game room is located two miles north of Bryan on 127, then east approximately one mile. There will be signs along the way.

Jerry Culbertson reports that this is one of the finest displays of wildlife in this area, well worth the time to visit. Questions about wildlife are welcome.

Tom is a former wildlife specialist for the state of Wyoming.

Exemptions Now Being Filed

—from Marjorie Carr, auditor

The DeKalb County Auditor's Office is where the citizens of DeKalb County have been filing property tax exemptions starting Monday, March 3. The filing dates declared by the State Board of Tax Commissioners are to be March 1 until May 10 this year. Since the DeKalb County Court House hours are normally Monday through Thursday, 9 am to 5 pm and Friday 9 am to 6 pm and closed on Saturday, we began Monday, March 3. However, we will be open Saturday from 9 am to noon near the end of the filing period to coordinate with the Treasurer's extra hours near the end of the spring installment tax deadline.

There are several types of property tax exemptions which can be filed. Basically, persons eligible to file mortgage exemptions must have a mortgage of record on real estate listed in their name by March 1, 1975, or before, in our office. Those buying on land contract are not eligible. The exemption is for $1,000 unless the assessed valuation is less than $2,000 and then it must be pro rated. Exemptions are given for mortgages under $1,000 on the balance owing.

Those over 65 before December 31, 1974, and with income of less than $6,000 for applicant and spouse, including Social Security, are eligible.

The applicant should own and be living on the property filed for. The maximum assessed valuation is $6500.

There are also veterans' exemptions requiring VA form 20-5455. If these forms are not received by the first week in March, they can be obtained from the Veteran Service Officer in the court house.

There is a $2,000 blind exemption and $2,000 widow of veteran exemption, for those serving in the armed services prior to November 12, 1918.

None of the above exemptions can be filed after May 10.

Extreme Need For New Blood Donors

Delores Hicov has announced that the Bloodmobile will be at the Riverdale School this year on Friday, March 21, from 1 to 6 pm.

Anyone 17 years of age and older is eligible to donate blood, subject to certain restrictions concerning current medication and past medical history.

A request has been made for new donors to participate in the program, in addition to those who have donated in the past. From March of 1974 to March of this year, 126 pints of blood were used in treating patients from the Riverdale area. This is double the demand of the previous 12-month period and means that a great need exists for new donors.

In Education—

Parents Have Been Ignored

(NOTE: The use of the term "teachers and educators" is in a total and group sense. It is recognized that not all educators and teachers agree with and support conditions existing today. However, those conditions HAVE come from the activities of "educatrs and teachers" collectively.)

Articles have appeared in the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette in the past few weeks extremely critical of State Senator Joan Gubbins of Indianapolis who has sought to get more parental guidance in the state's selection and approval of textbooks. I sent a letter to the editor this week because I felt that the innuendoes were unfair and that feature writer Kirk Stone was distorting the total picture and twisting Senator Gubbins' views into something they aren't. He calls the Senator's approach an indoctrination philosophy—and it makes me wonder what he thinks the teachers and educators in modern schooling have been doing for the past 10 or 15 years, if it isn't "indoctrination" of students to educators' ways of thinking.

The letter was a bit lengthy and may not be published.

Mr. Stone paints Senator Gubbins and her supporters as individuals who are trying to impair "academic freedom," to "indoctrinate" young people with the ideas of their parents without opportunity to examine and analyze those ideas.

My letter to the editor attempted to point out that one very important element has been overlooked by the critics of Senator Gubbins. The element is: the controversy over textbooks in various areas of this nation has been basically related to the grade school level. The objections of parents and of clergy have been due to the vulgarity, profanity and gutter-level writings to which these young people have been exposed at an age which those parents and clergy consider too young. As is the case with many of the modern liberal thinkers in education, a grade school student is given credit for more mental and emotional capabilities than a young person possesses, generally speaking. Modern thinkers are, in effect, trying to make kids "grow up" too fast, if you ask me. A kid can't be a kid anymore; everything must be "relevant" in modern thinking.

It is a paradox that while many modern educators dote on higher education and the need for more money for higher and better education, they at the same time resort to materials which are of low and degrading quality. They say that education should make the student aware of what is going on in the world about them, that the students should be made aware of how things really are and have been. This sounds good, and IS good—to a point. It is worthwhile to make the students aware, for instance, that George Washington WAS a human being and was not perfect; and this can be done without going into detail. However, Washington's value to our nation was in what he did which lifted him and inspired others to rise above their humanness. Inspiration and motivation are key words in describing what George Washington means to America.

What Senator Gubbins and many parents and clergy object to is that textbooks praise leaders of other nations, not of the United States—unless their names happen to be Angela Davis or Dick Gregory and so on. I am told that Russian and Red Chinese leaders are spoken of in glowing terms in one particular "social studies" textbook. But George Washington is described as a homosexual, a "playboy" with the ladies (which seems a contradiction)—and rich. The fact that he served as this nation's first President is presented as a virtual afterthought. The hardships of winter at Valley Forge and seemingly overwhelming odds against success in battling for independence are apparently overlooked.

According to one of the prime leaders of the textbook protest, older history books were removed from the schools and literally burned in one state. The books were replaced by such texts as contain ideas which tear down respect for this nation and for those who, weak and sinful they may sometimes have been, still contributed more to America's development than their weaknesses destroyed.

Senator Gubbins introduced several bills in the current session of the Indiana General Assembly. To my knowledge, none of them got out of committee. I assume that other members of the committee were fearful that her suggestions were too "radical," perhaps the other committee members were influenced by the teachers' unions and their powerful lobbyists to reject the proposed legislation.

The following is a resume of the content of those proposed bills. You decide for yourself, in light of the destructive material now appearing in classroom and library texts, whether Senator Gubbins is radical or whether she reflects a reasonable concern:

SENATE BILL No. 32

Repeal of mandatory PPBS (Planned, Programmed, Budgeting System). Would not prohibit voluntary program. (PPBS is a system "to make the teacher accountable for the work he should do." However, the system includes the testing and evaluating of student performance in three areas: what the child learns (knows), what his attitudes are (feels) and what action he is table to take (does). The objectives of what is necessary, good and objective are set by the teacher. Parental attitudes and wishes on values and objectives are by-passed.)

SENATE BILL No. 53

Would require a lay (parent and citizen) advisory committee at the local school level to review and advise on textbook selections.

SENATE BILL No. 97

Changes the Indiana Commission On General Education membership from educators to lay members and also requires at least four of the textbook adoption Commission six members be lay members.

SENATE BILL No. 147

"It shall be unlawful for any person to teach or instruct in any public school disobedience to lawful parental authority nor shall any person attempt to subvert or ridicule the religious, political, or moral values or beliefs of any person through instruction."

SENATE BILL No. 148

Requires written consent of parents before a child can be placed in an experimental program designed to explore or develop new or unproved teaching methods or techniques. Also requires parents be shown all materials to be used in the program.

SENATE BILL No. 149

Prohibits the use of "group therapy or sensitivity training in which a students' intimate or personal feelings, emotions, values or beliefs are openly exposed to a group, or where roles are assigned to students for the purpose of classifying, controlling, or predicting behaviour."

Those in "education" who oppose Senator Gubbins and many parents because the above proposals are too "radical" should keep in mind (and I pointed this out to a teacher friend recently who does not favor Senator Gubbins' proposals):

The present situation was not caused by Senator Gubbins and concerned parents who suddenly appeared out of nowhere with unjustified ideas from 'way out in left field. The situation was caused by the failure of educators and teachers to consider or consult parents about textbook content, to respect deep-rooted religious and moral ideals of the parents; parents have been, in effect, made secondary to the self-assumed excellence of educators and teachers. If it is now "radical" to seek parental representation, was it not also "radical" to have promoted or condoned the introduction of certain school materials and individual attitudes which dote on the degradation of human beings, destroy the positive and constructive elements in history, and make vulgarity, profanity and obscenity appear to be "rights and privileges"???

Those teachers and educators who say Senator Gubbins is "going too far" in her proposals appear to be contradicting themselves. Why was it so "right" to go so far THEIR way???

In short, educators and teachers "blew it"—by practicing what they were preaching against.

Firemen's Program Pays Off

The value of periodic presentations of information of practical use to school students, even down to the lower grades, was pointedly illustrated this week to members of the local fire department.

A call came to the department Monday afternoon from the 10 year old son of the Byron Richardsons. He reportedly was "calm and cool" as he gave the necessary information about location and name so that the firemen were able to respond quickly. While the Richardson home was damaged, to a great extent by smoke, it is probable that a greater loss was avoided because the young man remembered what to do in case of fire and kept a level head.

Where did he learn? From a movie shown by the local fire department at the Riverdale School (and I may be doing an injustice to Mom and Dad Richardson who may have instructed him, too). The movie was loaned to the fire department by General Electric of Fort Wayne. Needless to say, it helped that local fire chief Joe Robinson is employed at G-E. —Sometimes "influence peddling" has its merits!

Did you know—

—that Carol Miller, daughter of MM Bob Miller of near Saint Joe, underwent surgery at Parkview Memorial Hospital Tuesday.

—that recent visitors in the Forrest Bevington home near Saint Joe were Cindy Bevington, a student at Northwood Institute, and a classmate, Adebisi Shofu, of Ibadan, Nigeria.

—that Carroll High School used an ineligible player in their reserve basketball game with the DeKalb Eastside Blazers on February 1 and have forfeited the game to Eastside. One of the players had participated in a church league basketball game which made him ineligible to participate in high school basketball.

—that State Representative Dr. Floyd B. Coleman has declared his intention to vote against two bills which would remove police authority to arrest public inebriates. He favors arrest with a program of detoxification set up in jails to take care of those with drinking problems.

—that the winter sports banquet for DeKalb Eastside athletes will be held Thursday, March 20, in the high school cafeterium, starting with a carryin supper at 6:30 pm.

—that MM Royce White recently became parents of twin boys.

—that Patricia Jo Moer of R1 Auburn and David Earl Worthington of Ashley plan a June 1 wedding at Auburn First United Methodist Church.

—that the local restaurant was closed last Sunday due to illness in the Kuker household.

—that Tim Kaiser of R2 Butler reported the theft of guns and stereo equipment last week from his home.

—that Jewell Ann Bellamy of Butler and Thomas Allen Yoder of R2 Auburn plan an August 9 wedding. She is a graduate of DeKalb Eastside and her fiance is a graduate of Lee High School.

—that Ramar "Whitey" Waknight has resigned as head basketball coach at DeKalb Central High School. He was under pressure to resign, according to unofficial sources, due to the lack of consistent winning teams at the school. He said he will seek a coaching position elsewhere.

—that Theresa Margaret Kern and Catherine Joyce Kern, daughters of MM Kenneth Kern of near Saint Joe, will have their biographies published in the 8th Annual Edition of "Who's Who Among American High School Students."

—that the Saint Joe Valley Conservation Club will observe the 25th anniversary of the opening of the club grounds in September. The club opened Sunday, September 24, 1950.

—that Ray Reasoner is now back at Meadowhaven Nursing Home in Butler after confinement at DeKalb Memorial Hospital recently.

—that State Representative Dr. Floyd B. Coleman opposes a state lottery in Indiana because it is a "something for nothing" type of approach to financing of Indiana government, produces no more than two percent of required revenue in states having lotteries, requires constant and intensive promotion, and would lead to other forms of legalized gambling which brings criminal elements into the picture.

—that right turns on red lights have been so successful in the state that an additional 425 approaches in the state highway system now permit the practice.

—that the Northeastern Tri-State Regional Science Fair will be held at Angola March 22-23.

—that Congressman J. Edward Roush says he again will introduce a bill to expand the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore Park.

—that General Telephone Company has announced a $15.4 million budget for improvements in exchanges in northeastern Indiana for 1975. Included is $85,000 for Saint Joe for a new central switching office and cable. The company announced plans last year for a complete new exchange system at Saint Joe by July of 1976.

Your Fire Department is in its 61st year of continuous service to this area. And we are just as proud of the department now as those who started it so long ago must have been.

We speak of a Volunteer Fire Department. But what does it really mean to you? Much criticism has been heard over the years about Volunteer Firemen and their activities. This is mainly because people do not know or understand its purpose. It is made up of a group of concerned individuals from various occupations and talents who VOLUNTEER their time for the protection of life and property. We will not dwell on this too much as you will learn more from future articles.

However, when you ask one of the firemen why he became a Volunteer Fireman, I am sure he will hesitate a moment before you get a reply. Your first answer may be this: "I must be crazy to risk my life each time the fire siren sounds—FOR FREE." He really doesn't feel that way. He has the greatest interest in the community, and while he may be unable to display his interests in other ways, he feels that the duties he administers as a fireman are a necessary part of our existence. He doesn't expect pay for this or even a thanks, although the latter is much appreciated. You need only see the expression on after several hours at a burning his wet and dirt-streaked face, building, to understand his appreciation when someone slaps him on the back and says, "THANK YOU." Those two words don't cost much either, DO THEY?

Our department consists of FIVE vehicles: one Dodge pumper which is primarily for town use; one Ford pumper for township fires; one surplus Army truck with 2200 gallon water storage tank; one GMC van which contains a vast amount of emergency equipment; and one "especially manufactured by local talent" grass buggy for those field fires that require a rough terrain vehicle. More about this equipment in later issues.

The people who operate this equipment are classified as a Fire Chief, Assistant Chief, two Captains, two Lieutenants and 19 Firemen. We also have the Ladies Auxiliary which is very active part of the department. In fact, eight of these ladies will soon complete their training as "Firemen," capable of operating trucks, pumps, etc., and are members of the Indiana Volunteer Fire Association.

This is the first of a series of articles to appear in our local newspaper which will keep you posted on all aspects of the department, its equipment, member qualifications, history, financial status and many other interesting items.

A NOTE OF INTEREST: from 1940 to 1953, St. Joe had no fire loss.

The DeKalb County Men's Fellowship will be at First Christian Church of Butler on March 20. It will begin with a banquet at 6:30 pm. Charles Zarger will speak. All who plan to go, let us know Sunday the 16th.

—from DEAN'S ENCO SERVICE

Two pioneers in the development of the motorcycle were Michel and Eugene Werner. In 1896 they fitted a small engine in front of the handlebars of a pedal cycle. It drove direct to the front wheel by belt, giving a far smoother ride. In spite of such disadvantages as the possibility of setting the front wheel on fire, and lubrication system which deposited much of its benefits on the rider, it proved reasonably popular.

Cub Pack 3172

—Judy Parker, reporter

Komets win over Toledo 5—4 to climax the enjoyment of the Cub Scout hockey game Sunday, March 9, at the Fort Wayne Coliseum.

There were many other Cub packs there in uniform and they were just as enthusiastic as we were. We hope we Scouts, by our show of enthusiasm, helped to spur them on to their victory. A few mothers did anyway!

For many of us it was our first hockey game and we haven't decided whether it is more exciting knowing the rules or not knowing the details. But we all agreed it is a very fast thinking, fast paced, fascinating game. We saw some really professional goalie saves on both teams as well as other great plays.

One can't help but get caught up in the excitement of the game! It was really out—o—sight and all boys (and parents) are ready to go back again—when we get our voices back!

Now we must concentrate on making our Pinewood Derby racers for the Pack Pinewood Derby race Thursday, March 20. Get busy boys, and good luck.

In closing Pack 3172 wishes to thank Ted Haberkorn for the write-up and pictures of our Blue & Gold Banquet last month. We do appreciate his work.

PS—whatcha doing March 20 around 7 pm (Pinewood Derby).

Troop 192 GS Cadette

—Lisa Parker, reporter

On February 21 we went to Camp Ella McMillan for the Klondike Derby. We had to know first aid, be able to tie knots, pitch a tarp, build a fire, and boil 4 cups of water in 8 minutes and know tool craft. There was a possible 200 and we received 158 points (being our first time we thought that it was pretty good).

At the February 24 meeting we discussed our Fine Arts Day. We decided to go to "The Diary of Adam and Eve" (put on by the Purdue students), shopping at Glenbrook and McDonalds. Fine Arts Day was on March 8. After we discussed Fine Arts Day we spent the rest of our time on our Emergency Preparedness Challenge Badge.

On March 8 we went to Fine Arts Day. We left from Judy Tejan's house at noon. Our schedule was as follows: leave for play at noon; arrive at Adam and Eve play at 1:00 (play started at 1:30). After the play we went to Pier 1 Imports. Then we went to McDonald's. After eating we went shopping at Glenbrook. We then left for home. Everybody had a blast—everyone includes Robin Loy, president; Lynette Longardner, vice president; Lisa Parker, reporter; and Babette Herschberger, treasurer; also our leader, Judy Tejan.

The theme of the service is "The Seven Last Words of Jesus." Parts in the worship will be taken by the pastors of these churches, the choirs, several lay persons and the congregation in attendance.

The public is invited to attend.

UM Auction Date Changed To April 19

Spencerville United Methodist Church has postponed their public auction from March 22 to Saturday, April 19, starting at 11 am. There was a conflict with other sales in this area.

Anyone wishing to sell saleable items, either on consignment or as an outright donation should call Richard Meek at 337—4009 or James Shilling at 238—4879.

The committee wishes to know as soon as possible what is to be offered at sale so that the items can be advertised.

Church League To Meet April 1

The Saint Joe Church League will meet Tuesday, April 1 (and that's no joke) at 7:30 pm at St. Mark Lutheran Church in Saint Joe.

Election of officers will be held for the coming summer of slow pitch activity.

Consideration will be given to admitting another team to the league. A discussion of expansion was held last fall. There is a possibility that two ball diamonds will be utilized in the league this year to accommodate a larger league. However, no definite decision has been made at the present time.

A 50 foot section of new fence remains to be installed. The segment was not installed due to the coming of cold weather last fall and the need to do a small amount of grading for proper installation of the new fence.

The cost of the new fence was underwritten by the participating churches. Not all have as yet paid their share.

When the fence is completed and paid for, it will represent an outlay of just under $1,000 by the league since last fall to completely fence the outfield with chain link material. In the past picket cribbing has been used as the outfield fence.

Managers, ministers and players from participating churches are urged to attend the April 1 meeting.

Carnival Coming

The Riverdale PTO will hold a carnival Saturday, March 22, in the Riverdale cafetorium. Time of the carnival will be from 1 to 5 pm.

Tickets for the concessions will cost 10 cents each or 11 for $1.

The fun—for—everyone affair includes cookies and drinks, fish pond, bean bag toss, cake walk, dart toss, basketball toss, rope climbing, sponge toss, spook house and wheel of fortune.

"Everyone come and have a ball!!"

Herbert Hoover

Herbert A. (Bob) Hoover, 44, of Spencerville died Wednesday of last week at DeKalb Memorial Hospital. He had been hospitalized one day but had been in the hospital previously for exploratory surgery which revealed untreatable cancer.

An outstanding athlete in high school when Spencerville was still a separate school corporation, the deceased was a high scorer in basketball, an aggressive and untiring type of player.

Employed in Auburn the past few years, Mr. Hoover had operated the Marathon station at Spencerville previously.

Other survivors include the wife, the former Janet Brown; two children, Herbert, Jr., and Kelly Jean; two brothers, Jacob of Spencerville and Carl of Muncie; a sister, Mrs. Maxine Kugler of LaOtto.

Booster Club To Proceed With Centennial Plans

The Booster Club of Saint Joe met Wednesday of last week at the fire hall with 13 persons present.

The main item of discussion was a proposed centennial observance this year commemorating the original platting of the Saint Joe community. The platting was done in April of 1875.

No date was definitely set for such an observance after it was determined that most of those present favored having a homecoming type of celebration to mark the 100th year.

It was voted to have the board of directors serve as the steering committee and to name a chairman for the event, if it is deemed necessary.

The group noted that shortness of time would be a factor in determining how extensive the observance would be planned.

Election of three directors was held. Elected were April Davis, Roger Coburn and Tim Kuker.

Mrs. Marie Klink of Auburn, who is DeKalb County's Senior Citizen representative on the Region Three Council On Aging, was the guest speaker at the March 13 meeting of the St. Mark Luthern Church Women.

The meeting opened with devotions given by Rev. Dennis Kuchera who used the scripture verse, "Behold, I make all things new" from Revelations 21:5 as his text.

Congress' Discrimination Contradicts Principles - Or - Make 20 MPG Mandatory

It seems to me that one of the contributing factors to the public's low opinion of our legislators is the fact that those elected officials so often take up a "popular cause" and take advantage of speaking of principles to gain public favor. Then, later the principle seemingly is set aside and the cause of a particular group is championed even though the group may be unreasonable and selfish in its demands.

For instance, in the civil and human rights emphasis of recent years, the word "discrimination" has played a key role. Campaign oratory about American liberty and the basic freedoms of all individuals is contradicted by legislation which compels an employer to hire new employees without regard to sex, race, creed or national origin. The purpose is to give those who may have been shunted aside by some employers an opportunity to better themselves. An employer cannot discriminate — an employer cannot say "I want all men in this plant" or "I want all Caucasians in this plant." The various agencies in communities around the nation, under government supervision and financial support, are constantly watching for instances of employee rejection on the basis of sex, race, creed or national origin — except for one thing: If an employer says, "I want all women in this plant" or "I want all Negroes in this plant," nothing is said. Thus, "discrimination" becomes acceptable because it favors a so-called oppressed group. Therefore, anti-discrimination efforts are actually not that at all. Those efforts are really directed toward special favor. At the same time special favor is gained for some, the right of freedom of choice is denied others.

We have been bombarded with the idea that we must cut down on our consumption of energy, with emphasis on the automobile and gasoline. Those who have driven foreign compact cars and later American compacts (foreign manufacturers, not American, gave this country the opportunity to have economical means of transportation in the automobile field) have for some time been conserving fuel by driving cars which require less fuel. There were no favors granted to them, and there need not be any favors for using common sense.

But when the public began holding back on buying the big American gas guzzlers a few months ago and even held back on compacts which had skyrocketed in cost along with the other models, what happened in Congress? We have a suggestion for legislation from Indiana's Senator Vance Hartke that a tax credit be given those who purchase a compact car OF AMERICAN MAKE. Now, if that isn't double-discrimination, I don't know what is —discrimination against those who buy a big car and against those who buy a compact foreign car. What's more, his suggestion in effect PENALIZES those who exercise the right of free choice; you choose what HE thinks you should buy or you pay a "fine."

This is significant, because the Indiana Senator is one who has championed anti-discriminatory practices in job placements. He has been critical of the lack of Negroes, for instance, in business and industry. But he was guilty of the same thing he condemned in others. It wasn't until columnist Jack Anderson pointed out the lack of Negro personnel on Senator Hartke's large staff that the Senator looked in his own back yard; THEN he made some changes and added Negroes to his staff.

I realize that the reason for Senator Hartke's suggestion to give a tax credit for a new American compact car purchase is to stimulate the economy. But why is it proper for him to propose a discriminatory practice in one instance but deny the privilege of discrimination (in freedom of choice) to others?

Senator Hartke is not the only guilty party, guilty of inconsistency for the sake of popular appeal—and votes (he's coming up for re-election, you know). Others have suggested in the Congress that penalties be inflicted on those who own the big gas guzzlers, penalties up to $1,000. Now, how in the world are the auto manufacturers going to sell the big cars, which have bigger prices which means bigger profits for the bigger paychecks demanded by auto workers, steel workers and others related to the auto industry? How can you keep the economy at a high level in a nation which unfortunately seems to put most of its eggs in the auto industry basket, when you turn around and say, "If you buy a big car, there's a penalty to pay"? If the owners of the gas guzzlers are paying more for gas to drive the same distance as a compact, they are already paying a penalty, are adding more dollars to the economy, are making more business. Isn't that what we are trying to maintain—a high business level??? Why penalize the gas guzzler???

Now we get down to the most important consideration. The reason for all the concern about big cars or little cars, gas misers or gas guzzlers, is that we are trying to cut down on the use of energy. Therefore, it seems that all these suggestions of penalties and tremendous increases in gas taxes are faulty. Those who have the money are going to drive and travel regardless of the penalty or cost. Therefore, the way to cut down energy consumption in the automobile field is to pass legislation which prohibits the use of an automobile getting less than 20 miles per gallon. THAT will cut gas consumption and be a truly fuel-saving program.

Congressional Staffs Add To Inflation Spiral

In January, Congressman J. Edward Roush issued a lengthy news release telling of the changes made in his staff. Included was the addition of a full-time staff worker.

To quote one portion of the news release:

"There was a time when the Fourth District Congressman had no staff and no office in the District, operating entirely from Washington.

"When I was first elected as Fourth District Congressman, I opened an office in two small rooms in the Strauss Building (Fort Wayne), staffed by one full-time and one part-time assistant.

"That office has grown in the last four years to where we now have an office in the Federal Building (Fort Wayne) with five full-time employes, plus the branch offices in Kendallville and Huntington.

"I believe that growth has been necessary, and I am confident that these latest changes will allow us to be even more responsive to the needs of the District."

Thus, where the Congressman's office was once maintained only in Washington, his staff now numbers 16 full and part-time workers. Guess where their pay checks come from.

The Congressman's observation that such "growth has been necessary" is strictly a matter of opinion. It serves to illustrate that the cost to the public through taxation to maintain the degree of government which HE thinks is justifiable takes second place to what the public may think. While the Senate and House majorities in the Congress take advantage of the public's antagonism toward the petroleum industry and business in general and public utilities and the "extravagances" of Richard Nixon, they are at the same time promoting a program of expansion of government office staffs which has but one result: the reduction of individual liberty, privilege and responsibility for you and me.

These same members of the majority who dote on "protecting the public" at the same time vote themselves more and more expense money, which comes from your pocket and mine. Did you know that the stationery allowance for a Congressman can be withdrawn at his or her discretion WITH NO ACCOUNTING MADE FOR ITS USE? Did you know the very same allowance (which was increased recently) can be left to accumulate until such time as the Congressman leaves office and he or she can then withdraw it, again without any accounting made? (Who said "you can't take it with you"!)

Keep in mind that these are the same legislators who are so "concerned" about inflation, about the cost of living, about higher taxes. Also keep in mind that when you add the number of Representatives to the number of Senators, you come up with over 500 separate office staffs comparable to that of Congressman Roush. Keep in mind that these staffs receive not only salary but also all the other fringe benefits which government workers receive—paid for by us private citizens.

The most significant point, however, is that these jobs are all non-productive, that is, they represent no material value. They are, therefore, a prime contributor to inflation, when inflation is remembered as the result of higher cost without any increase in quality or quantity.

Students Know Less In Only Three-Year Period

A news report Wednesday indicated that a survey of school students

(presumably in the form of an achievement test) shows that the students in the selected grades know less about science today than did students in the same grades three years ago.

The report substantiates the idea that we are paying more for and getting less from the educational system in the United States.

It appears that the more "say-so" teachers and educators have in education, the less knowledge they impart to the student.

Minority Rights Dwindle

Recently I referred to the commendable efforts of Democrat Senator James B. Allen of Alabama in fighting a Senate rules change which would deprive the minority vote in the Senate of what influence it may have under present rules. News reports since then indicate his efforts have been in vain. The majority vote required to end a filibuster was reduced from two-thirds to three-fifths. The change has been sought by Senate liberals, a majority of whom are in the Democrat party. Other Democrat Senators have expressed fear of the consequences of such a change. But with the election of more liberals last November, the ranks of the opposition were reduced considerably.

Thus, the very people who sell themselves on the idea of protecting minorities in society have destroyed the protection of minorities in our legislative process in the U.S. Senate.

—The word is "deception."

women who have special needs. Federal funds and state funds are available for various programs, and these funds need to be matched by funds from local areas, however not on a 100% basis. DeKalb County is one of the nine counties in Region Three.

Mrs. Klink said that it is hoped there will be more representatives sent to the County Council from the various areas of the county, to advise the Council of the needs of the various communities.

Some programs already in operation for senior citizens in other areas are: meals on wheels, forster grandparent program, reassurance program, recreation programs and trips, escort service home care service, noon meal service at a nutrition site, day care service and others.

Mrs. Klink left a supply of census sheets to be distributed to persons over 60 years of age. These census sheets are for the purpose of determining the needs of senior citizens in DeKalb County, so the County Council can then formulate plans to present to the Regional Council for approved funding, when the funds are available.

Following the program, refreshments were served in the church parlors by Mrs. Carl Perkins and Mrs. Zay Sailer.

—Bivere Brush, reporter

The Newville Township Homemakers Club met for an all day meeting in the home of Zella Collins with Charlotte Kimmel as co-hostess. After a delicious pot luck dinner, president Lois Guiff called the meeting to order and then read poems from the "Ideal" magazine in honor of St. Patrick's Day and Easter; then all repeated the club collect. Lynn Kaiser read a poem and several articles for devotions.

Due to the absence of the song leader, the song of the month, "It's a Lovely Day," was read by Zella Collins.

The county home demonstration lesson was given by Mary Platter and was on conservation of energy. The two main points were: the need to conserve energy and to show homemakers how they can reduce utility bills.

19 members gave an "Irish song" in answer to roll call.

Old and new business were taken care of and reports given. Election of officers gave the following results:

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Nut that I am on spelling accuracy, I fired a WOWO printed editorial back to that station last week with a note suggesting the use of a dictionary. Some seven or eight times the word "pari-mutuel" was spelled "pari-mutual." When your main commodity is words, you'd better know those words.

—Now watch somebody catch me on a boo-boo.

Ho-hum. I see where Senator Hubert Humphrey has "agreed" to pay back taxes on nearly $200,000 he deducted for giving away his vice presidential papers.

It was just a small news item in the dailies—and TV commentators didn't make much out of the situation, apparently.

—Let's see—wasn't there somebody else in the same situation not too long ago—all over the front pages???

Hubert Stackhouse and the DeKalb Central choir did a great job on presenting a narrative of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" at the Lincoln Day dinner recently at DeKalb Central. It was inspiring—and blood tingling—very appropriate for the occasion.

About 450 were at the dinner and program, with Governor Otis Bowen the main speaker. He is a quiet unassuming type of personality, one who speaks with such sincerity and frankness that he reminds me of the old fashioned family doctor who speaks reassuringly but still pulls no punches. He gives the definite impression of being a governor who is "of the people, by the people, and for the people."

From the "it makes you wonder" department:

"Dianna Farmer, a 19 year old WAVE, said Tuesday she will disobey orders transferring her from the Memphis Naval Air Station to Kingsville, Tex., 900 miles away from her sailor husband.

"Dianna and her husband, Jim, 26, a parachute rigger, Tuesday lost a fight to win a husband-wife assignment at the Memphis Naval Air Station at Millington.

"Farmer said the decision to disobey the orders came after the couple contacted the military liaison office at the White House and received 'the same old bureaucratic runaround.'

" 'Dianna just blew her fuse,' Jim said. 'We've had as much of this as we can take. We're going to stay right here until the shore patrol comes and gets her if we have to.

" 'We are not going to let the Navy break up our marriage, which it would do if she went to Kingsville.' "

Who do they think they are, anyhow? The young lady and her husband should have realized that she was joining the armed forces when she became a WAVE—and that means you goes where they tells you to go.

I wonder if they asked the Navy if it was OK to get married in the first place. Unless a written agreement was made that Dianna and Jim would be allowed to stay together when both were in the Navy, they don't have any reason to gripe.

Chances are she joined with the idea that both would make a career of it, stay in for 20 years—or 30 if they decided to—and then both retire to live a life of ease on Navy pensions.

I can imagine how much protection we're getting out of those in the armed forces who have the same outlook as this couple. If you needed them, would they be there—or somewhere else, just to be together?

Here's another one to make you say "HUH?"

Richie Allen, the temperamental baseball slugger who quit playing for the White Sox during the season last year, was traded by the club for $5,000 and a player. But it seems he isn't too enthused about playing at Atlanta, the club which got his contract. Now he says he thinks the White Sox, who traded him, have "a moral obligation" to keep him.

HUH? HE quits playing and THEY have a moral obligation??

(Mr. Allen has some sort of "thing" about his first name. He was Richie for quite a while. Then a couple of years ago, he made it "Dick." Evidently Richie is not an appropriate name in his opinion for such a great ball player.)

Then there's Lou Alcinder—or Kareem Abdul Jabaar as he now prefers to be called—since he became highly religious and joined the Muslem faith. Kareem now wants to be traded away from Milwaukee because that city has nothing relevant to his mode of living—or something like that.

And there's also Cassius Clay who got religion the Muslem way a few years ago. He refused to serve in the armed forces, paid a small penalty for it in the form of a brief jailing, and is now rolling in dough as Muhammad Ali.

Notice something common to all the above athletes? It's their obsession about names—as if a name makes the person, not his attitude. I wonder how the mothers and fathers feel when the family name is cast off.

Also, where religion is involved they exhibit the highest degree of conceit. It makes one wonder—ARE all religions good???

It's a shame. All three are tremendous athletes—but their character isn't worth ten cents. What an opportunity they have "blown" to be really great, an influence for good for the kids of today, if they had the humility of a Lou Gerig, a Joe Louis, a Stan Musial.

I was told by a little bird this week (maybe it would be more accurate to say "chick") that the 4H County Council was miffed at my comment recently about taking a group of th'ers to the most expensive restaurant in Fort Wayne. The "chick" asked if anyone from the council had called me; they hadn't.

The group saw a play after the dinner, but I don't recall making any remarks about that. A dinner and the theater is fine—but, again, not the most expensive supper club in Fort Wayne. Why be in such a rush to give the kids a taste of luxury??? No wonder they are the "now" generation—they want everything NOW. There is no waiting, no working, no anticipation of the future for doing something different. It must be now. Is it any wonder that the kids turned to drugs? They have everything else. What's for kicks? (Note that the Ladies Literary Club had a dinner-theater outing recently—they dined at the Ponderosa! So while adults make do with sensible things, the kids are exposed to luxury.)

For the same reason I am definitely NOT impressed with the new junior high school in the central district. Why? Well, one of the publicity stories in the Auburn paper had a headline, "Dishwashers typical of improved school facilities." The story tells of the deluxe accommodations for the home ec department, including two automatic dishwashers in EACH of the two FIVE-KITCHEN cooking classrooms! The washers are considered "advantages."

I beg to differ. Automatic dishwashers take a lot of hot water. That means not only the need for water but also the need for energy to heat that water.

What happened to the ecology movement which has been ENCOURAGED SO CONSISTENTLY by teachers? —Or maybe the teachers weren't consulted in the designing and layout of that new junior high.

I understand carpet is evident throughout the new building. That's nice—get the kids accustomed to the things their parents can't afford, in many cases—as was stated by a Saint Joe reader just this past week. And an auditorium style lecture hall with a projection booth, and a "spacious" gym to seat over 400 people—these things in a junior high school.

Some call it progress in education. I call it wasteful, an influence to extravagant and wasteful living. —And the taxpayer over there is footing the bill.

Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz catches a lot of heck from time to time. Sometimes he may deserve it. But other times I think he's on the right track—but runs over some toes. For instance, last week he said that 64% of the current Agricultural Department budget is for welfare and he now runs "a major welfare department." He says too many Americans are now receiving welfare benefits. He pointed out that 25 million students each day eat a school lunch at least partly subsidized by the federal government and 9 million children get a free lunch. He said that percentage was too high. He said "too many people are getting on welfare rolls and staying on welfare rolls that don't belong there. Every time we try to make welfare adjustments, we are sharply criticized."

I'm with him. Too many Americans are being duped by the sugar-coated assurance that this or that government program "isn't welfare."

Note: this week a spokesman for either the National Education Association or the state teachers' union suggested that teachers apply for food stamps; many of them qualify.

If that's the case, then it's time to raise teachers pay—or does the condition indicate we ARE deeply in socialism???

Fire Department Seeks Donations For New, Convenient Resuscitator

—by Guy Mansteller

In this article we hoped to familiarize you with some of the equipment which is contained on the various vehicles, but a more important issue arose.

At our business meeting of last week, numerous things were brought to our attention. One took precedence over all others as it is very important to the department but more especially to every person living in this community and Concord Township.

Let me tell you about it! Do you know what a "resuscitator" is? Wow—a word like that is quite a mouth full, so let me try to simplify it.

It is a very delicate instrument which is used on persons overcome by smoke, gases or other fumes; difficulty in breathing; or heart attack victims. These emergencies may take place in your home, through highway accidents or at fires, and a resuscitator in the hands of trained persons means the possibility of saving the life of a friend or loved one. You are fortunate in that your fire department is made up of these trained people. Your department has been praised by individuals as well as doctors on the excellent way this instrument was used and the results were very gratifying to the department members.

To further enlighten you, on the resuscitator, let me say the present unit is nearing its 20th year of service. Like everything else, it has reached the point of becoming more of a hindrance than a help. This unit was donated to the department by the local Boy Scout troop in 1958 under then-Scoutmaster Frank Seehler. The goal set was $355 and the fund drive by the Scouts began in December of 1957. The unit has been a fine instrument. But now refinements in new units make the old one cumbersome in comparison and it is very difficult to handle in many instances. In addition, it is in need of repair and we find the repair cost prohibitive.

Several persons out side the department are aware of our serious problem and have offered some excellent suggestions on projects to assist in the purchase of a unit which can pass all present day codes. We have spent about six weeks of investigation on available units and we found one that meets all requirements and is used by most fire departments and emergency units.

This unit is made by Globe Company of Dayton, Ohio, at a cost of $624.75. We have received donations of $125 to date and this happened without any publicity. We feel certain that many of you would like to contribute to this worthy cause. We are placing canisters in several locations for your convenience. If you do not wish to use the canisters, please call one of the firemen and he will gladly pick up your donation.

One other method is available and it serves you as well. You can purchase a home smoke detector, made by the Honeywell Company. It sets off an alarm when smoke is present (this is before an appearance of fire) and permits those precious minutes for escape and possibly saving the structure from extensive damage due to quick action on your part. Proceeds from these sales will be used toward the above purchase. We prefer to demonstrate the detector so you understand its function. You can schedule an appointment by calling my number 337—3785.

We hope that you will assist us in the purchase of a resuscitator and we can assure you it will be greatly appreciated by all of the department members. We always hope that it is never needed, but just one call for its use and it saves a life makes it all worth while. Some of us have witnessed the results in our own families.

We don't wish to burden you with our problems, but we feel it is important enough to bring to the attention of each of you, especially since many have expressed a desire to help. Thanks for your usual kind cooperation.

We were informed March 20 that a nuit would be available in three weeks (if we can raise the money). Let's all show our appreciation and love for one and all by putting this project over the top in record time.

Federated Clubs Convention Hears Of Drawbacks To ERA

The 51st Annual Convention of the DeKalb County Federation of Clubs was held in the Waterloo United Methodist Church on March 20. Mrs, Gray Woodcox, president, of Garrett called the meeting to order at 1 pm. The collect for clubwomen was given and the pledges to the American and Christian flags were led by Mrs. Marion Dreibelbiss of Garrett, Dr. Joan Peppard, associate pastor of Auburn United Methodist Church, gave devotions, using Luke 12:22—29 as her text.

Mrs, Robert Gregory of the Progressive Literary Club of Waterloo welcomed the group and Mrs. W,F, Morgan of Garrett gave the response,

Mrs. Kenneth Crowe of Garrett, 12th District Federation of Clubs President, greeted the group and then explained a proposed change in the size of the district, and submitted a questionnaire for the delegates to complete.

The group sang "America the Beautiful," led by Mrs. Wayne Voss.

Mrs, Woodcox commended the clubs on their fine work as evidenced by the departmental reports she had received.

Mrs, Nell Souers then introduced Mrs, Alice Beuhler and Mrs. Sandy Houlihan of Fort Wayne who talked extensively about the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the United States Constitution. They pointed out that many of the special rights women now enjoy because they are biologically different from men would be taken away; that women would be subject to the draft and would be placed in combat along with men. They stated that women already have protection in the area of employment, but advantages they now have would be invalidated by the ERA. A question and answer period followed their presentation.

In the first seven games that Columbia University played in 1971, every game was decided by 3 points or less. The odds are tremendous against that happening for so many consecutive games. In the opener, Columbia lost to Lafayette 3—0, then they beat Princeton 22—20, lost to Harvard 21—19, beat Yale 15—14, beat Rutgers 17—16, lost to Cornell 24—21, and beat Dartmouth 31—29.

Ladies Lit'y Club

The Ladies Literary Club for their March 3 meeting went to Fort Wayne to the Civic Theatre to see Jean Kerr's play, "Finishing Touches," which was a three act comedy. The ladies went early and enjoyed dinner at the Ponderosa.

Besides the club members, the guests were Mrs. Whitney, Riverdale music teacher, Mrs. Marlan Furnish of Spencerville, Miss Lucinda Bevington of Northwood Institute at West Baden, and her friend, Miss Adabisi Shofu of Nigeria, Africa.

The club met at the home of Mrs. Harold Hamman March 19. Mrs. Yeiser led the collect and the pledge. For her lesson, Mrs. Roy Baker gave a book review of "Kitty My Rib" by Jane Moll. It was a delightful fictionalized biography of Katherine Luther, wife of Martin Luther.

For entertainment Mrs. Wilbur Yeiser read a poem about Arkansas with words starting with "S." Then she showed old Saint Joe News from the years 1905, 1890, etc.

After adjournment the hostess served light refreshments.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

It didn't take long for me to get some responses to various comments made last week. Three had to do with giving me a spelling lesson, the other related to dishwashers.

The ink was hardly dry, as the saying goes (but news ink never dries, it just soaks in) when the first spelling lesson was given me. As Number Four Son Mark folded papers last week, the conversation went like this:

"Dad."

"Yeah?"

"You know your first article in 'Around the Town'?"

"Yeah?"

"Well — — — Alcindor's name is spelled 'Lew'."

Then "TJ" Hemlinger, sports editor at the Auburn Evening Star, sent a marked copy of the Saint Joe News with red ink encircling "Lou Alcinder" and indicating it was supposed to be "Lou Alcindor." Also encircled was my "Kareem Abdul Jabaar" which "TJ" indicated should be "Kareem Abdul-Jabbar." I also goofed on "Lou Gerig" which should be "Lou Gehrig" (I don't know how I got the "h" out of there).

But on one other correction, I came out even. "TJ" indicated my "Muslem" should have been "Muslim." Somehow that one bothered me. So I consulted the Reader's Digest Great Encyclopedic Dictionary and found the following:

"Muslem—Moslem. Also, Muslim."

Further investigation in the World Book and in the Columbia Encyclopedia brought the indication that the listing of "Muslem" or "Muslim" depends upon the publication you are using to find out about it. There are several names used to refer to those who are followers of the Islam religion. So, I came out even on that one.

The other matter about the dishwashers at DeKalb Central and my environmental concern brought a phone call from a lady in the central district who said a recent TV special me'd by Jonathan Winters (let's see, did I spell that correctly?) included the information that an automatic dishwasher uses only three gallons of hot water.

I couldn't dispute her information, but unless you're talking about a new model produced since ecology became a hot topic, I can't accept three gallons as the amount of water used. And everyone doesn't have a new dishwasher "just like that" if the new ones are reasonable in water use.

It was a friendly conversation. The lady wasn't hot and bothered—in fact, she said, "I know what you're getting at—we have to pay for all those dishwashers" —"we" being the central district taxpayers.

Then Laven Hart came in Wednesday about church league matters, and while we were talking, he pulled a clipped copy of last week's paper out of the wastebasket and started marking it. I sensed what he was doing and said, "You're too late—two others have already told me about my spelling."

—I think he especially enjoyed pointing out my boo-boos. He's an educator, you know!

Star Editor Jim Kroemer was also in on the spelling investigation with "TJ."

—All of which made me feel pretty good—because it shows that more people read this paper than the subscription list might tend to indicate—and the slogan seen occasionally on the front page IS more truth than fiction: "More reader interest per square inch in Saint Joe's largest newspaper—Saint Joe's ONLY newspaper!"

And—I appreciate getting the corrections of any sort, because if you don't tell me, how am I going to learn???

114 Pints Of Blood Given

"It was fantastic," exclaimed Delores Hicov last week as she presented information about the recent visit of the Bloodmobile at Riverdale. 114 pints of blood were donated as the community responded to an urgent plea for blood to replenish the area blood bank.

Included were 14 teen donors, 31 first time donors, five one gallon donors and one three gallon donor.

Mrs. Hicov expressed her appreciation to everyone who worked that day, to Lois Hook for her help, those who baked cookies, the 6th grade boys, Chalmer Beaty, Mike Hicov and the Hicov kids, Ted Haberkorn and Phil Haberkorn for publicity, the ministers in the area for their cooperation, the Saint Joe Lions Club for their donation of money, County Line Cheese Company, Laub's Shell Mart, D&M Grocery and others.

The bloodmobile has come to Riverdale for eight years. It is the hope of Mrs. Hicov that the amount donated will stay at 100 plus pints each time the bloodmobile returns.

"For a small community, we can be very proud of Friday, March 21, 1975," Mrs. Hicoy said.

Bill Sipe was the three gallon donor. One gallon donors were Connie Hollabaugh, David Graber, Chalmer Beaty, Loretta Musser and Evana Keener.

The teen donors were Mary Bopp, Cynthia Melchi, Susan Kelham, Susan Hicov, Janet Jones, Marilyn Lengacher, Jay DePriest, Cindy Baker, Kent Strong, Kim Anderson, Tony Sechler, Paul D. Roberts, Tim Ross and Dick Kagey.

The list of adult donors will be published next week.

Another loom has been purchased by the two men and is also now in use at the Emporium.

Church League Re-Elects; Can't Expand To '12'

The Saint Joe Church League met Tuesday to plan for the coming season. Part of the discussion related to expanding the league. A motion was passed to go to 12 teams, if the schedule could accommodate that number. Last year there were nine teams. However, it was determined after the meeting that a maximum of 10 teams could be included in the league and still allow for potential rainouts and the annual All Star game. There is also an occasional need for playoffs of ties.

Entry fee was set at $50.

Tentative participants include Coburntown with two teams, Norris Chapel with two teams, Hicksville Church of Christ, the Lutherans, Newville United Methodist, Newville Church of Christ, Spencerville United Methodist, Saint Joe Church of Christ and Concord United Methodist. The last two played as a combined team last year.

Current officers were re-elected for the coming year. They are:

Ted Haberkorn, president.

Roger Cook, vice-president.

Lavon Hart, secretary-treas.

Information was presented concerning insurance coverage for church league participants. The matter was carried over until more information is available.

Tom Hol'baugh Hurls No-hitter

On a spring vacation trip to southern Indiana, Tom Hollabaugh hurled a no-hitter against Salem to open the DeKalb Eastside Blazers' 1975 baseball season with a bang. The locals also won the second game of a double header 5—3 after the 7—1 opener.

The Blazers scored all 7 runs of the opener in the third inning. The Lions scored their only run on a walk and two errors in the fourth inning.

Hollabaugh fanned 13.

Sealed Bids On Church Organ

Sealed bids will be received until Sunday, April 13, on a spinet organ no longer needed at St. Mark Lutheran Church in Saint Joe. The congregation was recently the recipient of a console organ, given by Paul Keller of Dayton, Ohio, son of MM Don Keller of south of Saint Joe.

Richard Strombeck indicated this week that a committee to dispose of the organ will meet at 2 pm April 13 to open sealed bids on the organ. Bids must be for not less than the minimum appraised price of $175.00. The organ was purchased new in 1960 and is in excellent condition according to the church organist, Ted Haberkorn, except for possible need for tube replacement. It was in regular use until a couple of months ago when the console organ was installed.

Language, Culture Suffering

I wonder if many people realize how they—and more significantly, their children—are being "brainwashed" as far as our vocabulary is concerned. Revolutionary changes are being made as a result of the "women's lib" or "feminist" movement. Another name for it is "unisex." Whatever you want to call it, the change is from an individual-oriented male and female society to an impersonal "person" society.

Publishers of school textbooks are making changes to eliminate the alleged "male domination" of previous textbooks, to eliminate the alleged subordinate role of the female in our society. Whether the public likes it or not—and whether the revolutionary reasoning is true or not—our language is being altered—AND much of the Judeo-Christian attitudes and beliefs concerning the complementary roles of both man and woman to one another. The change is so drastic that some words are BEING ELIMINATED from our vocabulary, in effect.

Of course, we need not make the changes in our own language if we don't want to. But the intensity with which the "unisex" movement has been carried on has been so intimidating as to affect teaching materials. Under such pressure, who of us wants to use a word somebody says is an indication of fundamental prejudice?

For instance, if a parent says to a daughter, "You should behave like a lady," that parent, by the standards of the feminist movement, has put the daughter in a category from which she should not stray. The modernists challenge, "What do you mean 'act like a lady'? What is a 'lady'? How does a 'lady' act—and why? What right have you to inflict your will upon your children"?

By the same token, a compliment like, "He behaved like a perfect gentleman" brings the question, "What is a 'gentleman'?" (But the feminists are not especially concerned about that one, "naturally.")

"Chivalry"—that is, the ages old tradition of a man's concern for the comfort and well-being of a woman—is out the window. Today's unisexists consider such concern as demeaning to a woman, an indication of an attitude of superiority of the male over the female. It has become almost an act to be ashamed of for a man to offer his chair to a woman in a doctor's waiting room, or to open a door and allow a woman to enter first. Certainly, not all women have accepted the new standards. BUT—the new standards are being established whether the American public likes it or not. And oftentimes it appears that others watch the female recipient of male courtesies to see how she will react, in light of today's "unisex" push.

In school textbooks, the publicized changes to eliminate "sex roles" in the stories the kids read are being made without proof positive that our society as a whole wants those changes, without proof positive that domination of the male and subordination of the female ARE indicated by textbook stories. It's a matter of pressure—and the pressure of a zealous group is having its way, a group I personally think is a definite minority. But they really work at it and get themselves into positions of responsibility through which they achieve their goals.

If you ask me, we're not "moving forward" under such changes; we're stepping backward. And much of the "spice of life" is being lost at the hands of women's libbers and unisexists.

Mr. Roush, I Agree!

I attended Wednesday's session at the court house at which Fourth District Congressman J. Edward Roush met with representatives of the various taxing units in the county to discuss economic problems of the nation and of the various communities themselves. He urged them to get in on the action with regard to providing for the federal government's practical needs for goods and services. The Hoosier state is considered somewhat backward for not doing so and for not seeking more financial aid through government grants.

Several topics were discussed. Many of the thoughts expressed by Mr. Roush I do not agree with, which is no surprise. But instead of doting on the negative, this time I'm going to point out one, maybe two, thoughts which he expressed to which I said a silent "amen."

The principal idea which stuck in my mind came from Mr. Roush in response to a question from a woman about the spread in dollars and cents between what the farmer is getting for his food production activities and what the consumer pays in providing for everyday family food needs. The Congressman noted that, as was suggested by the questioner, government regulations probably add to the cost (although the "middleman" was mentioned, as he usually is, as reaping excessive profits). But the significant thought the Congressman added with greater emphasis was something like, "The cost goes up because of the CONSUMER who accepts or demands more and more 'convenience' packaged products."

If you ask me, Mr. Roush hit the nail smack on the head right there. An inspection of groceers' shelves and frozen food cases shows an extremely large number of items "ready for the oven" or "ready to eat, just warm" or ready mixed ("fancier") or some such convenience appeal. The only way such products can be offered is to pay somebody to do most of the work of combining ingredients and pay somebody to package the finished product. As the Congressman noted from personal experience, it's nice to grab a small envelope from the grocer's shelf, pour some hot water over its contents in a cup or bowl and have some soup. "But I am certain it costs much, much more that way than the bowl of soup my wife prepares herself."

I have noted over the years these "convenience" items and their costs (to the extent that the Mrs. hates to have me go along for a grocery shopping trip because I'm like an ogre looking over her shoulder to see what she picks off the shelves.) A can of corn—plain—costs so much. With some red pepper added the same can costs a nickel more, or it did. I haven't checked recently. For a dime you could get a red pepper and cut it up yourself for several cans of corn. Plain corn flakes cost so much. But get the sugar-coated flakes (even before the price of sugar went out of sight last year) and you pay a tremendous premium for that sugar coating.

I think one of the worst crimes against man is the frozen "TV dinner." It's gratifying to read in recent weeks that nutritionists are now pointing out the lower nutritional value of those "convenient" dinners. Whenever I see a woman shopping at a supermarket and grabbing a supply of those frozen dinners, my heart goes out in sympathy for the old man and the kids. The same grief is felt when a customer grabs a bag or two of frozen peeled and cut french fries and pays three times as much as for the same weight of fresh potatoes.

So, for once I agree with Congressman J. Edward Roush whose comments about the consumers' part in raising food prices may be left unnoticed by others because it's embarrassing—they got "caught" when they were trying to find another party to blame—caught because the Congressman for once told it like it is.

Mr. Roush hit upon the heart and core of much of today's high living costs problem—the laziness of many citizens reflected in willingness to pay someone else to prepare certain food items. And there is always the absence in those prepared foods of the most important ingredient of all—a generous amount of "TLC"—tendering, loving care.

Unfortunately, general agreement on such a point only recognizes the problem. What is more important is answering why it has happened. I suggest that much of the fault lies in our legislative halls whose occupants have catered so much to the whims of the public. If Congress grants favors often, the members will be approached with increasing frequency. Too often in my lifetime have legislators catered to pressure groups and voted for bills known to be undesirable in whole or in part. Mr. Roush admitted Wednesday that he had misgivings about more than one provision in the just-passed tax rebate and tax credit bill. But he voted for the bill "because of its overall intent" to stimulate the economy.

It seems to me that if half the provisions were questionable (as his comments seemed to indicate), the total legislation contained in it was more wrong than right. We now have, in effect, 50 percent good and 50 percent bad legislation added to the tangled mass already existing before.

In legislative matters, I consider 50 percent good a poor average. There ought to be more "no's" coming from our legislators to stop the habit of running to Washington for every little problem that comes up.

Postal Department 'Used'

I purchased some stamps last week. I have editorialized (and written to my Congressmen in the past) about the wastefully large stamps which have been issued for a long time as "commemorative" items of value to stamp collectors. Last week's purchase was of that large size—and there is something new to be concerned about. That something is that the postal department is being used, or the department itself is using the stamps, to "sell" an idea which is, if not political, then at least a subject of debatable value. The stamp has the wording:

"Collective bargaining — out of conflict . . . . . accord."

Collective bargaining is NOT an American attribute. It is a tool of power, sought after by those who benefit from the threat of public inconvenience to gain advantage for a particular group. In this case, it is very significant, because the over 700,000 postal department employees are preparing to present their increased demands in the near future under collective bargaining.

So, once again, I have gone to the typewriter to hunt and peck a complaint to our Congressmen about the use of the postal department for purposes contrary to the public welfare. The large stamps are wasteful of natural resources; it takes two or three times more paper to issue these large stamps as compared to the traditional small size stamp.

More importantly, the message on the new stamp violates the views, the opinions and perhaps even the rights of many American citizens who recognize the deterioration of individual liberties by compulsory regulations such as collective bargaining. It is very definitely a "union" promotion.

To use postage stamps to "sell" collective bargaining is an indication of a lack of respect for the neutrality essential in carrying out the functions of governmental agencies in a free society.

Every postmaster, every employee of the post office department who sells this particular stamp to the public is guilty of disseminating propaganda contrary to the interest and welfare of individual Americans who believe in individual liberty and the right to private opinion without destroying the neutrality of governmental agencies in their functions in serving the public. This may sound harsh. But if Richard Nixon, as President, "should have known what was going on" in the Watergate affair and "should have done something about it" as many condemning Americans have stated, should not every government employee also be held responsible for participating in questionable activities???

The U.S. Postal Department has no right to distribute a stamp promoting collective bargaining. The department has shown an attitude of selfish irresponsibility at the top levels in carrying out such a move which is most properly described as "unethical."

Our local postmaster informs me that a commemorative stamp is printed in a single run of a certain amount. So the damage has been done. But it probably would be helpful, if you have a concern similar to mine in the matter, to write to our Fourth District Representative and our two Senators to express concern over such unethical practices in the postal department. It is the only tool you have as an individual citizen to combat the influence of labor leadership which uses large sums of money and other resources (such as postage stamps!) to get its way.

More Tax Discrimination

Two weeks ago I mentioned the discrimination which is denied some of us but proposed and practiced by our lawmakers who have the power to force their will upon the public.

The Democrat-controlled Senate proposed a tax cute and rebate program of over $30 billion. The President has signed a compromise bill amounting to something over $20 billion. This is bad enough just in dollars and cents, in view of our exploding national deficit. But even worse is the discrimination contained in the tax rebate bill. It is rather confusing, because the Congressonal majority has used accusations of discrimination against others as a pet vote-getter, the same majority which now leads the nation further into economic chaos with a supposedly "beneficial" program which utilizes discrimination.

What am I talking about? Well, one of the "benefits" is a tax credit of 5 percent for those who purchase a new home between March 13 and December 31 this year, a tax credit up to a maximum of $2,000. Mind you, now, this is not a deduction from income; this is a TAX CREDIT—which means subtracting dollars from your tax bill.

If a person buys a $20,000 home, a $1,000 reduction could be made in the person's tax bill. A home worth $40,000 or more would bring a $2,000 reduction in income taxes.

This is very significant, inasmuch as the Democrat majority in Congress which pushed the proposal paints itself as the champon of the low and middle income group. Yet, this proposal brings the greatest benefit to upper-middle and higher income groups. (How many low and middle income families can afford a $40,000 home?—or a $20,000 home?) A $2,000 reduction in TAXES is a very nice tax cut. It beats a $2,000 deduction from income all to pieces.

Another "gem" in the tax proposal is this: a $50 payment (originally proposed to be a $100 payment) this year to every person who receives a Social Security or Railroad Retirement system check. With the Social Security program in a bind as to how to continue financing the program in the near future, this handout is unbelievable. In the face of a deficit in Social Security funding, the Senate majority pushed for and got an "economic remedy" which means SPENDING MORE!

We must be crazy.

Rebates Increase Burden

Just the interest on the national debt at the present time amounts to about $105 per year for every man, woman and child in the nation—if my figuring is close to being accurate on the basis of a $400 billion debt, 200 million people and 6 percent interest.

That $105 is close to what a lot of families will get on the tax rebate program just signed by President Gerald Ford.

So, in effect, we are not getting ahead with such a rebate; we are merely getting back ONE INDIVIDUAL share of debt interest in debtedness—which will add to next year's national budgetary deficit—which means we will go farther in debt—which means there will be more interest due per person!

Now—what good is that tax rebate going to do you???

Are they "buying" us with "bread and games"???

U.S. Power Is Gone

Daily TV shows millions of Cambodians and South Vietnamese—the aged, the lame, women and children—fleeing the sweep of the Hanoi Juggernaut, armed to the teeth with the latest USSR weaponry.

Yet when the President asks not for our men, but for money and arms so the beleaguered troops can hold up till the rainy season, the Uriah Heaps (the Congressional majority—Ed.) argue; "Why throw good money after bad? . . . . Let's wait till the dust settles. . . . It's a civil war and we shouldn't interfere," And, above all, "The more we help, the longer the war will go on." Translated, this says, "Millions for tribute to our foes, but not a cent for defense to our friends."

. . . . And, of course, the domino theory is the bunk. As I heard Helen Gahagan Douglas say in a debate when asked how she could justify Stalin's seizure of the Baltic states, "All Russia wants is to have good neighbors on her borders." And swallowing them was a quick way. . . . Come to think of it, that would justify Hitler, too.

Hanoi signed a peace pact—now broken—but only because Nixon had mined the Haiphong waters; give Kissinger credit for being a miracle man in both the Far and Mid-East, but remember at that point he represented the power of America, which both Hanoi and the Arabs respected. But now with a veto-proof Congress having shorn him of all power by telegraphing its intentions, that magic no longer works. And, hailing us as disunited, Hanoi becomes Hanoi again and Egypt says, "We lay down the terms."

Small wonder that both Thailand and the Phillipines doubt our pledges are worth a farthing. At the moment, we may still call ourselves the head of the Free World—but where are our followers? Even Portugal is gone.

So don't ask me to cheer for this veto-proof Congress, which has brought us to low estate. On this point, include me out.

Look In The Mirror

No inconsiderable part of the American public would like to find a scapegoat and hold him (or a number of scapegoats) responsible for the present afflictions of these United States. But that way lies worse folly.

. . . . It is true enough that we have had too few strong and courageous public men. Yet our public men, in legislative or executive office, have done, by and large, what the American public wished them to do.

. . . . I mean this: our economic instability, our enfeebled position in foreign affairs, our urban decay, and our moral confusion (public and private) all result from policies and notions which formerly were very popular, and still are popular in many quarters. Sometimes these sorry policies and notions were approved by the majority of the American people; sometimes perhaps only a vocal minority approved them, but the majority was too apathetic or ignorant to resist them.

Take inflation. We are in this mess because most Americans demanded more governmental services, more creature comforts, higher incomes (the "revolution of rising expectations") without being willing to work harder for all these things—indeed, expecting at the same time to work less hard.

. . . . In fine, friends, if some of our fellow citizens most eager to discover scapegoats really were after the truth—why, they would look into a mirror. Yet in any age, too few people are willing to confess "mea culpa"—my sin.

President Hoover, a good and able man, was made the American scapegoat of 1932. President Ford, an amiable and conscientious man, will be made the American scapegoat of 1976, if the economy does not miraculously recover. Nevertheless, the real culprit is "just some ordinary Joe" who demands more of life than life can afford.

No Advance Knowledge

. . . . James Neal, chief prosecutor in the Watergate trial, was the one man most intensely concerned with proving the guilty guilty.

Neal says that when all of the evidence had been heard, one fact was indisputable: former President Nixon HAD NO ADVANCE KNOWLEDGE of the bugging and burglary of Democratic headquarters.

Some of the defendants sought to convince the court that they were merely "following orders"—they sought to blame the President for their own involvement. But the chief prosecutor says the tapes show that Nixon knew nothing about the burglary in advance and was surprised to learn of it.

What Nixon did wrong was to try to cover up the illegal act when he did find out.

. . . . I've heard some of the most respected names on Capitol Hill say off the record that they, in a like situation, WOULD HAVE DESTROYED THE TAPES which drove Nixon from office.

. . . . G. Gordon Liddy, one of the Watergate burglars, says Nixon was not ruthless enough. Had he been, he'd have had only to say that he made the tapes for his own use and destroyed them for his own reasons, and that would have been that.

Will the next President threatened with embarrassment be more ruthless or less? Well, we'll see.

Congress On The Spot

. . . . .But it is dawning on some people here (Washington, D.C.) that, having yielded the initiative to Congress, he (President Ford) may now be in a position to shift some of the responsibility to the Democrats on Capitol Hill.

The Democrats have given away most of their excuses in advance. They have broken the power of the committee chairmen and snapped the stranglehold of the "conservative coalition." They have taken power in their party caucus, and they can expect to be judged in 1976 on the record that they — more than the President—are writing this year.

St. Joe-Concord Township VFD

—by Guy Mausteller

Before our last article, we had one call, at the Byron Richardson residence on County Road 60 east. When the boys arrived home from school they found the house full of smoke. They were shown a very fine film on home fire hazards and were instructed on the proper method of reporting a fire, just a few hours earlier by members of our department. They learned their lesson well as they gave full instructions when they called the fire department. It was a tremendeus help when our men arrived and we are very proud of the three boys.

We have a regular business meeting each month, and this is conducted by elected officers: Joe Robinson, president and fire chief; Harold Yeiser, assistant chief and vice president; Pat Crow, secretary; and Guy Mausteller, treasurer. All special events and projects are placed in the hands of committees.

The first Tuesday evening of each month is known as "Training Meeting." No department can be any better than the trained people who make it up. Since there is no time to teach when an emergency arises, it is necessary to have actual training sessions so that all members become familiar with every phase of fire fighting. Extensive training and experience are the vital links in the protection of life and property.

We recently touched off a brush pile which was saturated with fuel oil, motor oil, gasoline and a few tires. This was a surprise run and every operation was timed.

From the time the call was placed, the pumper truck arrived at the scene a mile and a quarter from the fire hall five minutes later. Two minutes later there was water spraying from two booster lines. Just three minutes more was needed for the tanker to arrive with 220 gallons of water and proper connections made to the pumper unit. The 1½ inch line was ready and the additional water supply was in use immediately.

Had this been a building fire, a 1000 gallon portable tank would have been set up and filled by the tanker. The tanker would then be free to haul water from the nearest hydrant or pond.

With the aid of our two-way radio, we were able to dispatch the equipment van and within five minutes we had a power generator and lighting equipment on the scene. The timing was excellent.

The next training session was held in town, using the two pumpers. They were sent to two separate pre-arranged areas with instructions. Again each operation was timed. Several errors were made and these were discussed when we returned to the station. The experience gained by this one hour training will pay off when an emergency arises.

We learned one other thing from our surprise run on the burn fire. Your fire chief and myself can never qualify as "arsonists" as it took us a good half hour, 30 gallons of fuel, a bundle of paper and a half dozen fusees to get the contrary thing started.

Flu Is More Than A Cold

Flu—like having a cold? No, it's worse. A cold usually means just a stuffy nose and scratchy throat. Flu (influenza) means sickness that makes you go to bed and keeps you down for a while. And it can end fatally if other troubles complicate it.

Influenza is a fairly brief, severe sickness that is highly catching. It spreads from one person to another. Many people in a community may get it at the same time. It makes the windpipe and throat feel very sore and hot; muscles are weak and achy.

People at high risk are ones with emphysema, tuberculosis or other respiratory diseases, heart trouble, high blood pressure and other chronic illnesses.

Flu seems to come on suddenly. But actually, it takes one to three days to develop. When it comes out in the open, you may notice chills, fever, headached, backache, muscular pains and lack of appetite.

Other common discomforts include a cold in the head, sore throat, dry cough, weakness, pain and burning in the eyes, sensitivity to light and nausea.

If you have symptoms of influenza, you should:

—Call your doctor.

—Go to bed. Even if your aches and pains and sore throat turn out to be nothing but a cold, bed rest will help you get well sooner.

—Keep warm and drink plenty of liquids if your doctor can't see you right away. A washcloth wrung out of cold water and placed on the forehead may relieve the feeling of fever.

—DO NOT take medicine your doctor does not prescribe.

—Stay in bed until the doctor says you can get up. He will probably tell you to stay in bed for at least two days after the fever is gone.

—Avoid exposure to other sicknesses after you are out of bed. Flu lowers your resistance.

For more information about flu or other respiratory diseases, contact the Northeast Indiana Lung Association, 802 West Wayne in Fort Wayne 46804, "the Christmas Seal people."

Lions Club

—Andy Crow, reporter

The Saint Joe-Spencerville Lions Club met March 24 at the Spencerville United Methodist Church at 6:30 pm. Our guests for the evening were Richard Mack, Boy Scout leader; and Tim Kuker, new owner of the restaurant in Saint Joe.

Lion President Joe Smith gave a short report on the District Convention. A friend of many Lions in the area, Glen Stebing of Fort Wayne, announced his candidacy for Lions International Director. President Smith also reported on the Zone Meeting held at Auburn.

Our next meeting will be a special tribute to the senior athletes at Eastside High School. A special meeting time is at 7 pm and we will meet at Spencerville United Methodist Church.

Richard Mack had a few comments about the Boy Scouts. The troop has 17 active Scouts and meets every Tuesday night at the Community Club at 7 pm.

President Smith then reminded club members of the upcoming Lions State Convention to be held April 18, 19 and 20 at Bloomington.

Next on the agenda was the appointment of Frank Seehler, Harold Murphy and Jerry Storer to the nominating committee Election of officers will be held April 28. Also noted were seven members who have not yet paid this year's dues (names to appear at later date).

Lion James Kline then introduced our speaker of the evening, James Miller, who gave a short talk on trading on the Chicago Board of Trade. Of those who trade in the commodities market, 95 percent are losers, 5 percent are gainers. Mr. Miller then tried to explain two separate types of traders, fundamental analysts and technical analysts.

A short board meeting followed the regular meeting.

The most heralded quarterback since Joe Namath to come into the National Football League is Terry Bradshaw, who was labeled "Instant Superstar" while he was still playing at obscure Louisiana Tech. As expected, Bradshaw was the pros' No. 1 draft in 1970 and long suffering Pittsburg fans began to dream of the first title in their team's history. But in two years Bradshaw worked no miracles. After an exceptional rookie's exhibition season, he struggled to a 38.1 completion mark, worst in the NFL. In 1971 he started strong, faltered, then came on to finish with a 54.4 mark.

BANKING IS EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

Flimflam And Bunco—Not Very Funny Games

Call it "flimflam" or "bunco," it's still a fraud or a swindle. While the names may sound like the latest TV-advertised parlor game, the player is actually a "con artist" or confidence man, and the victim is likely to be YOU.

The American Bankers Association (ABA) reports that the current economic situation has multiplied the number of con games in operation. Not only are crooks working harder to make a fast buck, consumers, it seems, are less cautious about withdrawing their savings at the suggestion of swindlers in hopes of beating inflation. And, with the likelihood of tax rebates this spring, the number and variety of swindles is not likely to diminish.

It's unfortunately true that senior citizens seem to be the biggest group of victims. In fact, it's been estimated that 90 per cent of the people taken in are over 70 years of age. Within this group, those approached most often are older ladies living alone. And yet, no one is immune.

How can you protect yourself? It helps to be aware of certain key words that usually tip off a con game. Be on guard, says the ABA, whenever you hear the words: "get rich quick," "something for nothing," "secret plan," or "this opportunity won't be here tomorrow."

Two common swindles involving bank savings are the Pigeon Drop and the Bank Examiner schemes. In the Pigeon Drop, two criminals obtain the confidence of a likely victim and claim they would like to share with him a large find of money. The victim is then asked to donate some "good faith money" to them while waiting for his share of the find. During the wait, of course, the criminals run off with the cash they have been given.

The Bank Examiner swindle is put into operation by a person claiming to be a bank examiner who needs help in catching a dishonest teller. To cooperate with the examiner, the victim is asked to withdraw from his savings account a large amount of money. The con artist then promises to return the cash to the bank, but instead takes off with it.

Although the person posing as a bank examiner may sound very convincing, don't fall for that line. The ABA says under no circumstances will a bank examiner, FBI agent or other law enforcement official request a bank customer to withdraw cash from an account.

One final tip: while the variety of swindles is huge and only limited by the imagination of the con artist, all swindles have one thing in common — eventually the victim is asked for money. If you ever receive such a request, inform an officer of your bank and the local police department. Not only will you be helping yourself, you might prevent the loss of a neighbor's life savings.

Mr. Houston And Related Events

CHAPTER 1—THE ENCOUNTER

During pleasant weather, the old man sat on a bench under a tree on the courthouse lawn and whittled. When the weather was bad, he sat on a bench inside the courthouse and whittled.

The old man said his name was Emit Houston. Emit was peculiar. But his peculiarities caused him no loss of respect among the townspeople. Indeed, they seemed to endear him all the more. He had many admirers, chief of whom was the mayor.

Emit said he couldn't read or write because he never went to school. Emit was not telling the truth. Emit was educated. He was very well educated.

Emit's manner of speaking certainly supported his claim of illiteracy. It was opinionated, caustic, and colloquial. To Emit's way of thinking, he was ashamed to reveal his education. That is why he took great care to conceal it, and that is why he feigned illiteracy. The mayor knew of Emit's innocent deception, but he would tell no one, not even Emit.

What the townspeople thought Emit lacked in education, he made up for in whittling. It made no difference to Emit whether his whittling took place inside or outside the courthouse. He whittled. He made all sorts of whistles and little baskets and other things. None of them ever appeared to be worth his efforts, but they made the children happy. When he had finished a trinket, he usually gave it to a child whose parents he knew to be of less than modest means. The children came by often. They loved Emit, and they did not, except for his hat, consider him in the least peculiar.

The Ladies Temperance Movement thought Emit peculiar. They also thought Emit had no business whittling in the courthouse. They had already sounded out the mayor's opinion on that matter, and the mayor sounded as if he considered it of little consequence to the Ladies Temperance Movement whether Emit whittled within or without the courthouse. He rather left them with the impression that Emit's boundary line did not end at the courthouse doors — either going in or coming out.

But, the Ladies Temperance Movement was an outfit to be reckoned with. The first hint the mayor had of their greater resolve was when he stopped receiving invitations to their every—fourth—Tuesday social events. He attributed that stroke of good fortune to Providence and to Emit's whittling.

A young man, who worked in the courthouse, had also noticed Emit's whittling. And Emit's hat. He was not at all concerned about Emit's whittling. His concern was far more noble than that. But he was curious about Emit's hat. Some day his curiosity would surpass his better judgment, and he would broach that subject to Emit. And when he did, he would prove the wisdom of all those who had considered it unwise to do so.

The young man's concern was to become a politician. In pursuit of that celebrated calling, he made two firm resolutions: to obtain a law degree, and to practice speaking. Though he did well at his studies, he gave considerably more attention to talking. In fact, he pursued that aspect of his calling unflaggingly. He was given to flowery speech, and would often use fifty-cent words when less expensive ones would have done as well. He did not know it, but once he mastered the art of being noncommital, he would very likely be the State's next senator.

Emit was aware of the young man's ambition. He had observed his comings and goings since the young man first began work at the courthouse. He concluded that the young man had the ability to become whatever he chose to become. But, if he chose to become a politician, then he would do well to give more thought to what he intended to say before he said it. If he could do that, the contrast might at least ensure his recognition.

Emit also knew the young man's name, and he knew that it would not be long until the young man decided to favor him with his rhetoric. Emit would soon know if the young man had the mettle to become a politician. Emit was correct. It was not long.

The young man knew that a good politician sometimes learns the name of a voter prior to introducing himself. He happened to choose Emit as the first upon whom he would practice this subtle bit of flattery. But, the young man did what a good politician tries very hard not to do: he mispronounced Emit Houston's name!

"You're Emmett Houston. I'm — —"

"Young man, you said exactly four words so far and got two right. If you had looked, you would a-seen my name painted on the back slat of this bench. And it don't say Emmett EEW-stun. It says EE—mit WHO—stun! And if you don't intend to call me that, then don't come around."

The young man was astounded. But he was a quick thinker. There was only one way out of this lion's den. He would present a condescending attitude and humor the old man.

"Well, now, aren't you the different one! Be assured, sir, I understand. You need not concern yourself with having offended me. Now, if you will move just a bit to the side, perhaps I can see your name"

But Emit did not relent.

"I ain't movin' so you can see what you ought to have seen to start with. If you want to see my name, look on the bench in the courthouse. And other than bein' a Republican, I ain't no different than anybody else in this town."

The young man wondered what a good politician would do, were he to have a voter as hostile as Emit. Well, he would probably take his leave. And that is what the young man decided to do.

"I can see that I've angered you. I'll come back another time."

And he would.

"If you do, make sure you got my name right. And if you get any notion of askin' me about this hat, then you better bring a crutch. It'll help you get up the courthouse steps."

The young man returned to the courthouse.

Emit returned to his whittling.

The mayor returned from vacation.

And, the Ladies Temperance Movement returned to see the mayor.

The meeting was called to order at Doug Jewel's house on March 29 at 1:30.

Doug called the meeting to order and had roll call taken. 9 were present including Robyn Loy who is a new member. We then had the minutes of the last meeting read and approved. Doug then read a letter we received from the Auburn—Cord—Duesenberg Museum. The letter stated that we could use the room in the museum any time. After finishing the business section of our meeting we went to business on our Convention Project, to be held in May. We are doing an old blacksmith scene. We decided to wear centennial style clothes for this old year. We then went outside and selected the different parts each member would explain. We then went in and had refreshments. For recreation we played basketball. The meeting was then adjourned.

The true essence of freedom is not in the extent to which human rights are exercised; rather, it is in the restraint exercised in pursuing those rights.

Dissent in a free society is like the cultivation of the crops in the field. A little agitation promotes growth; too much destroys the roots.

In unity there is strength; in diversity there is freedom.

Self-discipline is a matter of courage. Anyone can do as he pleases; but it takes courage to do as one ought.

Wisdom is like good whiskey. The best of ingredients are essential; but the proof requires age.

The dissenters of the 1960's-70's sometimes point to Jesus Christ to justify their actions, claiming Him to be the greatest revolutionary of all time, attempting by such comparison to give a holy aura to their own ambitions. They overlook one thing: Jesus did not force Himself nor his teachings upon anyone. He spoke, surely, positively, then left the decision to His hearers. Thus did He grant to all men the freedom God created. Today's reformers could well be admonished, as in the Scriptures: "Go then and do likewise."

Follow me the rungs on the ladder to success.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

I did Roy Bowser a disservice, unknowingly, last week in not mentioning that he had a lot to do with the renovating of the rug looms now in use at The Sisters' Emporium.

I also goofed in not making a front page announcement of the new feature by our local anonymous author.

When I was at the bank last week, Bonnie Hopkins was being waited on by Mary Beatty while Charlotte was doing my bookwork at the tellers' windows. Bonnie commented about whether or not I was going to bank at Saint Joe, and noted that Mary was going to be in the branch bank at Saint Joe. I said, "Hot dog!"—and that's when Charlotte's dirty giggle started.

I might have gotten upset, except that with that pretty, feminine and frilly outfit Charlote was wearing, I just couldn't get mad.

Somebody must think I am a real nut. (No comments, please.)

This week I received two post cards from the extended South Bend area with radical comments about our national and the world situation. One said:

"No man above the law???? Then why are we allowing the networks, NY Times, Wash. Post, Time magazine, Newsweek magazine and their Commie jackals in Congress, education, religion, labor and bureaucracy, to escape criminal prosecution for encouraging Hanoi to hold out 5 extra years against two U.S. Presidents, thereby causing 4 times the deaths among our boys in Vietnam??? And now this scum is attacking both the CIA and FBI!!! Are treason, and possibly murder, indictments being sought???? Why not!!!! Why in the name of God not!!!!!

"The networks are 100% Commie! Our Congress is 98% Commie!! They are collaborating to murder former allies the world over by withdrawing aid!!!"

The other card had more of the same

Unfortunately, changes in the postal regulations in recent years have eliminated the postmarks which formerly gave the post office and date, so it is not possible to tell where the post cards were mailed from, except that it was in the "465" area.

I think the former postmarks ought to be reinstated—city, state and date—for identification purposes such as this instance. (Or did they stop the old practice so you can't always tell how long it took to get your letter from once place to the other???)

—Anyhow—from the content of those cards, somebody must have a mailing list of some sort, and I don't like their use of it—not with that kind of stuff.

The remaining list of blood donors must be held over until next week.

Sealed Bids On Church Organ

Sealed bids will be received until Sunday, April 13, on a spinet organ no longer needed at St. Mark Lutheran Church in Saint Joe. The congregation was recently the recipient of a console organ, given by Paul Keller of Dayton, Ohio, son of MM Don Keller of south of Saint Joe.

Richard Strombeck indicated this week that a committee to dispose of the organ will meet at 2 pm April 13 to open sealed bids on the organ. Bids must be for not less than the minimum appraised price of $175.00. The organ was purchased new in 1960 and is in excellent condition according to the church organist, Ted Haberkorn, except for possible need for tube replacement. It was in regular use until a couple of months ago when the console organ was installed.

Music Festival At PTO Tuesday

The Riverdale PTO will meet next Tuesday, April 15, at 7:30 pm in the school cafetorium.

The program will be the annual Spring Music Festival under the direction of Mrs. Whitney.

There will be no business meeting, according to PTO president Lynn Kaiser, with the entire evening devoted to the enjoyment of the students' efforts in music. Refreshments will be served.

Hist'l Society Meets Sunday

A meeting of the DeKalb County Historical Society will be held Sunday, April 13, at 2 pm at People's Federal Savings and Loan Association in Auburn.

Mrs. Sharon Zonker, co-sponsor of "Little Hoosiers" at East Auburn Elementary School, will present a program on "The Auburn Rubber Company and Its Toys."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Zonker are history buffs and collect antiques with a special slant toward Civil War artifacts.

The public is invited to attend the meeting.

Seek Crossing Flashers

Frank Laub, president of the Board of County Commissioners, said this week that the members of the board are investigating the possibilities of having set flasher signals installed at certain rural railroad crossings. On the list of possible flasher sites are crossings on County Road 60 west of Saint Joe and County Road 68 west of Spencerville. The latter was the scene of a serious accident recently.

Mr. Laub indicated that Federal aid is apparently available on a 90—10 basis for qualifying crossings, with the federal government providing 90% of the cost and the county 10 %.

Fuel Adjustment Factor Drops

April bills of Indiana & Michigan Electric Company's 420,000 customers will reflect a lower fuel adjustment for the third consecutive month, the company said last week.

The decline is attributed to two factors related to fuel costs.

The cost of oil for generation of electric power at the company's Twin Branch Plant to meet environmental regulations has decreased slightly, and the company is now receiving most of its coal from its regular sources rather than through higher-priced spot purchases as was necessary during the coal miners' strike.

Another factor in the diminishing fuel cost adjustment was a reduction in the generation at the Twin Branch Plant caused by industrial production cutbacks and customer conservation efforts. This decrease in demand allowed I&M to produce a larger proportion of its power supply at its lower-cost plants. Low sulfur oil burned at Twin Branch costs approximately four times as much as coal.

There is no assurance, however, that the fuel cost adjustment will continue to decline. Terms of the recent miners' contract settlement are starting to be reflected in higher coal costs. And additional federal regulations such as the new strip mining bill now under consideration will cause coal costs to increase, the latter by as much a $2.50 a ton.

The company said it is too early to determine what effect the nuclear generating unit at the Cook Plant will have on the fuel adjustment, even though that plant is operating on schedule and is generating 655,000 kilowatts.

The company is continuing its efforts to provide electricity at the lowest possible price possible. However, the "uphill battle" is in some respects beyond company control. Company executive vice president Robert Kopper said that some priorities need to be changed. As one example, the scales are too much weighted toward the aesthetic (beauty in appearance) aspect of our environment and not balanced toward the ability of the consumer to pay.

Cons'n Tour Set For April 23

The DeKalb County Soil and Water Conservation District is hosting a conservation tour for the county Wednesday, April 23, starting at 12:30 pm at the Exhibit Hall at Auburn. The tour is being conducted in cooperation with the Cooperative Extension Service, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, and the Soil Conservation Service.

At 12:30 those attending will view of program on "Erosion and Sediment," prepared by the Special Task Force on Sediment Control. At 1:30 the group will view a multi purpose farm pond built by John M. Smith, in connection with wildlife, water supply, flood control and recreation.

At 2:30 the group will view the first aluminum drop spillway installed in the county for erosion control on the Leo Sarrazine farm.

Finally, at 3 pm the group will travel to view the animal waste holding facilities at the Buckmaster and Sons beef operation, beef on concrete slats with an earthen lagoon.

The tour is open to all citizens of DeKalb County.

Fund Over $400

When asked about progress of the local fire department's drive for funds to purchase a new resuscitator, Steve Monroe reported this week that over $400 is now in the fund. Total cost of a new resuscitator has been reported at approximately $625.

Further donations will be gratefully accepted.

Cong. J. Edward Roush Calls New Stamp 'Unfair, Questionable'

The following letter was received this week from Fourth District Representative J. Edward Roush concerning a recent issue of postage stamps on which collective bargaining was promoted. An editorial on the subject appeared in last week's issue of The News.

Congress of the United States
Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

Thank you for calling the use of the "collective bargaining" stamp by the Post Office to my attention.

I agree with you the use of this stamp is apparently somewhat unfair and questionable.

I have written to the Office of the Postmaster General in this matter. I have asked him who and how designs are approved and what rationale was used in the approving of this particular stamp. I have also asked him if a "right to work" stamp had ever been issued.

I will contact you again when I receive his reply.

Best wishes.

Yours sincerely,
J. Edward Roush
Member of Congress

Library Week April 13-19

The Eastside High School Library Club reminds everyone that April 13—19 is National Library Week. The Library Club at Eastside is promoting this event through commercially produced radio spots, posters and varied displays in the high school. Throughout the week, free games and puzzles will be distributed to patrons who enter the library.

The theme for this year is "Libraries Have It." The theme serves to further emphasize the many and varied resources that are available through school and local libraries—records, cassettes, transparencies, films, slides, art and study prints, recreational reading, reference books—the list is almost endless.

National Library Week is considered the ideal time to visit the school library and see what's happening.

Kindergarten Enrollment In May

The first week of May has been designated as the time to enroll students who will be attending kindergarten in September, Principal Charles Ray has announced.

The annual kindergarten roundup will be held at Riverdale School Tuesday, May 6, and at Butler Elementary School Thursday, May 8. The Riverdale meeting will begin at 3:30 pm while the Butler meeting begins at 4 pm.

Registration of students will take place at these meetings. A talk will be given by Dr. Leo Robinson, school psychometrist, concerning the readiness of children for school along with information about the schools and their kindergarten programs. Kindergarten teachers will be introduced to the parents.

Pupil enrollment forms will be available at the meetings as will the necessary medical forms to be completed by the family doctor. In addition, a copy of the child's birth certificate must be presented at the time of enrollment.

CHAPTER 2—A FAMILIAR SYMBOL

The mayor arrived at his office early that Monday morning. He wanted to put things in order, for he and his wife had spent the past week at a Canadian fishing resort. As he crossed the room to open the drapes, he saw it. There it was, positioned squarely in the center of his desk top.

Stamped in inch—high red letters on the front and reverse of the large envelope was a warning to prying eyes that might be interested in the mayor's mail. It said: MOST PERSONAL— FOR THE MAYOR'S EYES ONLY.

The mayor took some pride in thinking that only he was privileged to such confidential information. He was impressed.

What the mayor was about to open was a source of joy to Elmira Turnbull. It was a petition, and she was its author. So long had she labored at the task, she was now convinced that it would be acclaimed as the most noteworthy achievement ever devised by a President of the Ladies Temperance Movement. And the more she thought about it, the more she became convinced that it could very well be heralded by the townspeople as a tribute to her genius. Everything was carefully planned. Elmira had seen to it. That is why the mayor received the petition on Monday, following his vacation.

The mayor was not impressed. At the top of the letter was a familiar symbol. It was a wooden—staved cask, with two axes embedded in its top. One from the right, and one from the left; their handles forming a "V". Between the tips of the handles was the balance of a word: "—ictory". Beneath that, "Against," and near the bottom of the "V", the word "Excess." Around the cask were two bands, about a quarter-length from either end. On the upper band was the word "WHISKY", and, on the lower, "THE DEVIL'S DELIGHT" Encircling the symbol was a motto: TAKETH YE ALL THINGS IN MODERATION. The mayor crossed out the motto and printed MINDETH YE OWN BUSINESS. Then he read the letter.

Sir:

We, the Ladies Temperance Movement and other concerned citizens respectfully invite your prompt attention to the enclosed petition.

Very truly yours,
Elmira Turnbull
President

Also: Author of said petition and Counsel for said other concerned citizens.

Now the mayor knew why the lights had been on so late in the room over Jefferson's Drug Store. It looked as if Elmira was off and running. In a race for plain out—and—out meddling, Elmira would be a walkover entry: anywhere in the North American continent!

"Well," he thought, "my interest lies not so much with your petition as it does with those other concerned citizens."

Then the mayor turned to the fifth, and last, page of the petition. He could see that Elmira would not require the services of additional counselors. The "said other concerned citizens" were the last three names on the petition, Milton Turnbull, who had followed The Counselor's advice for 27 years; Elwood Stacey, a kindred spirit to spirits, whose priority had slipped to second place, but just until the LTM had cleared up this matter of Emit's whittling in the courthouse; and Jake Basswood, editor and publisher of The New Madison News. He so least expected to see Jake's signature that he had already turned his attention to a more interesting document. Suddenly, Jake Basswood's name became more important than the catalog of fishing lures. What, in the name of Killer—Bass—Bait, was Jake's signature doing on that petition? He reached for the phone.

The mayor smiled as he placed the phone back on its cradle. Just as he thought! The only thing Jake remembered signing for the Ladies Temperance Movement was a pledge to stop printing their minutes on the sports page. He signed the pledge, he told the mayor, because of Elmira's dream.

The mayor thought about what Jake had told him. Elmira had come into the printshop during the mayor's vacation with the "pledge of appreciation", as Elmira called it. Just as he was about to return the unsigned pledge to her, Elmira suddenly recalled a "very lifelike dream" she had had the previous night. She dreamed, she said, that she was playing Hearts in one of the every—other—Tuesday — night games held in the back room of the printshop. Just as she was about to pass off the Queen of spades to the mayor, Jake suggested that she keep it and draw to a full—house. She wondered if Jake could interpret that and the different colored plastic discs with which they kept score. Jake told Elmira that he was a little hazy about the full—house and different colored chips, but that he thought the LTM minutes deserved more recognition than they had been getting from having been printed on the sports page. As Jake was about to sign the pledge, he casually inquired if Elmira intended to ask anyone else about her dream. She said no; it was already becoming too hazy for her to remember all that clearly.

"Elmira," thought the mayor, "if I could only channel your resourcefulness into more productive areas, you could outdistance the entire City Council!"

The mayor picked up the petition, then returned it to its envelope. He would postpone that task until after lunch. Right now, the more interesting document required his attention.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Shirley Kinsey says:
"Whoever borrowed my 23 cup coffeemaker, please return it. It is avocado green in color—and I don't remember who borrowed it!"

Charlie Arnett stopped in this week. I asked him about his heart attack and he described his symptoms of several weeks ago—the main one being a sudden "raw" throat. I panicked—because as he told me about it, I was aware of a slightly "raw" throat myself, right then. His throat condition was followed by a sensation he described as being like having a wire brush pulled down through your chest.

Charlie added his suport to the fire departments efforts to get a new resusciator. He said, "I wouldn't be here now if it wasn't for a resuscitator at Doc Hathaway's office in Auburn." Charlie was working in Auburn the day he had the attack.

He also voiced a complaint heard from others about getting into the local hospital on an emergency—they wouldn't take him. He had to get a doctor first. —There must be some explanation—and it's probably that hospitals are as scared as doctors nowadays of getting sued and having to pay tremendous insurance premiums to cover the awards being given to patients, often running into millions of dollars.

Witnesses To Meet April 19-20

A semi annual assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses will be held April 19 and 20 in Holt, Michigan, at the sect's new assembly hall located at 1331 Eifert Road. The new hall serves over 200 congregations of Witnesses. The congregations are divided into ten circuits, including a part of a Spanish-speaking circuit. Each assembly will have between eight and thirteen congregations attending. The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., arranges the schedules.

Previously, circuit assemblies were held in local high school gyms and auditoriums. Due to the growth of the assemblies, the need developed for a permanent structure in easy access to Witnesses.

The new building was started in November of 1973. The building was designed by Witnesses and, with few exceptions, was built entirely by volunteer labor from Witnesses. Over 2000 workers, including 500 skilled tradesmen, participated in the construction of the building which was completed in time for the first assembly January 4—5 of this year.

The building is used mainly for semi annual two day Bible training sessions. Instruction is given in ways and means to best learn and apply Bible principles in individual lives, how to teach and preach publicly the Bible for today, namely, "the good news of God's kingdom" as now operating in the heavens and extending its righteous rule toward our earth and obedient mankind upon it; and how best to function as a Biblically directed congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses.

The Auburn Congregation will attend the April 19—20 assembly and all interested persons are invited to attend. No collections will be taken and seats are free.

Cadette Troop 192 sold an average of 95.25 boxes per girl, more than any other Junior Cadette or Senior Troop in the council area to win the trip.

Also awarded was a $35 camp grant to the single girl in the council selling the most boxes of cookies. This was won by a girl in Hamilton by selling 271 boxes.

Troop 192 will also go skating at the Roller Dome North on April 21. A free skating party was donated by the Roller Dome to the top 20 selling troops.

Money raised from the cookie sale is shared by the troop and the council. This is the main source of camp funds for the council.

General Tel To Break Ground Tuesday For New Building

Larry Clark, Angola district manager of General Telephone Company, announced this week that a ground breaking ceremony will be held next Tuesday at 10 am at the company's property in Saint Joe. The ground breaking will be for the new building to be constructed to house a completely new telephone system for the Saint Joe exchange.

Cable work has already beeen done in rural areas in conjunction with the installation of the new central office equipment.

General Tel announced plans to install a complete new central office and equipment in March of last year at a total cost of $292,000. The original announcement indicated that the new building would provide 1,674 square feet of space. It is to be built behind the present central office building which will be removed when the new structure is completed.

A new common control switching center (CXP—5) will have an initial capacity to serve 500 lines, nearly twice the capacity of present facilities. The new switching center is scheduled to be put in service in July of next year.

The new facilities will bring optional touch calling for individual and two—party lines, to allow dialing a telephone by means of push buttons instead of the customary rotary dial.

Coin telephones will be changed to pre—pay.

Eliminated in the new system will be the need to give the operator the calling number on long distance calls. Automatic number identification (ANI) means that long distance calls will be put through and recorded by computer.

The new switching equipment is described as the latest in design for exchanges the size of Saint Joe.

Mr. Clark indicated personal pleasure at making the announcement of the ground breaking, having put forth a great deal of effort to get the new system for local telephone subscribers.

—by Guy Mausteller

From information I have been able to obtain from some local citizens, I learned that most people do not realize the amount of equipment that is carried on a fire truck, all of which is necessary if we are to extinguish a blaze or assist in rescue operations.

Let's take a look at the DODGE PUMPER which is referred to as the town truck. For you folks who live in town, just visualize your home with regards to the nearest fire hydrant, and you will see what is available from this one vehicle. Be sure to include the children, see how well they can apply their math to the length of fire hose needed from your house to the hydrant.

First, we have a pump on the front end which will connect to the hydrant or draw from pond or stream. Behind the cab (not visible) is a 700 gallon storage tank of water which is used immediately through two reels of one inch booster hose, while connections are made from nearest water supply. (Each reel has 150 feet of hose.)

On the back we find 1500 feet of 2½ inch hose and 600 feet of 1½ inch hose. On the side is a 30 foot extension ladder and a 12 foot roof ladder; two long pole hooks; two axes; 2 fire extinguishers (1 CO2 and 1 dry powder); 2 smoke masks; 6 six-volt flashlights; 2 10 foot sections of hard suction hose; 2 10 foot sections of 3 inch suction hose; 1 filtering screen for suction hose; 1 coil of rope; 1 pair bolt cutters; 2-way radio; first aid kit; 2 high pressure nozzles which can be used as fog or solid stream; 2 1½ inch solid stream high pressure nozzle; 2 wye connectors; hydrant wrench and other hand tools; 4 fog nozzles 1½ high pressure which conserve water and are important for gas or oil fire; a fan nozzle which supplies a fan spray of 180 degrees which allows the firemen to advance much nearer the fire without the danger of fire or heat hazards to them.

Previousy, we stressed the importance of training, and this article may help you to understand its importance. We will explain in later articles how this is all cared for and checked. By now, I am sure you are as proud as we are of this red Dodge when it responds to a call in St. Joe.

Our drive for funds for our resuscitator and the amount received thus far is a living example of your interest in "our fire department." We have not as yet reached our goal, but I am certain we will be ready to accept delivery when the deadline date arrives. You will probably see a busy group of firemen the next two weeks, as they tell me they are going to show everyone what this project really means to each of them. You can play a little reverse strategy, show them how you appreciate what they are doing by a cash donation—large or small. We thank you.

Mr. Houston And Related Events

CHAPTER 3—THE PETITION

The mayor returned from lunch, braced himself with an Alka-Seltzer, took a deep breath, and removed the petition from its envelope. He started reading.

A PETITION TO HIS HONOR THE MAYOR
REQUIRING IMMEDIATE ACTION

"TO ALL WHO READ THESE PRESENTS, GREETINGS:"

Be it known that the Ladies Temperance Movement (hereinafter called "LTM") and other concerned citizens, do hereby petition His Honor the Mayor, of the city of New Madison, in the State of Indiana, to issue, with great dispatch, a Decree prohibiting the whittling activities (hereinafter called "activities") of one Emit Houston (hereinafter called "individual") within the Courthouse, or on any walk-way, or on any ramp, or on any step leading thereto.

He stopped reading.

"Man the ramparts, Ms. Pinkley!" he said. "Our modern-day Joan—of—Arc has raised the battle colors! She's at it again!"

But Ms. Pinkley, his secretary, did not hear him, for she had not yet returned from lunch. Had she been there, she would have reminded the mayor that a similar call to battle occurred a year ago last spring, and that was why Union Street was still paved with red bricks instead of black asphalt. She knew that the mayor often exaggerated his annoyance with Elmira and the Ladies Temperance Movement. Otherwise, she would not have had occasion to type the "Union Street Letter" (as Elmira called it), in which the mayor not only praised the LTM for its efforts to save the red-brick street, but commended their interest in civic affairs. If the mayor was annoyed, then it was a fond annoyance.

The mayor was unaware that his comment had gone unnoticed. He was now reading.

Be it further known that the LTM and other concerned citizens rally behind an unblemished banner to strike a blow for Victory Against Excess.

"There. You see!" he exclaimed, "She's trotted out that unblemished banner again, just as she did on Union Street! My, what a sight THAT was! Remember that Ms. Pinkley? Remember how she stood on the cab of that dump truck and planted the LTM banner right in that load of hot asphalt? My, how they cheered her on! Drove that truck right up Union Street and onto the railroad tracks. Had to burn the weeds off the right—of—way in order to find the keys to move it! She's a dreadnaught, Ms. Pinkley; an absolute dreadnaught!"

He was reading again.

Be it furthermore known that the LTM and other concerned citizens pledge themselves to battle, undaunted, and united in a just and common cause.

"You hear that Ms. Pinkley? She means business this time! You can mark it on your desk calendar: Elmira is ready to march! Where's Emit; is he outside? If he is, get him inside. And call Charlie and tell him to take Emit's bench down to the basement; she'll chop it into kindling if it's there when she comes in."

A sense of urgency suddenly possessed the mayor. The "Union Street Stigma" (as the City Council called it) lingered as fresh as yesterday in his memory. Actually, Elmira had set the following Monday as A—Day (i.e., Assault Day), but, of course, the mayor did not know that. He quickly read through the "to wits".

TO WIT:
That the LTM and other concerned citizens consider said activities of said individual in said Courthouse to be flagrantly disrespectful and degrading to the dignified atmosphere of said Courthouse, as evidenced by said individual willfully performing said activities with complete disregard for the flags of our Country and State, which nearby stand unfurled in those hallowed halls.

TO WIT:
That the LTM and other concerned citizens . . . . .

And on and on it went. Four pages of it. But Elmira had crowned her literary masterpiece with a sparkling gem; a last "to wit", deliberately penned to catch the mayor's eye.

TO WIT:
That the LTM and other concerned citizens consider said activities of said individual in said Courthouse to be hazardous to life and limb, as evidenced by the pain and suffering inflicted upon our beloved Elwood Stacey, the victim of an untimely misfortune, which befell that stalwart soul at the Courthouse doors.

"Confound you, Elmira!" said the mayor aloud (although no one could hear him), "The only untimely misfortune ever to befall Elwood's stalwart soul was last winter, when the antifreeze in his stalwart stomach tested higher than that in his pick-up truck radiator."

"Ms. Pinkley!" called the mayor.

Ms. Pinkley had just then returned, and was in the outer office.

"Yes, Mr. Mayor?" she asked, as she entered his office.

"What happened to our beloved Elwood Stacey?"

"Our beloved?"

"Those are not my words, Ms. Pinkley. They are the fond sentiments of Elmira Turnbull."

"That is not what she usually calls him."

"I am aware of that, Ms. Pinkley. But his pain and suffering have apparently endeared him to her, for those are the very words she used."

"What pain and suffering, Mr. Mayor?"

"The pain and suffering inflicted by his untimely misfortune, Ms. Pinkley."

"Mr. Mayor, Elwood's untimely misfortune occurred last New Year's Eve, when he went skinny dipping in Cracker's Creek. And Mrs. Turnbull did not call him beloved!"

"No," replied the mayor, "she did not. She called him 'blue as a button' that time."

"Well, when DID she call him beloved?"

"Right here," said the mayor, tapping the petition. "Right here in this infernal petition!"

He handed Ms. Pinkley the petition, opened to the last to wit. The words "our beloved" stood out from all the rest. For they were handwritten in red ink, with fancy curls and spirals and ringlets and flourishes and twists and curlicues and several other hooks and swirls that Elmira had designed especially for the occasion.

"Oh," whispered Ms. Pinkley, in hushed awe. "It's beautiful! Such lovely cursive. Such a magnificent, running style. Just look at that personALITY! It just comes BOOMing through! Oh, the very vigor of it. And with such free-running spirit, too! Doesn't that strike you as artistic, Mr. Mayor?"

"No, Ms. Pinkley, it does not. It strikes me as a sweet potato, taking root in a glass of water. But, if you found 'our beloved' inspirational, then take a look at 'Decree', on the first page. Elmira has an absolute trophy winner there!"

Ms. Pinkley turned to the first page.

"Oh, Mr. Mayor!" she exclaimed, "It is beyond description!"

"It is the very essence of liberation. In a word, it is freedom. Words nearly fail me, Mr. Mayor, but I'll try. It is — —"

"It is six sweet potatoes, Ms. Pinkley, at the very least, and probably worth more. However, assigning grades to Elmira's composition will have to wait. We have work to do!

"Now, Mrs. Pinkley, I do not intend to allow that diabolical crusader to sully the good name of my administration with another Union Street, so to speak. No, Ms. Pinkley, not THIS time! I am going to nip this business in the bud, so to speak, before it blossoms."

Ms. Pinkley was writing briskly, in liberated shorthand, so to speak.

"First, Ms. Pinkley, I want you to alert each and every councilman. Tell them that Field Marshall Turnbull has deployed her troops for battle and fully intends to lay seige to this courthouse. Second, Ms. Pinkley, call Jake Basswood and ask him to give us a front page notice—of—public—hearing on this petition. Schedule it at seven o'clock, Monday evening, July the twenty-eighth."

50 PLUS CLUB

The March 27 meeting of the Fifty Plus Club was held in the basement of St. Peter Lutheran Church in Spencerville with Alice Hollabaugh and MM Harold Stiver as hosts.

At 6:30 the group was called to order and after prayer by Harold Stiver, all enjoyed the delicious potluck supper.

We were then entertained by "The New Creations," a group of young people from the Waterloo United Methodist Church. They rendered a variety of musical numbers greatly enjoyed by those present.

A short business meeting was then conducted by the president, Ida Reed. It was Maundy Thursday, so she talked some on that subject, then read a poem, "The Spirit of Eastertime." "Happy Birthday" and "Happy Anniversary" were sung for those celebrating in March. The president reported on a meeting on "Aging" which she had attended and handed out leaflets on same. Several contests were then enjoyed after which the meeting adjourned.

Lulu Gerig, Marvel Kesler and MM Harry Laux will host the next meeting Thursday, April 24. Same time—same place. We will be looking for you.

WITH THE EDITOR

Spencerville is getting ready for its Covered Bridge Festival which will be held June 20, 21 and 22 this year instead of in July as in the past two years.

Helen Wade of Garrett, who is the daughter of the late Ed Storer, former postmaster at Saint Joe, has compiled a book of poems written over the past 15 years. Price of the book is $1.25 and all profits go to the Garrett Centennial to be held July 1—6.

The books are available at the News Office for those who wish to buy a copy.

The poems cover a wide variety of subjects, from sports to memories to—well, here are a couple of verses which caught my eye in a poem entitled, "Why?":

Why do boys who get black eyes,
Always first see red?
And man have more hair upon his face,
Than he had upon his head?
Do Indians lose their feathers
When molting time comes round?
Has the needle in the haystack
Ever yet been found?

Senator Bayh Takes Opposite View On 'Collective Bargaining' Stamp

A second letter has been received by the News Office in response to a recent editorial questioning the propriety of a commorative stamp promoting collective bargaining. The letter is as follows:

United States Senate

Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

Thank you for your recent letter. I find your comments on the collective bargaining commemorative stamp very interesting.

If you study the variety of commemorative stamps issued over the last several years by the Post Office, you will find that they have recognized many individuals that were as controversial as you believe the principle of collective bargaining to be. For that matter, almost any principle they might choose to recognize would be subject to disfavor by a great many Americans. I can think of few issues we would unanimously choose to honor.

The issue is not really one of ethics. The U.S. Postal Service chooses commemorative stamps not to endorse people or principles, but to recognize those that a significant number of people have expressed an interest in for the purpose of commerative stamps.

I am forwarding your letter to the U.S. Postal Service for their comments. I'm sorry we don't agree on the nature of this issue, but I hope you will continue to share your thoughts with me.

Sincerely,
Birch Bayh
United State Senator

In commenting on the situation recently, Jim Kroemer of the Auburn "Evening Star" said a magazine published for mail carriers recently contained the following:

"Thus, the commemoration of collective bargaining by the U.S. Postal Service by issuance of a commemorative stamp has special significance to all postal employees" — because of the negotions which began April 21 concerning pay raises for postal employees which already are assumed to mean a raise to 12 or 13 cents for first class mail.

Mr. Kroemer opines: ". . . . (such) statements lead me to think the postal service may have decided to issue the stamp merely to enhance its position with the postal union come bargaining time. If that's the case, it's wrong. Selfish use of the power to issue commemorative stamps cheapens the whole concept of commemorative stamps."

Ground Broken For New Building

Ground breaking ceremonies were held Tuesday morning at ten o'clock by General Telephone Company at its property on Third Street in Saint Joe. A new building, 31x40 feet, will be constructed on the site starting next week to house a complete new central switching office. The total cost of improvements in the exchange will be some $334,000. Inflation has upped the cost from the estimated $292,000 project cost as announced last year.

District service manager Larry Clark said plans include installation of modern, electronic switching equipment, an environmental system necessary to the functioning of this equipment, a fire detection system and areas needed by personnel when working within the building. Completion of the building is scheduled for next November by Kinder Construction Company of Fort Wayne.

Installation of the Crosspoint 5 (CXP5) switching system, General Tel's fourth such installation, will give telephone customers in the Saint Joe exchange the latest developments in electronic telephone equipment. The CXP5 was specifically designed for exchanges serving between 100 and 2,200 telephones.

The CXP5 system here will initially contain 500 lines of switching equipment. Services such as coin free dialing to the operator from coin telephones and automatic identification of the calling telephone on direct distance calls from one and two party lines without operator interruption will be provided.

"Upon completion of this project," Clark pointed out, "this electronic system will require less maintenance and provide services not available on the present system." Changeover to the CXP5 system is scheduled for July of next year. The present switching office will be removed upon completion of the new project.

Saint Joe's new system is part of General Tel's $154 million construction and expansion program for the Northeastern Division in 1975.

Baseball School For Little, Pony Leaguers At EHS May 8-9

DeKalb Eastside High School baseball coaches Rex Bolinger and Johnny Zimmerman will conduct the first annual baseball clinic for all boys involved in the Butler and Saint Joe Little Leagues and the Eastside Pony League. The announcement came this week from Dunrd Bellamy, president of the Pony League Board of Directors.

The baseball clinic will be run on the evenings of Thursday and Friday, May 8 and 9, from 6:30 to 8:30 pm at the high school gym.

Members of the Eastside varsity baseball team will assist the two coaches in demonstrating the fundamentals of baseball to youngsters involved in the leagues. Several films will be shown and the boys will be given an opportunity to bat against the new pitching machine which was donated by the EHS Booster Club.

All boys attending should wear sneakers and bring their baseball gloves.

The clinic will also serve as the official signup for the Eastside Pony League and all boys interested are urged to attend and sign up. There will be two teams representing Eastside in Pony League competition this year.

Little League coaches as well as Pony League coaches are invited to attend.

New gold and green uniforms have been purchased for the Eastside Pony League "A" team, somewhat similar to those worn by the Oakland Athletics.

Coaches for Pony League are Sam Salinas, Steve Bellamy, Bob Gerber, Jake Fetters and Dave Miller.

At the April meeting of the Pony League board, George Kandel presented information concerning insurance for the league. Mr. Bolinger told about plans for the May 8 and 9 baseball clinic, league finances were discussed and field maintenance was reviewed.

The next meeting of the board will be held May 5 at 7 pm in the Butler elementary library.

Every American 'Owes' Nation

Last week, Jim Kroemer, managing editor of the county daily, "The Evening Star," made some comments in his column about income tax reform. He is like a lot of us—we recognize that something ought to be done and have some ideas, but it seems that nothing is being accomplished to bring about what everyone would consider a "more fair" tax program.

Jim suggested that there be no tax on families with incomes less than $7500 and no tax on individuals with less than $5,000 income. Income above those amounts would be taxed at a flat rate of 7.5%. He commented: how would you like to try to get along on $7500 for the family? Having just finished working on income taxes myself, coming up with less than enough money to pay the entire tax bill, Jim's comments struck a responsive note, and I dropped him a few lines in reaction.

I think part of the trouble is that we have been indoctrinated into accepting constantly rising prices, constantly rising incomes, and constantly rising taxes as "normal." But no one is getting ahead; in fact, we are falling behind. Most people have more dollars today than even just a couple of years ago, but they are getting less in return for those dollars. And much of the problem stems from the inclusion of automatic pay or benefit increases for certain segments of our society. If you ask me, all the talk about fighting inflation is wasted breath and just demagoguery* on the part of our legislators, because they are voting in programs which have these antomatic pay increases. And the pay (or benefit) increases bring on pay (and benefit) increases! That's inflation—and more taxes.

Another part of the trouble is that the approach to taxation as supported by liberal legislators in Congress and in the state legislature includes the idea that low incomes deserve a release from any income tax liability. Senator Vance Hartke of Indiana in particular comes up with consistent "tax relief" proposals which remove more and more incomes from tax liability. The "soak the rich" philosophy is yet present in today's society, a "hangover" from the 1930's and the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, the supposed champion of "the common man."

I believe the "no tax on low income" idea is totally inconsistent with the principle of equality which is a part of this nation's foundation, whether we have succeeded in following that principle totally or not. What we are doing under such an approach is saying that some people owe more to their country than do others because they have more material possessions. I think this is wrong. Every American citizen owes this nation a portion of his or her income, regardless of the amount. It is a privilege and a blessing to be a citizen of a free nation, faulty though we may sometimes be, and everyone has a financial obligation to that nation, not just a certain supposedly privileged segment. The Biblical example of the widow's mite is very relevant to the situation.

Jim's suggestion prompted me to get out pencil and paper and do some figuring. I came up with this. If a family made $7,500, it would owe no taxes. If it had $7,600 income, the family would have a tax bill of $570! For $100 additional income, you should have your net income reduced to $7,030??? That doesn't sound right.

For an individual, if you have $5,000 income, you would owe no tax. If you have a $5,100 income, you owe $382.50 and your net income is $4,717.50. For $100 additional income, you should be penalized $282.50???

One of the favorite emotional appeals by political candidates who picture themselves as more concerned for the average citizen is the suggestion of favoritism, of advantage of opportunity for those with higher incomes. But, if it isn't favoritism, if it isn't the suggestion of advantage, to promote removal of more and more incomes from tax liability, then what is it? If it's "wrong" for one, is it not "wrong" for the other???

My comments here—and my letter to Jim—are not to embarrass him, to put him on the spot. Rather, it is to put THE IDEA on the spot. No idea on tax reform will be "right" unless we keep certain principles in mind.

My final comment to Jim suggested that, in tax matters, the greatest "sin" this nation ever committed was in adopting the withholding system (the same holds true for the state of Indiana). Unless you are self-employed, you never handle your tax money, you need never pay out in any great amount. Unless you have had to shell out of your pocket the dollars representing your tax obligations, you do not know what government is costing you. The figures are there, to be sure, on your withholding slip. But it doesn't hurt. It's an "easy" way to pay taxes, yes. It is also the most corrupting—not to the individual but to the government.

If we really want tax reform, there should be a moratorium of one year on the withholding system. Let John Q. Public pay his tax bill out of his pocket April 15—just one year—and I believe there would be the fastest cut in government spending, the fastest reduction in taxes, the fastest scuttling of social welfare programs you could imagine. It would make your head swim. It would make the public aware that it cannot afford the high-sounding but enormously costly trend of social-welfare in our government.

But, unfortunately, there are no men or women of highest purpose in our legislative halls; there are none willing to risk sacrificing their popularity for a principle, it seems. Be they Democrat or Republican, the pattern in tax reform efforts is one of extreme caution, of not rocking the boat too much, even though the boat is tilting dangerously to the tax side already.

Every American, regardless of income, owes a debt to this country, has a share in its financial obligations. Those who have smothered this fundamental principle and continue to smother it by reducing the number of income tax payers because of "low income" are not helping this nation; they are destroying its moral fiber.

Billie Jean 'Sorehead'

Some time ago I editorialized about the conduct of tennis pro Billie Jean King under the title "Billie Jean Sorehead." I don't remember what the exact circumstances were, but they had to do with general conduct of a well-paid sports figure being witnessed by a large TV audience (including kids) in "professional" efforts and behaving like a spoiled brat.

This past Sunday, Americans got another taste of Billie Jean King in a championship match with Chris Evert. At one point Billie Jean differed with an official call to the point of momentarily delaying the match and loudly voicing her discontent—along with the other recognizable actions of disgust such as hands on hips and glare at the official, walk around in a circle with head down and muttering, etc.

Miss Evert finally won the match and the $50,000 first place prize. Billie Jean had to be content with second place and a measly $25,000. Two other contestants won lesser amounts.

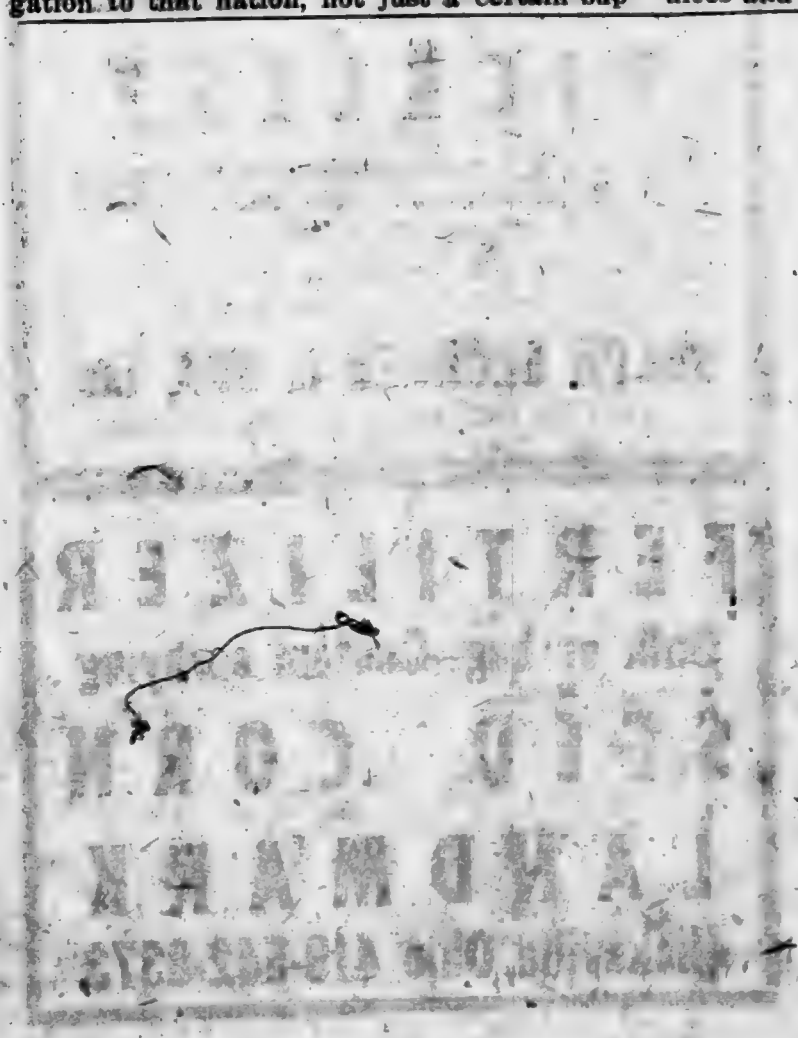
The word "sport" has traditionally had a meaning in part related to fun, pleasure, enjoyment. Even "professional" sports have in the past had that appeal of pleasure and enjoyment despite the fact that the contestants were being paid to perform. But in recent years, along with all the "rights" movements and the "do your own thing" approach, much of the appeal of sports has been lost, as far as I am concerned, by the arrogant attitudes exhibited by an increasing number of participants in professional sports. Such antics as put on by Billie Jean King, for instance, do little to motivate young people to do their best AND accept what comes. There are some, but the number seemingly gets fewer and fewer, who respect the responsibility they have while in the public eye to set good examples for others in their relationships with other participants and those who officiate.

I don't mean the athlete should NEVER show disagreement; it's the degree to which such disagreement is carried that makes the difference.

Ernie Banks of the Chicago Cubs is one of today's shining examples of good sportsmanship. While he was an active player, "Mr. Cub" occasionally and obviously thought the ump "goofed." However, his typical reaction was to keep his position in the batter's box, look back at the ump and perhaps at the plate—and then turn to the pitcher for the next pitch, with those fingers working, working on the bat handle as he utilized his own way of centering concentration on ball, pitcher and what was coming next. That was it. He was more intent on the future and HIS responsibility, not the past and someone else's possible mistake.

If any of our sons had ever asked, "Dad, who would you like me to be like," whether it was in baseball or anything else, the answer would have been—and is—Ernie Banks. They never asked—but they know it, anyhow!

Can you feature a parent saying to a daughter, "I'd like you to be like Billie Jean King"? I can't. —And people are shelling out dollar after dollar to watch not just one but a lot of soreheads who obviously are very talented. But that's as far as it goes—unfortunately.



St. Joe-Concord Township VFD

—by Guy Maustoller

Our last news item described the one fire truck and the many pieces of equipment carried on this one vehicle. We were going to continue to better acquaint you with the other trucks, but something more interesting has been suggested.

Wednesday evening, April 16, we were asked to burn the barn at the Ramos residence on State Road 1 just north of town. (If you recall, that was a beautiful day and evening—no rain or wind.)

We took the township pumper to the scene and set up our two portable water tanks (each holding 1000 gallons). The tanker arrived and filled these two tanks, then returned for another load of water. (Perhaps I should keep quiet, but we are still trying to find the critter who left a switch on—causing us to seek assistance to get the tanker started. I said at the start of our articles we were going to print the facts—so there is a dinger.) OK—back to the scene. With the help of some good fuel, we touched off the barn at four places. Within minutes it was one big, hot fire. We removed 300 feet of 2½ inch hose, installed a wye and connected two 300 foot lines of 1½ inch hose. Weather conditions were ideal as very little water was needed to keep everything under control. This was very good experience and we were able to instruct some of our firewomen on what to do before, during and after a fire. Of the eight women who are insured fire fighters, we had the following in attendance: Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Maustoller and Mrs. Arnett.

They were very impressed with the "before the fire" instructions (getting the equipment to the scene and into position). They were likewise thrilled in setting up the necessary equipment and especially the clever way all that hose comes off the truck when you start pulling that one end with the nozzle attached. It was really amusing to learn how to adjust those nozzles and get different patterns of spray. Now we come to that "after the fire" part. This is also the part that most people never see or appreciate. It is also the time when you find the least amount of firemen. Axes, pole hooks, ladders must be cleaned and replaced on the truck; suction hose removed from the pump and placed in its proper carrier; portable tanks dumped or drained and properly folded; all discharge hose must now be disconnected at all joints and properly drained; each section must be reconnected and replaced on the truck. This is a very hard job and must be placed in exactly the right position so that it is ready for immediate removal at the next fire. By the time these "after fire" duties are completed, everyone involved nnows they have done some work and will be reminded of it for several days from the various aches that they experience.

The truck must be gased, oil checked, all valves checked and water storage tank filled as well as repairing any broken ax handles, etc. It is now ready to back into the fire barn (and all switches turned off).

This is what is done each time your department answers an alarm and is all performed by your VOLUNTEER FIREMEN.

The April 14 meeting took up at 7:10 pm at the Spencerville United Methodist Church. We sang a verse of "America" and gave the pledge to the flag.

Flimflam And Bunco—Not Very Funny Games

Call it "flimflam" or "bunco," it's still a fraud or a swindle. While the names may sound like the latest TV-advertised parlor game, the player is actually a "con artist" or confidence man, and the victim is likely to be YOU.

The American Bankers Association (ABA) reports that the current economic situation has multiplied the number of con games in operation. Not only are crooks working harder to make a fast buck, consumers, it seems, are less cautious about withdrawing their savings at the suggestion of swindlers in hopes of beating inflation. And, with the likelihood of tax rebates this spring, the number and variety of swindles is not likely to diminish.

It's unfortunately true that senior citizens seem to be the biggest group of victims. In fact, it's been estimated that 90 per cent of the people taken in are over 70 years of age. Within this group, those approached most often are older ladies living alone. And yet, no one is immune.

How can you protect yourself? It helps to be aware of certain key words that usually tip off a con game. Be on guard, says the ABA, whenever you hear the words: "get rich quick," "something for nothing," "secret plan," or "this opportunity won't be here tomorrow."

Two common swindles involving bank savings are the Pigeon Drop and the Bank Examiner schemes. In the Pigeon Drop, two criminals obtain the confidence of a likely victim and claim they would like to share with him a large find of money. The victim is then asked to donate some "good faith money" to them while waiting for his share of the find. During the wait, of course, the criminals run off with the cash they have been given.

The Bank Examiner swindle is put into operation by a person claiming to be a bank examiner who needs help in catching a dishonest teller. To cooperate with the examiner, the victim is asked to withdraw from his savings account a large amount of money. The con artist then promises to return the cash to the bank, but instead takes off with it.

Although the person posing as a bank examiner may sound very convincing, don't fall for that line. The ABA says under no circumstances will a bank examiner, FBI agent or other law enforcement official request a bank customer to withdraw cash from an account.

One final tip: while the variety of swindles is huge and only limited by the imagination of the con artist, all swindles have one thing in common — eventually the victim is asked for money. If you ever receive such a request, inform an officer of your bank and the local police department. Not only will you be helping yourself, you might prevent the loss of a neighbor's life savings.

Fouling out in basketball is not unusual. But here is one that is hard to believe that happened in Seattle, Washington. It was a regular park board contest between the Supercynics and the Fish. Five players on each team fouled out. At one point there were only three men on the floor. The bizarre game had to be called off when the Supers sank a foul shot and the Fish, with only one player left, were unable to take the ball out of bounds. There was no one to pass to. The Supercynics had defeated the Fish 53—52.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

The death of Cliff Billow prompted some thoughts which I have shared with a few others in recent days and which I would like to pass along to others.

At the back of these thoughts is the realization that the old saying "Life begins at 40", often given in jest, is more truth than fiction. I thought in my younger days that the word "begins" in that saying meant having more fun due to being released from obligations of a family type which sort of governed living up to that time.

I have come to realize that instead, the word "begins" in that saying means "becoming more aware of people and happenings, becoming aware of how important people are and their friendship, how little things too often taken for granted become priceless, having a greater appreciation of what has come before with family and friends—instead of anticipation of what is to come in a personal and too often a selfish expectation."

"Life begins at 40" has meant for me that our family was growing into adult responsibilities for our sons; it was really also "life begins" for them. It meant the need to try to adjust to a different personal relationship all around, because the death of my father, when I was 40, meant that I became "Grandpa," the head of the family—that is, if you look upon "Grandpa" in the old fashioned way. The modern generations may not understand this, with all the "liberation" we have had. But I'll bet that, one day, a lot of them are going to say, "Now I know what he meant"— if they read these words now and recall them years hence.

Life begins at 40 also has another meaning, in addition to personal relationship to family. It means that the years have mellowed one's outlook, that incidents and events are remembered with greater thanksgiving than before, related to friends and community. For instance, late Saturday afternoon as I washed the car in our driveway, I glanced across the railroad tracks to the Billow residence where just a few hours before our fireman worked so feverishly trying to save Cliff. I saw that old bicycle which Cliff rode so many times to the elevator in his working days and to the post office since his retirement. I stopped dead in my tracks—because it struck me that what I saw reflected the last act of Cliff related to that bicycle; it would never again be moved by his hand. It was the same stunning realization which I had 10 years ago when Esther and I entered my parents' home at Fort Wayne. (they had gone to Purdue University for his class's 50th anniversary reunion when he died) and the first thing I saw as I stepped in the door was Dad's "puttering-around" jacket, which he had hung on a dining room chair. I stopped in my tracks then—as I did Saturday in our driveway—as the realization hit me, "That's the last place he put it; it will never be moved again at his hand."

I will never again experience the sharing of concern which Cliff and I had in frequent conversations, especially our mutual concern about our own church as well as the Christian world as a whole. He was a good listener when I unburdened myself and I tried to return the favor for him.

Cliff was not one to "rock the boat"—but he had definite opinions on occasion. There was no warmer smile than his—and there was no more definite indication of displeasure or disagreement than ol' Cliff's eyebrows arching way up there.

Some may say this is overly sentimental. Maybe it is. But I must say that these moments of remembering, sad though they may seem, have great meaning because they serve as reminders of joyous and meaningful relationships, which incidentally included moments of conflict and differences. They bring a sobering and silent prayer that says, "I hope that I was not too disappointing, too much a failure, in the eyes of the one who is no longer among the living."

Put it all together and it means a treasure of memories, a storehouse of cherished and unforgettable relationships which nothing can destroy.

That is why I now understand and know that life DOES begin at 40.

God sure knew what he was doing when He set up on the time table of human existence—"life begins at 40."

EHS Band Gets 'Superior'

The Eastside High School Concert Band received a "superior" rating in the state band contest held at New Haven High School Friday and Saturday, April 25 and 26. With 21 bands competing, it was necessary to conduct the contest two days.

Each group in competition was required to play three numbers, one a warmup march and the other two, concert selections. Eastside played: Block M March by Bilik, Elsa's Procession To the Cathedral by Wagner, and Toccata For Band by Erickson.

In addition each band was required to sight read a march and an overture. These are newly published numbers never seen by bands or directors prior to the contest. Each band is given 10 minutes to review the compositions with the director before actual performance.

Firemen Honored

Some 43 people attended a dinner Saturday night at the fire hall during which the Saint Joe Volunteer Fire Department honored three retired firemen. The trio includes Roy Reidenbach, Water Reinhart and Merlin Simanton. Each received a ceramic figurine of a fireman with their name on it.

Guy Mausteller was program chairman. At the outset, he recognized the sadness which accompanied the occasion due to the death of Clifford Billow earlier in the day. Mr. Mausteller presented the following thoughts concerning the situation:

"We come here this evening with sorrow in our hearts for the passing of our dear friend, Cliff Billow, who was one of our honored guests, being retired from our department. Cliff would have insisted that we proceed with our plans, but instead of honoring him as planned, let us pay our respects.

"I would like to talk about something which we should all think about, and that is TIME. What is time? Is it the duration between noons—the interval between events, or the passage of a certain fraction of life? Time is an unknown quantity. Like space, it appears to be an idea of the mind, without existence. Time and space are then but two faces of the same idea. Everything occupies space for a certain time. I have heard it said that we pass through space in three directions—up and down, right and left, and forward and back.

"Everything accomplished by man, be it character, act of selfishness or constructing a shelter, must be accomplished with time.

"All around us are many varieties of men with as many ideas. We all have the same number of minutes in an hour, of hours in a day or days in a year. Time is a gift of God, yet it is man's greatest mystery—bitterest enemy—and truest friend.

"The Mighty Servant put it this way.

Little bit by even less, all pain I can diminish,
Slowly win the smile to eyes that now know but to weep.
I began your race with life and I shall see its finish.
My arms, and none but mine,
shall in the end give sleep.
I linger not for anyone, yet I may not be hastened.
You must bear your agony until I bid it cease.
But when your head is in the dust and all your pride is chastened,
At long last, I promise you, I bring the Gift of Peace.

"To say that Cliff used his time wisely and to the fullest, is an understatement, as many of us have experienced much good from his time and talent."

Mr. Mausteller announced that the fund for a new resuscitator had "gone over the top."

'Happy Day' At General Tel Groundbreaking

It was an obviously happy occasion Tuesday, April 22, when General Telephone Company of Indiana broke ground for its new building which will house a completely new telephone exchange. Above, Larry Clark, district service manager of Angola, turns the first shovelful of dirt. With him are L.S. Reynal, division manager for General Tel at left; Ted Haberkorn, editor of the Saint Joe News and president of the local Booster Club, center; Emma Frank, town clerk—treasurer; and Dick Roberts, town board member.

The totally new electronic telephone system is set to be put in operation in July of 1976.

Kindergarten RoundupTuesday

The annual kindergarten roundup meeting for parents of those youngsters who will be entering the Riverdale School kindergarten this fall is scheduled for Tuesday, May 6, Principal Charles Ray has announced.

The meeting will begin at 3:30 p.m. and will include information parents need to know for enrollment as well as a sound filmstrip suggesting practical things parents can do to help their children start school well prepared—physically, mentally and emotionally. The kindergarten teacher will be introduced to the parents and be available for questions as will Mr. Ray.

Pupil enrollment forms will be handed out at the meeting as will the necessary medical forms which must be filled out by a doctor. In addition, a copy of the child's birth certificate must be presented at the time of enrollment. A photocopy of the birth certificate will be made and the original returned to the parent that day.

Children who will be five years old on or before September 1, 1975, are eligible for kindergarten in September, 1975.

Heart Attack Fatal For Former Businessman Clifford Billow

Clifford E. Billow, 71, of Saint Joe suffered a fatal heart attack at noon Saturday as he prepared to transplans shrubbery in the back yard of his home. His wife, Gertrude, saw him collapse in a wheelbarrow he was using for the yard work, and she called for help.

Members of the Saint Joe Volunteer Fire Department responded instantly, using the resuscitator unit as well as vigorous chest massage in their desperate efforts to revive the stricken man. Fire Chief Joe Robinson reported later that "we brought him back three times" but Mr. Billow was dead on arrival at DeKalb Memorial Hospital where he was taken in the Johnson & Son ambulance of Butler. Though his breathing started three times as firemen worked on him, Mr. Billow did not fully regain consciousness after the attack.

Mr. Billow managed the grain elevator and coal company at Saint Joe for 30 years before retiring six years ago. He was a familiar figure on his daily trips to the post office in recent years, as he either rode a bicycle, which had become somewhat of a family "heirloom," or walked. He had used a cane for such walking due to a damaged hip. But an operation last year had relieved the pain and the need for a cane, and he was able to walk with but a slight limp since.

Mrs. Billow recently was hospitalized with a serious attack of influenza and her husband was particularly careful not to let her exert herself since that time.

Mr. Billow was born in Ney, Ohio, in 1904. He had just observed his 71st birthday the day before his death. His parents were John and Mary Mahr Billow. He has two brothers, Carl of Napoleon, Ohio, and Arthur of Angola. There are two sisters, Mrs. Nora Whirledge of Middlebury, Indiana, and Mrs. Lottie Wolf of Edon, Ohio.

The Billows have three children, Rev. William Billow who is a missionary in Tokyo, Japan, and Mrs. Carol Parish and Mrs. Jean Danchi of Chapel Hill, North Carolina. There are nine grandchildren.

Mr. Billow was a member of St. Mark Evangelical Lutheran Church at Saint Joe where he had often been a council member and fulfilled other duties such as financial secretary and treasurer for the congregation; was a Past Master of Concord Lodge F&AM of Spencerville; was a member of the Scottish Rite and Mizpah Shrine at Fort Wayne; was a member of the Saint Joe Valley Conservation Club; was a member of the Order of the Eastern Star at Spencerville and a Past Patron; was a member of the Saint Joe Volunteer Fire Department; and was a charter member of the Saint Joe Lions Cub which he served as secretary-treasurer for the past 20 years.

Mr. Billow had also served on the town board in the past.

Funeral services were held at St. Peter Evangelical Lutheran Church at Spencerville Tuesday at 2 p.m. due to renovating activities at Mr. Billow's home church, after the reception of callers at Baidinger & Walter Funeral Home in Spencerville.

Rev. Dennis Kuchera officiated at the funeral and burial was in Riverside Cemetery at Saint Joe.

Red Cross Seeks New Members To Relieve 1975 Financial 'Bind'

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the DeKalb County Chapter, American Red Cross, the main topic for discussion was the financial problem facing the local chapter. Funds currently available amount to but two-thirds of the proposed budget which totals some $14,000. Only a little over $9,000 is available to the chapter.

To help relieve the finacial problem, individual members of the board volunteered to contact membership prospects in their respective communities. As a member agency of United Fund of DeKalb County, the local Red Cross chapter cannot solicit for funds; it relies upon United Fund for its financial support. Since the United Fund campaign fell short of the total needs of the various agencies, the Red Cross is compelled to make an effort to gain additional members and thus additional income.

Under the pattern set by the National Red Cross organization, county chapters are obligated each year to send a portion of their income to the national office. For DeKalb County this amounts to about 47%. The quota for DeKalb County for 1975 is $6,404. The county has sent in less than its quota for the past three years.

Local Red Cross activities include supervision of the Bloodmobile in the various communities during the year; assisting in setting up the "Expectant Mothers" class; providing First Aid instruction and Water Safety Instructor training; and providing assistance in emergencies related to servicemen and their families. Emergency relief for private individuals is also a part of the Red Cross program.

Memberships can be obtained by contacting the Red Cross office in the court house at Auburn or Betty Bevington and Ted Haberkorn at Saint Joe and Dorothy Vendrely at Spencerville.

Baseball School For Little, Pony Leaguers At EHS May 8-9

DeKalb Eastside High School baseball coaches Rex Bolinger and Johnny Zimmerman will conduct the first annual baseball clinic for all boys involved in the Butler and Saint Joe Little Leagues and the Eastside Pony League.

The baseball clinic will be run on the evenings of Thursday and Friday, May 8 and 9, from 6:30 to 8:30 pm at the high school gym.

Several films will be shown and the boys will be given an opportunity to bat against the new pitching machine which was donated by the EHS Booster Club.

The clinic will also serve as the official signup for the Eastside Pony League and all boys interested are urged to attend and sign up. There will be two teams representing Eastside in Pony League competition this year.

Little League coaches as well as Pony League coaches are invited to attend.

REAL ESTATE
Don't Underestimate Buyer

I'm sure you've heard it said: "Why should I sell my house through a Realtor? I can sell it myself and pocket the commission. Right?" . . . . .Wrong!

This kind of thinking can easily turn out to be financial folly.

Never underestimate the hard financial bargaining ability of the average buyer. Spend one day in the field with any Realtor, negotiating and handling offers and counter-offers and you'll appreciate what I'm saying. Frankly, if the typical buyer knows you are not selling through a Realtor, right off the bat he'll expect you to deduct the commission for HIS benefit before you even START serious negotiations.

Then you're on your own, possibly at a great disadvantage, in the intricate areas of financing, negotiating and protecting yourself from all sorts of do—it—yourself pitfalls. You've got a lot invested in your home. It makes sense to list it with a good Realtor. He'll sell it for you—without hitches, for the best price and in the shortest amount of time.

Thinking of selling your home or farm? It makes sense to list it with this town's only real estate office: Strombeck Real Estate, phone 337—4444. Many qualified prospects waiting to buy your property. — "Make Strombeck your partner in the business of living."

CHAPTER 4—THE HEARING (Part I)

Well, Jake printed the notice of public hearing in the Tuesday edition of The New Madison News. It was on the sports page, which did not surprise the mayor, because Jake had a reputation of being independent and doing things his way. But few, if any, missed it, because Jake had "done right by the mayor."

To Jake, the mayor was a good administrator, but he was no-oo newspaperman. If the mayor wanted people to read that notice, then Jake would have to generate some interest in it first; and that is what he did — on the front page. He started with a large caption: "TURNBULL TACKLES HOUSTON"—and ended with a reminder: "No dogs allowed!". In between, he told about Emit's whittling, Elmira's petition, Elwood's alleged injury, a rummage sale, and the scheduled public hearing.

So, that is why (disregarding the rummage sale) there was an overflow crowd in the City Auditorium of the Courthouse in New Madison, Indiana, July 28th, 1969.

It was very warm in the auditorium, and the women were talking and fanning; mostly in that order, except when the conversation hit a lull, and then they made up for the fanning they had missed out on during the important parts of the discussion. They had generally separated from the men, and were sitting to the right of a wide aisle, which began at the large wooden double-doors, and ended at a row of metal folding chairs near the front of the auditorium. In front of the row of chairs, at right angles to the aisle, was a long conference table. That is where the mayor sat; he could look straight out the aisle, through the open doorway, and into the courthouse foyer. On either side of the mayor sat the City Councilmen; the Republicans on his right, and the Democrats on his left. Charlie, the janitor, said that that was the only way to do it; it was the PROPER way; except Charlie was left-handed, and partial to that side.

Emit was sitting in the front row, in the end chair, on the left side of the aisle, next to a window. He was not whittling; he was fooling around with a whistle that he had made and given to a small boy. The boy had brought it over to Emit, saying it just wouldn't work any more, and Emit told him that any whistles HE made were guaranteed to work, and that he would fix it free of charge. Well, he soon had it going again, and the boy was happy, but the crowd was not. Neither was Jake, for he was sitting next to Emit, dozing, and got the full report when the boy first fired off the whistle. It also woke up Stump, Jake's dog, that was under his chair.

Stump was a shaggy-haired dog of questionable ancestry, and a good barker when the occasion called for it, but he had difficulty seeing through the hair on his face, and would tilt his head first one way and then the other in order to get the best all-around view of the object at hand. It was a real handicap, because the hair just grew every which way, and gave the very appearance of having been stirred with an eggbeater. Ordinarily, Stump could cope with the problem, but he had considerable trouble at high speeds. He never ran into things outright, but he had several near-misses and a lot of sideswipes to his credit. Well, it looked like he was making 10 or 15 knots when he turned the corner and headed up the aisle, for he was pretty flighty if suddenly awakened, and the whistle had set him off. Then the courthouse clock boomed the first of seven gongs, and that upped his rate even more; but it was the apparition Stump saw just as he reached the open doors that really turned the trick; he couldn't stop, and wasn't inclined to anyway!

Elmira had just stepped through the doorway, for the first gong of 7 o'clock was her cue, as Stump was headed out. He zipped under the long flowing gown, got tangled in the folds, started growling and nipping at Elmira's heels, got loose and sideswiped the cast on Elwood's leg, then ran back into the auditorium, again taking refuge under Jake's chair. He decided not to chance THAT route again, and kept his eye on the open window, near Emit, just in case that boy with the whistle came around again.

It was a sight to behold! Elmira was first, of course, and she carried a large white banner, emblazoned with the mystic symbol of the Ladies Temperance Movement and fringed all around with yellow tassels. With her free hand, she was leading her followers in a spirited song; all eighteen of them, including Elwood Stacey. He had not intended to sing, but was caught up in the excitement of things now and was giving it his best effort.

"Temper yourselves with temp'rance. Do it now and don't delaaay!" they sang.

It was a little song that Elmira had written especially for the occasion, and, when she glanced around, she was pleased to see that Elwood WAS singing! But Elwood was not singing THEIR song; he was singing "Give My Regards To Broadway," which was the right tune, but the wrong words. The ladies stopped singing after "delay", for that was Edna Hollister's cue. And they DID stop—but not Elwood; he continued right on, warming up to it better now.

"Remember me to Harooldd Squaaare!"

Elmira could now see that Elwood was not cooperating any better than he had at rehearsals, and to make matters worse, he had thrown Edna's timing off. But Edna screamed anyway. It was a little late, but it accomplished its purpose, for it was a piercing shriek that set Stump to barking again. Edna clasped her handkerchief over her nose with one hand, and shielded her eyes with the other. Then, peeking out between her fingers, she exclaimed:

"Oh! He IS in this room! That dreadful man IS in this very room! Quick, Louella, my medicine. No. It is too late. I am fainting!"

Things got hectic. People started shouting to give her air and water; some said smelling salts; and Emit said a little turpentine and sulfur was a good remedy, and would work just fine on ailing actresses. All the while, the mayor was pounding the gavel on the table, trying to restore order; and just when he had almost succeeded, the boy let go with the whistle again. That was Stump's cue, for he was not going to stay in THAT madhouse another second, and went out the window.

Centennial Planning Meeting For All Next Wednesday At Fire Hall

A meeting was held last week by the Booster Club of Saint Joe to plan further for a town centennial observance which will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 18, 19 and 20.

Another meeting is set for Wednesday of next week, May 7 at the fire hall at 8 p.m. Any individuals or groups interested in the planning of the centennial are invited to attend.

Thus far, tentative plans include tennis tourneys for young people and adults with Forrest Bevington serving as chairman; a "soapbox" derby for ages 9 to 16 and including parental or other adult help, with Fred Rayle serving as chairman; a parade with Jim Norris and Roger Coburn as co-chairmen; a church team softball tourney; a community worship service on Sunday with an old fashioned box lunch auction thereafter and a program of historic nature in the afternoon; activities for the young people with Scout groups in charge; bingo; the Lions annual hand crank homemade ice cream social Saturday evening at the conservation grounds; the open house of Knisely National Bank at its new facility in Saint Joe; a square dance; and various other activities not yet confirmed.

The "soapbox" race is planned as "open competition' as far as design is concerned. The only restrictions tentatively planned are: age 9 to 16; weight of entry and driver not to exceed 275 pounds; adequate brake. This is a "fun" type of thing, so kids and parents can let their imagination "go wild" in designing an entry.

Other suggested possibilities for the weekend include a display of art and crafts, pie and cake baking contests and so on. So, anyone or any group interested in participating or in taking charge of any of the activities is urged to be present at next Wednesday's meeting.

It is also planned to provide space for commercial displays.

The original plat of Saint Joe was laid out in April of 1875. The town was later expanded by several additions and it also became an incorporated town at a later date.

Lambda Sigma

—Meredith Storer, reporter

The regular meeting of Lambda Sigma Chapter of Sigma Phi Gamma was held April 10 at the home of Meredith Storer of Saint Joe. The meeting opened with the recitation of the pledge, after which 11 members were present to hear the secretary's and treasurer's reports.

The annual rummage sale will be held May 10 at 9 a.m. Debbie Miller is in charge of the event. Pecan sales have been completed and our Easter bake sale netted almost $50.00.

The Mother-Daughter banquet will be held Thursday, May 8, at the V&A Restaurant in Kendallville. Cathy Nichols will make the arrangements.

A social meeting will be held in June for guests and the Theta Chi chapter from Coldwater, Michigan, to plan Province '76. Committee meetings for Province will be held in May.

Correspondence included the minutes of the 1975 Beta Province meetings. It was voted to send $10 to our assigned center in Flat Creek Mission, Kentucky.

The meeting concluded in the traditional manner, followed by cake and punch served by the hostess.

Our next meeting will be May 15 at the home of Cathy Nichols.

More Interest Needed For Ap't Project

More people must show an interest in an "apartments for the elderly project" before the county can qualify for such a project.

Auburn Mayor John Foley has asked that those interested in such a project fill in and return to him an information form. He would like to have 100 to 200 replies before making application for funds from the federal government. To date he has only some 60 names.

There is no obligation implied in sending in the information blank, the mayor said.

CARD OF THANKS

Spencerville Methodist Church wants to thank the people and merchants of the St. Joe and Spencerville area for the consignments and donations to the public auction. Also to the public for bidding and buying of merchandise at the sale. The sale was a success and is going to be a big step towards our goal of obtaining a full time pastor.

we admit it . . . our prices on Rexall brand products are cheap . . . but not the quality.

In these times of inflation, Rexall keeps its prices low for one major reason: Rexall cuts out the middleman! Most brands of health and beauty aids travel a complex route: from maker to a wholesaler and finally to the retail store. Rexall takes the direct approach. Our Rexall brands come to us DIRECT from the maker! This way we save, and so do YOU with Rexall brand products!
So, if someone says we're cheap, he's right. But that relates only to Price. That's why we offer this guarantee on Rexall brand products! "Satisfaction guaranteed or you get your money refunded where purchased."

'The Sportsman'

—by Jerry Culbertson

I am going to be writing a weekly article on fishing, hunting and conservation. It seems that there are quite a number of activities going on, good and bad, that a lot of sportsmen I talk to know nothing about. I wil try each week to relate to you some event or events I feel are important.

First of all, the Department of Natural Resources has announced the opened 1975 dates for some game species. These opening dates are: squirrel August 15; deer archery October 18; deer shotgun and muzzleloaders November 22; ruffed grouse October 25; rabbit, quail and pheasant November 7.

In season now: trout, inland lakes and streams, daily and possession, 10 with a 7 inch minimum; salmon, daily and possession, 5 with a 10 inch limit.

So, with stream trout fishing opening last Saturday, Phil Kubik, Roger Webb and I took off for Mongo to fish Pigeon River. We were fishing by 7 a.m. but the fish were not too cooperative. We quit fishing about 3:30 p.m. with only a few solid hits.

We ate in the town's only restaurant, if you don't count the pub, and talked to three conservation officers. They said that a few trout were being caught here and there and one fellow caught a 16 inch three lb. brookie on a purple nightcrawler.

Sunday I had a little better luck on Ball Lake. Fishing in the rain, I caught a couple 9 inch trout. There were 2,500 trout stocked in Ball Lake this year.

just FACTS

—from DEAN'S ENCO SERVICE

Here's a strange sports fact. The Chicago Blackhawks were able to win only 14 out of 48 regular season games in the 1937—38 National Hockey League season. Yet they won the championship of hockey that season! Even though the Blakhawks won only 14 out of 48, they qualified for the last playoff spot in the league standings, and then they surprisingly knocked off each team they met in the playoffs to win the Stanley Cup.

GS Cadette Troop 192

—Lisa Parker, reporter

Monday, April 21, the Cadette Girl Scout Troop 192 took a trip to Rollerdome in Fort Wayne. It was a free skating party by the Rollerdome for the top 20 Girl Scout Troops in our area selling the most cookies.

Everyone was called to sit in a group while a council representative read the winners of two trophies. A girl from the Hamilton troop received a trophy for selling the most cookies. She sold 271 boxes. Then Mrs. Judy Tejan from the local troop was called forward to receive a trophy for the troop selling the most cookies per Scout in the northern area. The girls, Robyn Loy, Lynette Longardner, Babette Herschberger and Lisa Perker, sold an average of 95.25 boxes per girl. The trophy is beautiful, of white marble and blue metal and is about a foot high. We are very proud and again thank all of our friends and neighbors who bought cookies so we could win.

We then skated until six p.m. Judy Tejan then took us to Frank's Nursery where she made some purchases. We then bought a bag of candy to split out of our troop treasury. We were then on our own to look around. We arrived home about 8:30 p.m. We really had a blast!

We also want to report to all old Girl Scouts who ever went to day camp at Camp McMillen that "Mr. Cookie" was awarded the "Thanks Badge" at special recognition night a week ago for his many years of Girl Scout service with his wife cookie at day camp and troop service. Remember the whistles made of tree bark? And the pretty stones or shells, and the stories they shared with us? The thanks badge is a very special high and we are very happy for him!

Ladies Lit'y Club

—Violette Kline, reporter

Gentlemen's Evening of the Ladies Literary Club was enjoyed by having dinner at the Lucky Steer Restaurant in Auburn April 2. After dinner everyone went to the ACD Museum to see and enjoy the expensive antique cars. The committee for the evening was Mrs. Carlos Church and Mrs. Harold Hamman.

The last meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Everett of Auburn. Mrs. Hamman gave a lesson on "UFO's." She said the Air Force does not give out any information on their investigations of UFO's. She made you wonder about the unusual happenings and blackouts in our big cities.

Mrs. Church gave the book report for next year.

The executive meeting to plan next year's work was set for April 30 at the president's home.

The summer committee is Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Musser and Mrs. Wade.

The president gave a county convention report. Mrs. Roy Baker gave the critic's report.

'The Sportsman'

—by Jerry Culbertson

Well, the fishing season is now on in full force. This past weekend we caught bluegills, rock bass, and trout. We had to work a little for the bass and trout, but the bluegills came fairly easy.

Bob Dielman of Butler and a couple of his fishing buddies caught 30 crappies. Their total weight was well over 40 pounds.

In the southern part of our state, mushroom hunters are out tramping the woods. Soon we will also be finding quantities of mushrooms in our own area. There will also be people going north into Michigan hunting mushrooms.

When mushroom hunting, or whatever hunting you do, always stop at the landowners house first and ask permission to be on his property. Be polite, a little courtesy goes a long way.

If there is one thing that is giving sportsmen a bad name, it has to be that small percentage who hunt private land without getting permission, throw their trash all over, trample fences and crops, maim game needlessly and shoot domestic animals. These reasons and more are what is causing the posting of more and more prime hunting land each year.

I go along with David Petral, managing editor for "Field and Stream." He suggests the following. First, hunting licenses must be made more expensive to provide better law enforcement and license testing facilities. Second, in order to purchase a license you should be able to identify most game and distinguish between the sexes. For big game licenses, there should be a marksmanship proficiency test on a rifle range. Third, penalties for game law and related offenses must be tougher, and a person who is convicted of a major one should permanently lose the right to a license.

Maybe with a program something like this, we can eliminate the vandals, incompetents and thugs who are ruining it all for sportsmen.

People talk about endangered species. Well, in my opinion there is one species that is headed for fast extinction, unless we as individuals and organized groups do something today. This species, which many feel will expire in the 1980's, is the hunter.

Plans Proceeed For Saint Joe Centennial - July

A planning meeting was held by the Booster Club of Saint Joe Wednesday in preparation for the town's observance of the 100th anniversary of the original platting.

Residents are asked to cooperate with those who are in charge of various phases of the weekend observance. While several of the activities have been definitely programmed, there are still many "loose ends" to be taken care of before the July 18—20 observance.

Young people and adults interested in participating in tennis tourneys should contact Forrest Bevington who is in charge of that activity.

Fred Rayle and Steve Monroe are in charge of a "soapbox derby" and they can be contacted for information on that activity.

The pastors of Saint Joe Church of Christ and St. Mark Lutheran Church, Ed Schantz, and Dennis Kuchera, are in charge of a Sunday morning community workship service at Wild Cherry Park during the centennial weekend.

The Ladies Literary Club plans an Arts and Crafts exhibit.

An old fashioned box lunch social, with the ladies preparing the lunches and the men bidding on the box lunches, is planned to follow the community worship service. A program related to the history of Saint Joe is set to follow the box social at Wild Cherry Park.

A local area church softball tourney is planned for the week end.

Seehler's Pickles plans to have an area in the display tent for old friends to meet and register.

The local Lions Club annual homemade handcranked ice cream social will be served Saturday evening of the centennial weekend.

Knisely National Bank will hold an open house the same weekend in its new branch bank at Saint Joe.

"The Little Hoosiers" historical group from Riverdale plan to have their exhibit from the state convention at the centennial observance, with Donna Jewel in charge.

Friday night bingo is tentatively planned.

Any of those named above in the various activities will welcome volunteer help from area residents to help make the observance something to remember.

More projects, displays and activities are welcome.

The next meeting will be held Wednesday, May 21, at 8 p.m. at the fire hall.

Leadership Trickery

"TEACHERS ENTITLED TO FIGHT FOR JOBS" was the headline on a feature article last week in the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette. The headline was misleading, it contained an innuendo. And because the reading public often takes headlines as statements of fact, it is often misled. True, teachers do have the right to fight for their jobs. Who said they don't? The important factor is: what do you mean by "fight"? Do you mean staging a demonstration to embarrass a school board, or do you mean by more diligent application to your job in order to deserve retention?

The article was written in connection with hearings in Fort Wayne related to the firing of teachers in that city's school system. To cope with the actions of the Fort Wayne school board, the leaders of the teachers' organization recruited some 400 or so teachers to attend the board's hearing on two of the firings. A coffin was carried in and placed before the school board. It is significant — and a cause for rejoicing!—that some of the teachers thereafter objected to the tactics used by their leadership. They were not told what was going to be done and were thus tricked into participating in a mass activity. Even the Journal-Gazette, as permissive and pro-labor and pro-teacher in policy as you can get, felt compelled to publish one of its "nasty" editorial-page cartoons in criticism of the teacher group.

Such goings on, such headlines and opinionated writings as mentioned above not placed on the editorial pages, make me wonder why we let some things go so far one way. For instance, if it is true that teachers ARE entitled to fight for their jobs, are not school board members and school administrators (principals and superintendents) also entitled to fight for balanced budgets, to fight for efficient use of public tax money in education, to fight for sustained quality of education through hiring conscientious teachers? School enrollments have dropped throughout the whole country, generally speaking. With increased salaries for teachers but fewer students, it has been necessary therefore to adjust faculty numbers. In plain talk, this means reducing the number of teachers to "fit" the money available.

Getting the most for your money is the measure of efficiency, whether in private enterprise or in government. If you ask me, far too much time and money are spent by teacher organizations for things other than classroom efficiency. If there was as much effort toward objective examination of supposed benefits from "new" teaching methods and an honest appraisal of the results of such changes, our students would be coming out of school better prepared than they are for the realities of living.

Far too much "head in the clouds" theorizing is going on in education today in an effort to discredit past practices in education, too much emphasis on making learning and education "fun" is evident in modern thinking. Our kids would be much better off today when they graduate from high school if there was a return to the basic (and old fashioned!) readin', writin' and 'rithmetic, plus the recognition and teaching of one of the truths of life: those things which have value involve WORK, not fun.

Laws Destroy 'Law'

Thursday, May 1, was "Law Day."

It has been traditional to set aside such a day to give recognition to the importance of law in a system of justice in a free nation. The protection of the individual citizen is the prime factor in efforts to establish laws to govern a free people.

The most significant set of laws in man's history are called "The Ten Commandments." These are sometimes thought of as being a hindrance in the enjoyment of living. Why? Because a number of them begin with a negative sound: ". . . thou shalt not . . . ." They are sometimes thought of as "ball and chain" in the activities of human beings because of the "don't, don't, don't" which some people seem to hear as the predominating idea.

This is unfortunate. The Ten Commandments are more properly taken as "Guides For Living" rather than negative admonitions. Think of the wide expanse of living which you and I can enjoy each day, as we choose. In reality, instead of telling us what we can't do, the Ten Commandments say, "Whatever you do (and that covers a lot of territory), be careful to remember that what you have comes from God, be careful that you do not do harm or injustice to your fellow man, be careful that you remember the love and care your parents and your elders have shown you, be careful that you keep people more important than 'things', be careful that your motivation in whatever you do does not become directed toward yourself at the expense and suffering of others."

When we apply this approach, that of respecting the guidance of the Ten Commandments in the many, many activities that are a part of daily living, we find joy and fulfillment. Also, when we examine our American society today in light of the Ten Commandments, we find a disturbingly strong inclination to make "law" a tool to compel people to do what other people have determined should be done. Actually, God has given us more freedom than we give ourselves or others—and He is supposedly the hard-nosed Supreme Judge of all!

In the past it has been a compliment to this nation to state that we are "a nation of laws, not men." But in the past 30 years, we have taken that saying literally and have passed thousands of laws, at the national and state level, in setting a pattern for people to live by. The rate of passing laws appears to increase each year to the point where laws overlap, or we are not certain as to what the new laws mean in effect. We have so many restrictions placed upon us each year that it is dangerously close to a misuse of the word to call ourselves a "free" nation.

Today, we are so steeped in "law" that it seems a private individual, or a corporation, can't do anything in a sense without consulting a lawyer. Laws are passed (by lawyers who dominate our legislative halls) which make mandatory legal process a financial burden on our society without actually providing any more service or protection. Dozens of individuals have gone into the legal profession because it is a lucrative field with certain guaranteed fees. The public has no defense against this condition; it is compelled too often to obtain the services of a lawyer when mutual agreement of two or more parties could be achieved without someone having to shell out a considerable amount of money. In particular, it is a "crime" that many divorce cases sap the financial strength of the husband simply because you must have a lawyer to take care of legal technicalities—technicalities put there by lawyers! It is a "crime" that in a given county, a lawyer states to an inquiring client, "A divorce costs $2,000 in this county." I am not trying to promote "cheap" divorces. The point is, under our fast and modern and loose society of today, the divorce rate is close to the 50% mark, and each divorce means legal fees—and that means money taken from the pockets of private citizens and put into the bank accounts of thousands of attorneys.

Other matters are involved, too. It is a "crime" that the death of a husband or wife necessitates legal expenses on a percentage basis—whatever the estate contains, the lawyer gets a set percentage. While not all lawyers follow that practice, the set percentage IS allowable by law. In most cases, such legal services involve only the filing of certain reports which are standard in form; there is no great amount of work involved in those instances. It's just going through the motions for which a significant fee is collected.

Unless there is a dispute within a family, it ought to suffice to have a will in itself provide for the disposition of the property of the deceased. A family ought to be able to keep all of what has been accumulated by a member of that family, without having to shell out legal fees for set standard procedures which involve comparatively little actual work. (This leads into another area of thought—that inheritance taxes ought to be eliminated so that a family's wealth remains intact for the benefit of that family or whomever the deceased might wish to favor.

When judgments for damages are awarded, lawyers get at least one-third of the judgment. Sometimes it goes up to one-half or more. This does not include trial expenses which are incurred through court procedures. The public is generally not aware that when it reads of an award of $100,000 to a plaintiff, the plaintiff's lawyer gets AT LEAST $33,333. In a $200,000 judgment, the lawyer gets $66,666. In a $1 million judgment, the lawyer gets $333,333—unless he happens to give his or her client a "break" and reduces the fee. But these "breaks" are few and far between or the one-third minimum would not have been established in the first place, it would seem.

In some instances, by the time the lawyer gets his cut off the top and the other related expenses are taken care of, the "winner" of the judgment, the one who has presumably suffered an injury or "wrong," comes out with but a fraction of the total judgment.

The cost of constructing public buildings goes up because of a set fee for legal services in setting up a bond issue. 2% of the total bond issue goes to the lawyer and staff who set up the bond issue. If you put up a school or addition for $1 million, the lawyer gets $20,000. The bigger the bond issue, the more dollars paid for legal services. But there is little if any additional work for a $2 million issue than for a $1 million issue; but the pay goes from $20,000 to $40,000.

Laws have established legal procedures. Lawyers have for the most part proposed such laws, inasmuch as lawyers dominate our legislative halls. Even though they have made some terrible "goofs" on occasion, lawyers have still been able to sell the public on the idea that a lawyer knows better how to legislate than does a layman. And while not all lawyers are money-grabbers (I have several lawyer friends — or did have), it remains that lawyers have a very high level of income and they have dominated our legislative processes which, by coincidence, happen to include mandatory legal involvements. The legal profession is profiting from the legal processes it has established based on mandatory costs paid by the average citizen and corporations as well as governmental units.

Today, it is no longer a matter of pride to proclaim, "We are a nation of laws, not men." Today, we are a nation of men's laws—and that is an entirely different—and expensive—story.

'Save The Embassy'

While the effort is not related to our immediate community, I think the drive to "Save the Embassy" (it was the "Emboyd" in my younger days) is one which really deserves the support of people in the entire Tri-State area. Fort Wayne is a "gem" in that, for a city its size, it has more attractions than a person can keep up with—from the theater to art and culture to dining out to sports to entertainment to music—you name it, Fort Wayne has it, generally speaking.

Having enjoyed the movie theaters in Fort Wayne when I was in high school and for a time thereafter, it was a bitter disappointment to see the Paramount theater torn down several years ago for commercial redevelopment, then the Palace theater where the big bands of the '40's and other well-known entertainment were featured live on weekends. Now the only theater left, with any "class," is the Embassy and it still stands only because a group of people who appreciate its history and its beauty have taken on the task of raising enough money to buy the property. Also involved is the old Indiana Hotel; both buildings were set for the demolition crew until the current effort got underway.

There are so many treasures of the past that are being taken away in recent years, to be replaced by "modern" and supposedly more fitting facilities. We tear down and destroy historic buildings and remove from our communities many of those things which are a part of the community's heritage and growth. "It's old" has been one of the most destructive forces at work in modern society. I can recall how disappointing it was when the old Barr Street Market was torn down several years ago at Fort Wayne; it made me "sick." It was replaced by—some green grass and trees, yes—also by parking meters and automobiles. And now what are they trying to do in Fort Wayne, on Barr Street?—why, set up once again the old fashioned marketplace! And how useful might those old trolley cars be now, providing public transportation without any exhaust fumes! — if they hadn't "gone modern," paved over the streetcar rails and instituted buses.

Americans spend millions of dollars each year, traveling to foreign countries—to see how modern foreign cities and the countryside have become? No—to see old buildings, old customs, old traditions, "the past." Why? Because they represent something meaningful—people, struggles, successes, failures, the handiwork of the ages.

Here in America, we either throw it out or tear it down.

"Save the Embassy"!

Don't Underestimate Buyer

I'm sure you've heard it said: "Why should I sell my house through a Realtor? I can sell it myself and pocket the commission. Right?" . . . . . Wrong!

This kind of thinking can easily turn out to be financial folly.

Never underestimate the hard financial bargaining ability of the average buyer. Spend one day in the field with any Realtor, negotiating and handling offers and counter-offers and you'll appreciate what I'm saying. Frankly, if the typical buyer knows you are not selling through a Realtor, right off the bat he'll expect you to deduct the commission for HIS benefit before you even START serious negotiations.

Then you're on your own, possibly at a great disadvantage, in the intricate areas of financing, negotiating and protecting yourself from all sorts of do—it—yourself pitfalls. You've got a lot invested in your home. It makes sense to list it with a good Realtor. He'll sell it for you—without hitches, for the best price and in the shortest amount of time.

Thinking of selling your home or farm? It makes sense to list it with this town's only real estate office: Strombeck Real Estate, phone 337—3325. Many qualified prospects waiting to buy your property. — "Make Strombeck your partner in the business of living."

Today's farming is big business. A financial program could well be in order.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

I guess all is not lost.

After seeing the demoralizing trend of fashions in recent months, with the designers intent on bringing long skirts back for the American Beauty, it was refreshing last week to see a Robert Hall ad with two models in cute short skirted dresses for summer wear. And there was another ad showing a long T-shirt for the gals—and that's it—the T-shirt—and legs.

I noted with interest a couple of weeks ago that a Fort Wayne school's Latin department had a banquet, with students dressing as much like the old Romans as they could, and a program including chariot races, with students serving as "horses" and drivers in wheeling the miniature chariots about.

One of my deepest regrets is that education has "put down" Latin so positively in the past 10 to 20 years. With man's biggest problem still the inability to effectively communicate, it is a shame that the language which is the foundation of about half the English language, if not more, is pushed aside for supposedly more "relevant" language study in the high school.

That Fort Wayne Latin department's activities show that serious study CAN be augmented by "fun" associated with that subject.

If you haven't noticed, I'll point out that the so-called election reform ballyhooed by certain political bigwigs last year is reported in increasing numbers of articles to be more a boon to current officeholders than an instrument for "equality" in election campaigns.

Keep that in mind next November.

I almost tossed aside a page of news "fillers" from Indiana University last week when my eye caught the name "Philip Appleman" in one of the short paragraphs. My brother in law was noted as recipient of two of the annual awards of the Poetry Society of America—the Christopher Morley Award and the Alice Fay di Castagnola Award.

Those names mean little to me—they're out of my class. But they mean something to the literary world, and it sounds as if the old professor is still puting out some good stuff. He's professor of English at IU in Bloomington.

It's nice that a program on the metric system was so well prepared in our elementary schools that the state has used it as a pilot for programs in other schools.

But—who said we should go to metrics? ? I have yet to see or sense a strong "push" for metrics from business and industry—and parents. I know the change has been talked about for some time, but when was the change authorized and by whom?

I walked into the Butler Elementary School recently to stop at the superintendent's office, and there in big block letters was "THINK METRIC" on the wall—you couldn't miss it, going in or out. And I pondered, " 'Think metric'? Who says so?"

I think it strange that spokesmen for teachers make it a point to criticise parents for "indoctrinating" their children into the ways of the parents. Yet, it is not objectionable to "indoctrinate" those children into the ways of the teachers.

The change to metrics involves billions of dollars in added costs to American industry. Are the students told this part of the story?

And the change to metrics will not impsove anyone's abilities if he or she can't add or subtract—a basic ingredient in everyday living. And it is in the basics—readin', writin' and 'rithmetic—that young people have stumbled in the past ten years, according to achievement tests.

If you ask me, this is another example of a "new idea," a change imposed on the American parent (like "new math," new reading methods, new spelling techniques, new grading systems, new classroom setups and so on) without any consultation with or consideration for the parents.

I think it is good that students have knowledge of metrics. But I am afraid that the present effort is not just for general knowledge but to subtly prepare young people for a change which is not going to improve their way of living nor help them get along with one another any better than their "unprogressive" parents.

Riverdale Little Hoosiers Win 1st At Annual State Convention

The Riverdale Little Hoosiers won first place Saturday with their display at the annual Little Hoosiers State Convention at Knightstown. The display was entitled, "Pickle Packin' St. Joe" and centered around the processing of pickles at the Seehler plant north of Saint Joe. The Little Hoosiers' canning efforts were also included.

The display included pictures of both the Seehler plant and the Little Hoosiers canning pickles. There was a tape recording which explained the pictures, a listening post shaped like a cucumber, a display of both Seehler and Little Hoosier pickles, a game centered around St. Joe history, and a pickle recipe booklet shaped like a cucumber.

Another award won by the group was a first place award for the greatest percentage of club members in attendance at the convention.

June Johnston, a fifth grader, won third in the state with her essay about her great grandmother who is 102 years old. She won a $5 cash award.

Tonalee Shinaberry, a fifth grader also, was elected to the Little Hoosier statewide council.

Butler elementary Little Hoosiers were runnerup to the Riverdale group with a display on schoolhouses in DeKalb County, including replicas of two of the buildings.

Cathy Kern, Shelly Richmond Head EHS Class Of 1975 Honors

Catherine Kern, daughter of MM Kenneth Kern of R1 Saint Joe, has been named valedictorian of the Class of 1975 of DeKalb Eastside High School. She had a 4.000 average for her high school years.

Cathy plans to attend Ball State University to major in English. At Eastside, she was a member of the National Honor Society, Easterner Yearbook staff, Girls' Athletic Association, French Club and Booster Block. She has been active in community youth activities and earned manager letters in girls' athletics. She was named a commended student in the National Merit Scholarship program.

Shelly was also a member of the National Honor Society, and has been active on the Easterner Yearbook staff, in the Future Teachers Association, Science Club, French Club, Student Council, Booster Block, Thespian Club and Drama Club. She plans to enter teaching in music and French and will attend either Indiana University or Ohio State University in preparation for a teaching career.

Not One, But Two Women's Teams Capture Bowling Championships

Saint Joe has the distinction of having not one but two women's championship bowling teams this year.

Phyllis Fetters captains the team sponsored by her husband as "Fetters Repair Shop" and Ruth Shilling is captain of the "Brown Furniture & Hardware" team. Both had high individual games in their respective leagues. Ruth and Betty Brown had a 500-plus series the past season.

The teams included:

Fetters, Friday night champs at Leo: Phyllis Fetters, Beverly Mansfield, Delores Inlow, Ruth Shilling, Robin Strawser.

Choir Concert

Rev. Dennis Kuchera has announced that the Antwerp, Ohio, Senior High School Choir will perform a concert of sacred and patriotic music Sunday, May 18, at 2 p.m. at St. Peter Evangelical Lutheran Church in Spencerville. There are over 60 students in the choir.

The concert is to commemorate the 100th anniversary of St. Mark Evangelical Lutheran Church at Saint Joe, sister congregation of St. Peter in the local Lutheran parish.

The public is invited to attend. A freewill offering will be taken to defray traveling expenses of the choir.

New Bridge Built At Local Park

A new rustic bridge is being built at Wild Cherry Park under the supervision of Kenneth Roberts and town board member Bob Stiver. The bridge spans Bear Creek and connects two picnic areas in the park.

A bridge had been at the same location for the past several years, built there when the park was first developed. Time and use had deteriorated the original bridge the past couple of years to the point where replacement was necessary.

Steel beams undergird the new bridge which is built of trees and timber to continue the rustic appeal of the park and its facilities.

Adult Planning Meeting Monday

A planning meeting for adult leaders of both Boy Scouts and Girls Scouts in the area will be held at 8 p.m. Monday. The meeting will be held at the Bob Stiver residence.

Julie Mishler said this week that the planning is for a clean-up day in July, in preparation for the Saint Joe Centennial.

Beard, Mustache Registration Starts Saturday; 'From Scratch' Baking Contest Set For Town Centennial

Things are beginning to "jell" for the July 18—20 Centennial observanee at Saint Joe.

With comments heard from time to time about a beard and mustache contest, which seems to be standard fare for the various centennials this year throughout the area, the answer is "yes" when someone asks, "Is there going to be a contest?"

Dean and Julie Mishler have volunteered to be co-chairmen of the contest. And registration will begin Saturday of this coming weekend, May 17, at the Mishlers' Enco station.

Other committee members include Butch Coburn, Bob Stiver, Dick Mack and Tom Mack. The entry fee is $1 and an official entry card can be obtained from any of the above committee members.

The categories have not yet been definitely established. However, it is necessary to be clean shaven at registration time. So, whether it's a beard or mustache or both, early registration is a help in growing adequate foliage.

Another contest of interest to ladies—and perhaps a few males too—is a "Homemakers Homemade Cake and Pie Contest" to be conducted by Fern Carr and Gertrude Reinhart. This is a "made from scratch" contest with no box mixes or ready-made crusts allowed.

The judging will be held Saturday, July 19, at 2 p.m. in the cafetorium. Registration deadline is Wednesday, July 16. Call Mrs. Carr at 337—3445 or Mrs. Reinhart at 337—2552 to register.

A parade is planned for Saturday, July 19, at 10 a.m. with Jim Norris and Roger Coburn serving as co-chairmen. Entry deadline is July 12. There will be a kids' Pet Division included in the parade.

Call Jim Norris at 337—2475 or Roger Coburn at 337—3095 to register.

Registration may also be made with Dave Hagar at the Saint Joe Barbershop.

A raffle will be held in conjunction with the centennial weekend. Three prizes include a 12" portable black and white TV, a portable AM—FM radio and a choice of a man's electric razor or a lady's electric shaver.

A large tent will be available for display purposes. Tim Kuker of the Kone Kastle is in charge of space rentals.

The local fire department and auxiliary plan a barbecue stand at the centennial activities site, the ball diamond and school area.

A Sunday morning community worship service held jointly under co-chairmen Pastors Ed Schantz and Dennis Kuchera is planned. An old fashioned box lunch social will follow the worship service with a program of historic content to come thereafter.

Other activities are in the formative stage, all under the direction of the Booster Club of Saint Joe.

A meeting will be held next Wednesday, May 21, at 8 p.m. at the fire hall for further planning.

Saint Joe A Busy Place These Days

The hum of activity has been evident in Saint Joe in the past two weeks or so due to the beginning of the planting season and the work being done on two new public facilities.

With farmers getting seed and fertilizer, there has been a constant flow of traffic to the local elevator and the fertilizer plant.

And while most of the public's attention has been directed toward the new branch bank building to be opened soon by Knisely National Bank of Butler, similar activity is evident at the General Telephone Company exchange site where work is underway on a new building to house a new electronic telephone exchange, to be put in service in July of next year.

Another new building has gone up during the past few months, this one built by Lonnie Keller behind his residence on the main street. A racing enthusiast for several years, Lonnie has his own elaborate dragster plus a truck-trailer rig to haul the racing car to various racing events. He uses the 35x40 steel building to house the racing unit and make necessary repairs and adjustments.

Thus, bit by bit, the old buildings in Saint Joe are being augmented by new installations, an indication it seems of growing interest in the community.

And to illustrate how time flies, how long has the News Office been in its "new" building? If you said eight years, you're right. It was built in the winter and spring of 1966—67.

PTO To Honor Retiring Teachers

Lynn Kaiser, president of the Riverdale PTO, announced this week that the group will meet next Tuesday, May 20, at the Riverdale cafetorium starting at 7:30 p.m.

The program will include recognition of students who have won awards during the school year. Also to be honored are four teachers who will retire after the current school year: Freida Guilford, Blanche Middaugh, Violet Baker and Forrest Bevington.

Election of officers will be held.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for their cards, flowers, expressions of sympathy and helpfulness in our time of need at the death of our loved one.

Gertrude Billow and family

Jerry McKown

Funeral services were held Friday for Jerry Thomas McKown, 60, of R1 Butler who died Wednesday of last week at DeKalb Memorial Hospital after a two-year illness.

Mr. McKown was born September 29, 1914, in Madison, Wisconsin, the son of Hayse and Hilda Sachs McKown.

Mr. McKown had lived in the local area for the past 28 years. He was a retired die caster for General Electric.

In August of 1936, Mr. McKown married Berniece Rumbaugh.

Survivors include the wife and mother; three sons, Larry and Richard of Saint Joe and Thomas of R2 Auburn; a daughter, Mrs. Conan Myers of Fort Wayne; two brothers, William of Columbia City and James of Buffalo, Minnesota; a sister, Miss Marguerite McKown of Fort Wayne and 10 grandchildren.

Burial was in Riverside Cemetery at Newville.

CHAPTER 5—THE HEARING (Part II)

By the time Elmira had pushed her way through the crowd to reach Edna, the clamor had partially subsided. Nevertheless, she spoke loudly, and with exaggerated concern for Edna.

"Oh, Mr. Mayor! Tragedy has struck down our Edna TOO — the gentle creature has FAINTED! First it was our Elwood; now it is Edna. He must go, Mr. Mayor; the whittler must GO!"

Now the crowd let go again, and worse than before. For this time, quite unlike the Union Street affair, Elmira did not have public sympathy for her cause, and had grossly overestimated their concern about Emit's whittling. She should have known better, and DID know, but was gambling that she could induce a sympathetic crowd reaction by using a few theatrics. The crowd was not at all interested in her cause, but they WERE interested in her theatrics; for that is what they had come to see, and that was what they were getting.

The mayor was pounding the gavel again, with greater vigor now; but in his enthusiasm for the task, he missed the hardwood block and struck a councilman's finger. Charlie noticed it, and frowned, and thought the mayor did it on purpose; but before he could work up a good protest, the mayor went wide of the mark again; this time toward the right, and, on the second try, got a Republican too—but with less enthusiasm of course.

Edna had now recovered from her feint, and was on her feet, and being fanned by several ladies, and was cooled as much by the breezy chatter as she was by the fanning action.

"Mrs. Turnbull!" thundered the mayor, looking menacingly at Elmira. "Since our Edna now appears to be self-sustaining, perhaps you could provide us with an explanation of her sudden illness."

"It is her allergy, Mr. Mayor," said Elmira, in a subdued and solemn tone.

"Her AL-lergy?" said the mayor.

"Yes, Mr. Mayor," replied Elmira, as if stating a sad truth. "That is what did it."

"What allergy?" asked the mayor.

"There! Right there!" exclaimed Elmira, stiffening her arm and pointing to Emit; but all the while looking at the mayor.

"Emit?!!" asked the astonished mayor.

"No. Well, yes, in a way, Mr. Mayor. But it's really the hickory bark that did it. You see, just the least trace of it sends the delicate thing into a faint."

"Mrs. Turnbull," said the mayor, rather triumphantly. "I have the good pleasure to inform you that Emit Houston is not whittling; nor has he done so in this room this evening."

But Elmira was prepared, and would not be put off, for she had thought of all possibilities.

"He does not HAVE to be, Mr. Mayor. The odor is all over him! Just a wisp will do it, especially if it's GREEN hickory bark. Why, you couldn't begin to imagine how sensitive Edna is to it, Mr. Mayor. Just last week, on the way to Elwood's house, she . . . ."

"Speaking of Elwood," interrupted the mayor, "he is about to fall over. I think it is the plaster and gauze ballast on his leg that is giving him trouble. Is that your handiwork, too?"

"Mr. Mayor!" replied an indignant Elmira. "Handiwork is a poor choice of words! If you're referring to the leg-length cast, yes; that is our way of alleviating the pain and suffering brought on by the 'untimely misfortune' to which I alluded in the petition."

So far, Emit had taken no particular interest in Elmira's antics; but [illegible] turned around, he could see that the mayor's assessment of Elwood's stability was correct, and said, rather calmly:

"He's startin' to weave somewhat, Elmiry."

"He is for a fact," said Charlie, excitedly. "Get him, quick; he's goin' over for sure!"

But the same two ladies who had escorted Elwood in had reached him, preventing Charlie's anxieties from materializing. Then, much to Elmira's dismay, Elwood began to sing again.

"Tell all the gang at Forty-Second Street that I will a—soon a—be a—there."

"Boys, he's layin' it on good how, ain't he?" said the man next to Charlie.

"He is for a fact," said Charlie. "And never had a singin' lesson in his life."

"You can't beat him, that's for sure—not once he's tuned up proper," said the other.

"'Pears to me he ain't hit his stride yet either," interjected Emit in a low voice. "Just wait till that Elixir—of—Rosewater takes a good hold; then you'll hear some REAL singin'."

"You mean he's been drinkin' again; right under Elmira's nose?" exclaimed Charlie.

"Charles, I will thank you to keep your unkind remarks to yourself," said Elmira, in a haughty and scolding manner. "If you had an ounce of decency in you, you would applaud that wretched fellow; just stands there, smiling through it all; and all the time tormented with pain. There! You see how he's frowning now?"

"That ain't pain," said the man next to Charlie. "He's stumped on the next verse to the song. Mark my words, boys; that's what he's figurin' out right now."

"Whisper of how I'm yearninggg . . ."

"He was for a fact," said Charlie. "You had it figured right down to the mark. By Ginger, that's good singin'! I've got a notion to make it a duet from now on."

And he did.

—by Guy Mausteller

Sorry there was no article in last week's News—hope you missed it! So many things to do and deadline day was past before I realized it.

First—we want to thank everyone for the success we had in our fund drive for a resuscitator. As we neared the closing date, we were a bit worried, but the local Lions Club made up the balance, for which we are very thankful. About a week later, we received some checks from interested citizens which put us $98.26 over our goal. This surplus will be put to good use as other equipment is always needed or in need of repair.

It has always amazed me how volunteer organizations such as a fire department can think of a project and with everyone pitching in, can get the job done and have fun along with all the hard work.

Fire departments, for the most part, work together, and this is very true with St. Joe and Butler. The Butler department held an auction recently and it was my pleasure to work with them. They put in a lot of hours and back breaking labor, but ask any of them and they pass it off as just part of their duties as volunteer firemen. What a fine attitude. It was necessary to have security guards on Friday night so none of the items would disappear. I spent part of the evening with them, sitting around a camp fire, on overstuffed furniture, watching color TV and roasting hot dogs and marshmallows. Now that is what they call roughing it. Nevertheless, everyone was tired and it really was a lot of fun.

Our last training session was well worth the time spent. We decided to learn to operate the We pulled out about a hundred feet of cable (no problem), but wench on the front of the tanker. when we tried to engage the proper gears to rewind the cable (big problems). After much work and following suggestions from those present, we found our problem and all went well. Should it be necessary to ever use this equipment, we now have seven skilled operators. This is the reason the Chief requests training and more training.

Unless something unusual happens, our next articles will start an all-new series—so keep watching.

Riverdale News

Did you know: that Riverdale School's Becky Olson and Kathy Mack placed first and second, respectively, in the DeKalb County Soil Conservation Poster Contest for fourth graders.

That Mr. Kenneth Ehle, math consultant for Northern Indiana, and Gary Daily, photograhper for the State Department of Public Instruction, spent all day Friday photographing and recording a play on metric measurement by Donna Jewel's fourth grade class.

Children having trouble with reading or who need a little extra help have again been coming to the Reading Lab at Riverdale. This is the third year for the lab which works with small groups of children from grades one to six.

The Reading Lab can better work with individual needs, since the children come to it in small groups. Phonics, sight words, comprehension, and vocabulary meaning are the main areas covered, but various other areas are also worked on depending on the child's needs.

Through a mixture of fun and hard work these children learn to become better readers and therefore enjoy it more.

Riverdale's remedial reading program is completely funded through ESEA Title I under the division of compensatory education.

FFA Meeting

—Sam Culler, reporter

On May 6, the Future Farmers of America held a meeting during activity period. The test plots were brought up and discussed. The FFA would like to know if there is any corn dealer that would like to contribute any varieties of corn for our test plots.

Also, a committee was brought up on the cleaning of roadsides. It was discussed and decided that we would work on Road 6 and the sanitary landfill road. The purpose for this is to help beautify the community.

On May 8, State Advisor Terry Fields visited Donald Gengnagel's and Dean Schrader's farms for an American Farmer inspection. He interviewed and checked both candidates' record books and looked over the homesteads.

FARM BUREAU

—Marie Myers, reporter

At the April 28 meeting, Charles Bloom chose the parable of the three servants as the theme of his devotions. He read a sermonette entitled, "Serving Where You Are" from the "Prairie Farmer." It was written by Don Jennings of Angola. He closed with the Lord's Prayer and the pledge to the flag.

President Francis Nelson announced that cheese is available to be ordered in mild, sharp or caraway. It comes in four one pound packages for $5.50. Those ordering the orange juice concentrate may pick it up after June 15.

Edna Perkins, Woman Leader, reported on the three meetings she attended this month. They were the District II Woman's Meeting, DeKalb Amateur Contest and the district marketing trip to Battle Creek.

Marvin Metzger, fieldman, read a letter from George Doup, state president, asking members to write their Congressmen expressing their views on the farm bill. He also reported on membership. DeKalb County is at 93% of last year's total. District II is 95% as is the state. Noble County is the only county reaching 100% and over.

July 9—12 there will be a Youth Safety Camp held at Bainbridge. This is for freshman, sophomore and junior high school students. Several courses will be given on defensive driving, firearms safety, first aid, child care, farm safety, boating, bicycle, motorcycle and also tractor safety.

Adeline Stucky will have devotions in May.

But, when Terry Kern hopped out of her Bug this week to bring in the news release about the program she had, somehow—I melted.

—A smile, and an all-around exuberant personality do that to me.

—Shorts and T-shirts don't hurt, either.

A "Town Scout Cleanup Day" for Saint Joe is planned for Saturday, July 12, as a result of a planning meeting held Monday.

The Scouts of Saint Joe are going to blanket the town, cleaning up all the way. This includes both Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts.

10 Teams in Church League's 24th Year

Ten teams are preparing for the opening of the 1975 Saint Joe Church Softball League with the opening game set for Monday, June 2.

The league, now entering its 24th year of action, has two churches entering two teams this year. Coburntown Church of Christ has had two entries in recent years, and is now joined by Norris Chapel United Methodist with a double entry. Other participants are: Saint Joe Church of Christ and Concord United Methodist combined, Newville United Methodist, Newville Church of Christ, Hicksville Church of Christ, Spencerville United Methodist, and the Lutherans from St. Mark at Saint Joe and St. Peter at Spencerville.

One of the basic eligibility rules requires attendance at church on at least two Sundays of the month prior to a scheduled game. Thus, to play in June, the players must have been at church or church school on at least two Sundays in May. In addition, players are expected to be recognized members of the church for whom they play. This part of the league's rules is run on the honor system. Though there have been occasional questions about eligibility of certain players, the system has worked fairly well, says Ted Haberkorn, president of the league. "If you can't trust each other in church league, we're sunk!" he noted.

The church league began in 1952 after lights were installed at the local diamond in 1951 after a concerted community effort to raise funds. Then it cost some $3500 for the installation; now the price tag would be over $10,000 according to an I&M executive.

New fence has been installed around the outfield except for a span of about 50 feet, which is expected to be completed by opening night.

Approximately $1,000 has been spent on the new fence, financed totally by contributions from the participating churches, including a final assesment last fall of $100 per team.

Of consistent benefit to the league, the president pointed out, has been the contribution each year from the Saint Joe Lions Club to cover the cost of electricity for the lights. The town board paid the light bill for some three years, several years ago. With a new board in office, the support ended and the Lions took over.

The success of the league is evidenced by the fact that, had the schedule allowed for more games during the summer, there could be 13 teams participating instead of 10, the president noted. "The league pretty much runs itself," he said, "and just about everyone knows what is expected from them in providing umpires, preparing the diamond and so on. But that should not detract from the fact that having Lavon Hart as secretary, making up the schedule, taking care of other details, is a big help. He's been at it now going into his 17th consecutive year as secretary."

The president is starting his 15th year.

Ministers of the participating churches serve with the officers as the board of directors designated to settle any serious disputes or questions. "To my knowledge, we have never had to call them together. If it has happened, it's a long time ago," the president said, "and that speaks well for the churches and the players."

Terry Kern To Head Summer Rec'n Program

The Riverdale summer recreational program, under the cooperation of CETA and the Saint Joe Lions Club, will begin June 9. Activities are open to children of the Riverdale area. The season's list of activities includes swimming, tennis, kickball, soccer and coed softball.

The first week of the program will start with tennis lessons beginning at 1:00 p.m. for boys and girls in grades four through six. Then at 2:00 p.m., lessons will be given to those boys and girls in grades seven and eight. Tennis will run for nine weeks and will be held Monday, Wednesday and Friday. All participants in these lessons must provide their own racquet and two tennis balls.

Also included in the first week will be girls' kickball on Tuesdays and Thursdays. This is open to girls in grades four through eight and will begin at 1:00 p.m. on the Saint Joe diamond.

Bus service will be provided for those boys and girls in kindergarten through eighth grade who wish to take part in swimming lessons. These lessons will begin June 16 and will run every day for two weeks at the Auburn pool.

The bus will pick up at the following places and times:

Chaney's Restaurant at Spencerville at 8:30 a.m.; Riverdale School at Saint Joe at 8:35 a.m.; and Newville general store at 8:45 a.m.

The cost for the lessons will be $5.00 plus a $7.00 fee for a season pass to the pool, good all summer.

The soccer for boys in grades four through eight will start June 30. This will run on Monday, Wednesday and Friday starting at 9:00 a.m.

Another activity, coed softball, will be offered for those boys and girls interested, in grades four through eight. This begins July 1 and will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays beginning at 9:00 a.m.

Terry Kern, daughter of MM Kenneth Kern of near Saint Joe and a student at Indiana State, will serve as recreation director this summer. Additional information can be obtained from Terry by calling 337—2053.

St. Mark Lutheran Church To Observe 100th Year This Weekend

St. Mark Lutheran Church at Saint Joe will observe its 100th birthday as a congregation with a weekend of activities Saturday, Sunday and Monday of this coming weekend. The congregation was established in August of 1875.

Saturday evening a pageant will be presented at 7 p.m. in the church.

Historical items will be on display related to the local congregation.

At 8:30 p.m., there will be a "Pioneer Social" in a barn on the Frank Sechler property just south of town, with square dancing a feature of the evening.

Sunday morning worship at 10 a.m. will include members of St. Peter Lutheran Church at Spencerville for a joint service.

From 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. there will be a Fellowship Dinner at the Riverdale Cafetorium. Music will be provided by the Brush College Quartet.

At 2 p.m., a program will be presented at the church featuring a keynote address by Dr. Walter M. Wick, president of the Indiana—Kentucky Synod of the Lutheran Church in America.

A reception will follow.

Monday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., there will be open house at the church for the public.

24 pastors have served the local congregation. Included are Enos W. Erick 1875—80; Samuel Kelso 1880—82; Ezra K. Baker 1882—85; Siman P. Fryberger 1885—88; J. S. Nelson 1888—92; Jacob W. Thomas 1892—95; W. C. Dunlap 1895—99; William Schrock 1899—1903; William M. Habey 1903—06; Frank A. Dressel 1906—09; Stephan Hitchner 1910—12; Daniel P. Heltzel 1913—15; A. K. Mumma 1915—21; Sidney Steffy 1922—24; Paul B. Rodiger 1926—27; George D. Stoll 1929—31; Arthur H. Fabian 1932—34; J. C. Ferster 1935—37; Frank L. Stevenson 1938—48; Howard Baker 1949—54; Philip E. Barnhart 1954—57; Ivan O. Miller 1958—63; Russell E. Snyder 1965—72; Dennis J. Kuchera 1973—.

Prior to the official designation "United Lutheran Church In America" and the present "Lutheran Church in America," the congregation was part of what was designated "General Synod." Certain practices and appointments gradually were changed, from a comparatively "plain" approach to such things as robes, then robes in color rather than only black, a widening flexibility in worship form without removing or destroying the basic elements of Lutheran theology, a greater participation in sharing with others through "benevolence" per—member apportionment, and other changes which reflected an adjustment to changing conditions in society. The world outside the local community became a part of the local congregation's responsibility and is reflected in the word "evangelical" in the name of the congregation.

Under Pastor Baker, three Sunday morning services were a part of the regular routine as they had been before, first at Spencerville, then at Saint Joe, then at Butler.

When Pastor Barnhart answered a call to the local parish, the parish was reduced to the congregations at Spencerville and Saint Joe. Butler was combined with Zion, a rural church west of Butler.

Under Pastor Barnhart the challenge of sharing was reflected in that St. Mark reached its full apportionment for the first time, through actual "benevolence" contributions of the members.

Pastor Miller instituted a program of youth participation in conducting worship services. This proved of great benefit to the congregation in that during a lengthy period when the pulpit was vacant, the young people were utilized by the then adult leader of youth, and attendance during the absence of a pastor remained remarkably high.

St. Mark congregation voted in 1965 or 1966 to build a new parsonage. The congregation was joined later in the effort by its sister congregation and the project was accomplished.

A highlight in the past 20 years or so was a week long "Evangelism Mission" carried on in the church at large. Rev. Donald Dow served as guest missioner here in a program in which ministers "exchanged" pulpits for the week's concentration of calling on both members and non—members and the conducting of nightly worship services. Calling teams had supper together at the church and heard a brief message from the missioner each evening before making calls. They then returned to the church for the evening's worship along with others who responded.

It was heartening to the laymen who worked in that effort that, in the Fort Wayne area including congregations much larger than St. Mark, the local mission showed that it had approximately 10% of the total workers, responses, attenders at evening services, and so on, in the entire area. This was during Pastor Barnhart's ministry locally.

St. Mark has been a participant in the local softball league since the league began in 1952. Three sportsmanship trophies and four championship trophies won either alone or in combination with St. Peter at Spencerville attest to the varying successes of church members participating in the sports activity.

In recent weeks new pews have been installed in the church through the donation of Frank Sechler and Louise Sechler Church as a memorial to their parents. Also, new carpeting has been installed through donation by John and Opal Mason.

A console model organ is a recent new addition, given to the congregation by Paul Keller of Dayton, Ohio, son of MM Don Keller who are members of St. Mark. It replaces a small spinet organ which had been in use since 1960.

St. Mark has conducted Vacation Bible Schools through the years, sometimes alone, sometimes in combination with St. Peter congregation, sometimes with the Saint Joe Church of Christ. This summer program reflects the giving of time and effort by members of the congregation for the teaching of the Christian message.

Conflicts are a part of any congregation's life—if it has any life at all. And St. Mark has had its share. However, the Christian witness is built on positive actions and the local congregation has taken positive actions from time to time, to counterbalance its failures.

Through it all there stands yet "The Cross," an empty cross symbolizing the Resurrected Lord Jesus Christ. People come and go—but "The Cross" remains as a challenge and an inspiration.

From this, St. Mark Evangelical Lutheran Church in Saint Joe tries to fulfill its obligations.

DAR News

Eight members and ten guests of the John Houlton Chapter of NSDAR met at the A—C—D Museum in Auburn May 10 to form a car caravan to the Conner Prairie Pioneer Settlement at Noblesville.

William Conner was the first white man to settle in what is now the Indianapolis area. The DAR group heard the history of Conner's relationship with the Delaware Indian tribe.

Conner Prairie is a living museum of Indiana's earliest days. It features buildings typical of rugged frontier Indiana, including the 1810 trading post, the 1823 brick mansion of the Conner family, built by him for his second wife, the 1840 village, where the blacksmith and potter provided necessities of frontier life, and the 1850 "loud" or "blab" school typical of that built by any thriving settlement.

The Cedar Chapel covered bridge from DeKalb County is now at Conner Prairie but is not ready for public tours. The DAR group was given the opportunity, however, to view the old bridge.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Dick Isch, who makes the delivery and pickup for McJon's photo finishing at the News Office, was one of the first at the scene of a one car accident on State Road 8 last Thursday. Richard Patton, 21, of Webster Groves, Missouri, suffered a broken arm, cuts, bruises and abrasions when he lost control of his car and it flipped three times before coming to rest in the front yard of the Roger Treesh residence.

Dick didn't know how bad off the driver was when he stopped. But Mr. Patton asked Dick to unfasten the seat belt and shoulder harness, then his head went forward on the steering wheel.

With help on the way, Dick didn't stay; he had his route to finish. So he asked about the condition of the driver Saturday when he made the rounds. He described the car as "a mess," and if you saw a picture of it in the Evening Star, you know it was "a mess."

I would guess that Mr. Patton would be a corpse right now if he had not been held in place by the seat belt and shoulder harness.

Bill Beebe brought in a business card which his late uncle, Charles Beebe of Fort Wayne, had in his possession for years.

On one side it reads:
"Bell Phone No. 28
Work Guaranteed
"To Whom It May Concern:
"J. L. Rhodenbaugh is an Auctioneer and Pedigreed Stock salesman with Plenty of mouth and lots of tongue,
Will sell to either old or young,
No way shy or hard of hearing
Can't be beat for auctioneering,
Now it doesn't matter, wet or dry,
He will holler loud and sell 'em high.
J.L. Rhodenbaugh
At Your Service, St. Joe, Indiana"

On the other side:
"Don't be a Knocker. If there is any chance to boom business, boom it. Don't pull a long face and look as though you had a sour stomach. Hold up your head, smile and look for better things. Hide your little hammer and try to speak well of others, no matter how small you may really know yourself to be.

"When a stranger drops in, jolly him, tell him ST. JOE is the greatest place on earth—AND IT IS. Don't discourage him by speaking ill of your neighbors. Lead him to believe he has at last struck a place where people live, and if you find him on the street looking for a good time, kick his (picture of a 4 legged animal) but before doing so, remember him kindly to The St. Joe News, St. Joe, Ind.

"The only place to get first-class Up to Date, well displayed, Neat, Attractive, Two Color Sale Bills."

—That's some pep talk, isn't it—and it's still a good idea to "sell" your community to others.

Hey, how about that! Cal Coburn is a poppa. He and Trudy had a boy Wednesday of this week. They named him Victor Grant. The Coburns reside in North Carolina.

—Wonder what ever became of that Swiss villa he bought several years ago when he was on active duty. As I recall, he said there was a big limousine, a butler and a maid and a huge wine cellar included.

—Maybe he was kidding.

Pastor Ed Schantz had a note in his church news about a bill proposed in the Congress which supposedly would curtail religious broadcasts. I have heard it said both ways—the bill is bad, it would eliminate religious radio broadcasts—and I've heard it isn't that bad.

But—just to make sure—Pastor Schantz suggests that you write a letter to the Federal Communications Commission, 1919 NW M Street, Washington, DC, and tell them you want religious broadcasts to continue.

It might be a false alarm—but it also might be someone getting a foot in the door, leading to curtailed religious broadcasts. Look what happened in the Supreme Court about prayer. And look what's happened in Indiana where the state government is now functioning in the malpractice liability insurance field, a traditionally and properly "private" matter.

I cringed the other day when Carolyn Randolph, announcing for WGL, came out with "con—SOR—tee—um" for "consortium."

—Wonder what happened to Sonya Monosett. I always thought she sounded pretty cute. And Christine Zak always looks as if she is afraid somebody's going to dump a bucket of water on her if she goofs on TV news. She's a cute kid.

There's another cute voice on the air, at least on Saturday nights or rather early Sunday when I'm headed for home from a combo date. Robin Young is her name and she chit chats as a loner as well as giving news breaks and spinning the platters on Westinghouse's WBZ in Boston—at 103 on the AM dial.

She sounds real cute— —So she probably weighs 200 pounds!

If there was confusion and uncertainty about planning a Memorial Day service this year, I think it is understandable.

I don't think the local Legion Post, commander and members are deserving of criticism because of the lack of planning.

Rather, I suggest the blame be put on the Congress of the United States—including Indiana Senators Birth Bayh and Vance Hartke and Fourth District Representatives J. Edward Roush—for playing around with our heritage of national holidays on certain dates, changing them to make long week ends for only one purpose—to satisfy the selfish and greedy wants of organized labor for a day's pay for no work.

Most of the talk and concern about influence peddling and conflict of interests has centered on former President Richard Nixon and Republicans in general. But one of the biggest "payoffs" there is relates to the bowing to the wishes of organized labor by Democrats who received some 88% of the campaign funds spent by labor at the last election.

You think those elected officials aren't being "bought"!!! Don't kid yourself. The assault on our national holidays by organized labor and carried out by the Congressional majority fed by labor's treasury is a prime example of close to "criminal" activity because it is destroying our American heritage of historic dates and events involving the sacrifices of thousands of Americans in the cause of liberty.

—Remember that when November comes around—remember who controls Congress.

Cub Scouts To Sponsor Bike Rodeo May 31

The Cub Scout Bicycle Clinic and Rodeo will be held this Saturday, May 31, beginning at 10 a.m. at the Riverdale School.

Decals and safe driving certificates will be given to all persons, young and old, whose bicycle passes the free inspection.

Adult leader Judy Parker says it will be "fun for all" at the rodeo following the inspection. And there will be free refreshments.

'Memorial Day' A 'Fizzle' — Or Was It?

One of the related events for the 100th anniversary celebration of St. Mark Lutheran Church announced the past two weeks was the observance of Memorial Day with an afternoon program normally prepared by the local American Legion Post.

But somehow plans did not get taken care of, and as a result, a small group of some 25 persons or so found themselves at the cemetery—but no program Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Louise Church relayed the information to The News this week that a program did get organized, due to the spontaneous cooperation of Rev. Dennis Kuchera who gave an appropriate message and Bob Longardner and son, Frank, with Bob hustling around to get a gun and a bugle and Frank providing the three—shot salute plus the playing of "taps."

According to Mrs. Church, the last minute efforts were very much appreciated, and perhaps even more effective than a planned program.

Lions Elect Jerry Storer

—Jim Hudson, club reporter

The Saint Joe Lions Club met May 12 at the Spencerville United Methodist Church.

The meeting opened with the singing of one verse of "America." Before dinner grace was given by Willard Hurni.

After dinner, election of officers was held. New officers are:

Jerry Storer, president.

Denny Baker, 1st vice president.

Andy Crow, 2nd vice president.

Donald E. Miller, 3rd vice president.

Lavon Hart, secretary-treas.

Rev. Dennis Kuchera, tail twister.

Roy Wheat, Lion tamer.

Ralph Keeler and Bud Shockley, 1 year directors.

Terry Bosserman and Phil Washler, 2 year directors.

Guest speaker was Bruce Julion, soil conservationist. We had a film and questionnaire on "Land Erosion."

'Country Store' Seeks Volunteers

"Your Country Store" will be open June 20, 21 and 22 during the Spencerville Covered Bridge Festival. And volunteer help is needed.

If you have a hobby and have something you would share with the Festival to sell in the store, the shelves could be filled to add to the already growing list of homemade articles.

There will be a bake sale this year featuring homemade bread, rolls and coffeecake. Those who wish to put in an early order should contact Sarah Amstutz at 238—4509.

Any donations will be greatly appreciated. Contact Alice Hollabaugh or Lois Lichtsinn.

"Come and see us at the Grand Opening of 'Your Country Store'."

CARD OF THANKS

We can never fully express our deep appreciation for the help of the St. Joe Firemen and our neighbors with the speed of their arrival here at our home in time of need.

Concrete, Signs Go In Fast At Bank

On Wednesday, May 14, concrete was being poured at the front (right, above) of the new branch bank building to be opened soon by Knisely National Bank of Butler. The driveup driveway had not been poured and the lot was generally torn up.

On May 15, a day later, steelposts were installed, as shown above, and concrete work was still in progress on the parking area—and things were still in a mess, generally speaking.

But lo and behold! by Friday afternoon, May 16, the sign was up, sod was in place, and the impressiveness of the total installation was becoming obvious— in a word—"neat"!

Education's 'Indoctrinating'

One of my primary wishes is to be able to express myself in as few words as possible, whether it is in writing or in conversation. But it seems that there are so many interrelated points to express and explain, no matter what the initial topic may be, that instead of a brief and constructive result, boredom of the reader or listener is quite probable.

My only defense of being long-winded is that there are so many instances of misunderstanding and misinterpretation among people I know. Thus, a particular effort is made to cover every point. But I don't always succeed.

For instance, I had two reactions the past two weeks to my comments about education and teachers. One teacher noted that I had made "positive" comments about education and teachers recently, related to the Latin Club party at a Fort Wayne school. I thought I got the implication that most of my other remarks in the past about education, educators and teachers were negative, were critical without offering constructive ideas.

Perhaps I was wrong in "hearing" an implication, because my critical remarks have always—or so I thought—had the positive suggestion that what we have had in the past in education was not as bad as many modern educators and teachers make it out to be. My suggestion most of the time is, in effect, "Get off the glamour kick—the 'gimmicks,' the electronic obsession, the fancy titles, the self-glorifying 'expert' approach—and go back to the 'old' way." But—even those in education who have seen the failures in the "new" ways after giving staunch support to change, even they avoid that crotchety phrase "the old way"; they avoid it like the plague. But that's what they mean—"the old way."

I am aware (as has been pointed out to me by both teachers and others in administration of schools) that some of the "new" ideas have been, if not discarded, "altered." The trouble is, no public pronouncement is made by educators and teachers when such failures occur. We only hear about the "new" ideas and what they supposedly will accomplish.

What a fresh breeze it would be if, for instance, out of one of the "teachers' professional meetings" held in our school district from time to time during the school year at public expense, there would be an announcement that because a "new" idea had not panned out, it was being modified so as to more closely reflect the previous "traditional" methods and values. There is much public disappointment at the failure of public officials, including the President of the United States and the Congress, to be "honest" with the people and not "cover up" mistakes. If you ask me, teachers would do themselves and the public a service by profiting from our past experience related to "coverups" and let the public in on failures as well as successes. It would be good "public relations."

This puts teachers too much on the spot? I don't think so. From the papers I have read, written by my son for eighth grade English in the form of brief paragraphs in which he expresses his thoughts about various subjects, I think some teachers ought to be put on the spot, because in this particular instance, he has expressed some very pointed views which are something less than kind. And he didn't learn to express himself that way at home!

Any time a 13 year old describes a former President as a "crook" when that President has been destroyed physically and emotionally by his own poor judgment—I'm sorry, but I must conclude that my 13 year old is getting something other than an education at school. And I question whether the "English" course is totally legitimate "English."

In another instance, during his seventh grade year, he was in an idustrial arts class (we used to call it "shop"). He brought home two projects, one a small peg puzzle, the other an impressive small cabinet with several drawers. On each occasion, when he brought those objects home, I was favorably impressed—except, when I stopped to think about it, there was a doubt, a question: "How could he do so well with so little experience with tools? Those things are better than I could do as an adult, and I had a couple years of shop in my school days and have puttered around with tools and wood ever since."

So I asked him about it. The answer was: he hadn't made those objects totally on his own. Members of the class were each given one operation to do; they didn't "make their own" project. And the instructor had done some of the work.

I don't like that. Instead of being instructed for INDIVIDUAL efforts on the use of tools and wood, instead of an object which Mom and Dad could consider the results of their own son's efforts in shop class, our son and every other member of that class was given a lesson in mass production, was subtly educated in "collective" activity. I don't like that—and I am greatly surprised and disappointed that such a practice is followed.

Why? Because it has been teachers and educators who have "harped" on their concern for the pupil as an individual, because they have been the primary source of the "new" idea in education that a student be able to "find" himself, have identity as a person. However, it is a "fact of life" that you don't "find" yourself (whatever that means) as an individual in a mass, in collective activity.

Knowing what mass production means and involves is a good lesson to learn; I do not object to that. But in a junior high student's first year? In his first exposure to the use of hand tools? In his first opportunity to see what he can do himself, from start to finish, on a shop project? In my opinion, as a parent and as an individual American, this approach is totally wrong. In my opinion, my son is being "indoctrinated" against my will, against my wishes, against my beliefs.

Here are reasons, first hand and "right here at home," why I have been consistently critical of what has been allowed to happen in our schools. We hear high-sounding purposes in the promotion of educational changes. But in actual practice, when you are objective in examining the practical results and implications, those high-sounding purposes are more often than not totally contradictory to what we were told would result, and the negative results are at the hands of the very people in whom we parents have placed our trust, under whose tutelage we have placed our most precious possession—our children.

Teacher organizations dote on their members' "rights." Parents have rights, too, as parents, as individual Americans, and as the taxpayers who foot the bill for educational experimentation with the minds of our kids.

(P.S. I'm sorry, son, that you're caught in the middle—as have been your brothers in the past. But I am concerned about what you absorb at school. I want you to come out with a free and open mind. It IS my business. — Besides — I love you.)

Next week: The other reaction.

Full Weekend For St. Mark Centennial

A "full house" was present at the Sunday morning worship service at St. Mark Lutheran Church in Saint Joe as the congregation observed its 100th anniversary during the past week end. Rev. Dennis Kuchera gave a sermon based on one given by evangelist Billy Sunday many years ago. The congregation followed a liturgy which also dated back many years.

Jay Blauser and his choir from St. Peter Lutheran Church at Spencerville sang during the service, their costumes and selections adding to the "old time" character of the service.

Members of the congregation had presented a pageant Saturday night under the direction of Mrs. Freida Guilford. Included was an "old time" church council meeting and a brief worship service led by the "traveling preacher" from Hicksville, portrayed by Frank Sechler.

Sunday afternoon, Dr. Walter M. Wick, president of the Indiana—Kentucky Synod, Lutheran Church in America, was the guest speaker and he explained what the church is and what it is not.

Former pastors present for the weekend festivities included Rev. Russell Snyder, Rev. Ivan O. Miller, Rev. Howard Baker, Rev. Arthur Fabian and Rev. George Stoll.

Sunday noon the people enjoyed a dinner at the Riverdale Cafeteriam; partly catered by the Spencerville Community Club with salads and desserts provided by ladies from St. Mark.

Mrs. Louise Church and Mrs. Betty Bevington were co-chairmen for the weekend anniversary celebration.

Red Cross Still Seeks Members

"Courage is what it took for DeKalb County directors of the Red Cross to conduct a drive for membership funds," so says Jessie Baxter, executive secretary of the group.

The status of the treasury indicated need for a drastic move. The directors scattered over the county determined to solicit in their own neighborhoods—hoping to reach the people who had not donated through United Fund.

United Way of support of the local social agencies is favored by Red Cross. However, several years of below—quota allocations have caused depletion of funds needed by chapter programs.

The blood program alone costs the chapter $1500, some one-fifth of total expense.

The membership drive opened May 1 and continues through June 15. Reports of collections have been received from Smithfield and Richland townships, Auburn and Spencerville, with a total of $1570 toward a goal of $5000.

Ice Cream Social At Norris Chapel

Norris Chapel United Methodist Church will have an ice cream social at the church Saturday, June 14, from 5 p.m. to ?

The public is invited to attend.

There are some extra copies of the booklet which contains a brief history of the church, its present officers and the names of pastors serving its pulpit.

Our Church History

It is difficult to think of the land in southeastern DeKalb County being covered with dense forests that in a few years would be cleared by the hard, physical labor of early settlers in order to place the fields in a condition to be cultivated. An important waterway was the St. Joseph River which was a good place for a settlement at Orangeville as early as 1833. In 1836 the first grist mill was built at Orangeville. There were a few cabins which were frequently visited by roaming Indian tribes. The first Baltimore & Ohio train ran through southern DeKalb County on November 1, 1875, the second most important railroad in the county.

St. Joe, a B&O whistle stop, had only a few scattered houses. Think of this place with no electric lights, no roads, no churches, no automobiles, few schoolhouses, few stores and horses and wagons or boats for transportation. The nearest center of religious interest was at the Widney School House which was located at the crossroads at the northeast corner of the Widney Orchard.

A group of citizens were not satisfied with occasional religious services. So, on August 7, 1875, a church organization, under the title of St. Mark Evangelical Lutheran Church, was organized by the following citizens of St. Joe: John Boyle, Samuel Widney, Isaac Lawhead, Jane Lawhead, James Widney, John Widney, Nancy Widney, Daniel Reasoner, Sarah Reasoner and Smith Rodenbeck. Part of the constitution reads as follows: "Whereas, the Holy Scriptures teach the necessity of assembling ourselves together for public as well as private worship; and we the undersigned citizens of DeKalb County, Indiana, being desirous of promoting the cause of the Redeemer, and to secure salvation for our neighbors, ourselves and families, believing that the Bible (Old and New Testament) to be inspired of God, and our only true rule of faith and practice, and believing also that the doctrines of God's Words are taught in a manner substantially correct and its ordinances properly administered in the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America, as presented by the General Synod . . . ."

They met for worship and religious instruction in the Center School House so called because of its being in the center of Concord Township. This building stood on the corner now occupied by the Arnold Fetters garage on State Road 1 at the south town limits and was later moved across the street to the William Hollabaugh property (Maurice Kline) and used as a farm shop. It has since been torn down. Here would assemble many people, sometimes more than are present during our current church service. The popular way of coming to the services was by walking, since only a few had a satisfactory wagon to use. The men would precede the women who would have difficulty in keeping their long skirts from becoming too soiled by dust or dampness. When services were in the evening, different families would bring their oil lamps. Once it happened that only one lamp was brought, and its oil supply gave out during the service, leaving the house in darkness. "It gave one an unusual feeling" was the remark of a youth who was there. The pastor of the Spencerville Lutheran Church would have charge of the services every other Sunday either in the afternoon or evening. For a while a young man from Hicksville came on foot, 9 miles, and held services, receiving whatever compensation the assembly would give.

At a meeting held June 8, 1879, it was resolved that a building 32 feet wide, 48 feet long and 16 feet high with three windows on each side be erected on a stone foundation. Anyone furnishing timber was allowed $12.00 per thousand feet for oak, and not over $20.00 per thousand for poplar. The ground for the building was donated by John and J. D. Leighty who had purchased 100 acres of land with the intention of starting a village and securing a station stop on the B&O Railroad which was then under construction. Others gave willingly of their time, money and strength in manual labor.

The building was dedicated to the worship of the Triune God on May 9, 1880. The sermon was preached by Rev. H. C. Grossman after which Rev. E. W. Erick assumed charge of the meeting for the purpose of raising funds for the liquidation of the debt. After the services were continued to some length, it was decided to postpone further services until the evening when sufficient funds were pledged to cover all indebtedness. Then the ritual service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. S. Kelso, assisted by Rev. E. W. Erick, and the church was solemnly dedicated to Almighty God.

At the October 10, 1885, church council meeting, each family was asked to furnish a cord of wood to be used during the services. Sometimes the council needed to remind certain members of the responsibility to "the woodpile."

In the early part of May, 1889, a few energetic members saw the need of improvements in the auditorium, and the advantage of an addition. It was decided to add to the south end of the church an addition of 20 by 30 feet with a cellar and furnace. The work was completed by October 13, 1889, at a cost of $1,000.00. The following day the re-dedication service was conducted by Rev. J. S. Barnett of Goshen, Indiana, who was assisted by the pastor, Rev. J. S. Nelson.

Again plans for remodeling the church building were begun in 1904. After a "nice sum" had been pledged to carry on the work; remodeling started. The building committee was composed of W. C. Patterson, M. T. Bishop and J. Y. Davis. The addition built in 1889 was removed. Six feet were added to the rear and 25 feet to the front of the auditorium under which was put a basement 11 feet in height. With the exception of a slight change in the choir and the substitution of electric lights for acetylene lights, the church is practically the same today. The cost was about $5,000.00. During the remodeling the congregation worked very hard and in comparative harmony. Sunday School and church services were held in the St. Joe Opera House until the basement was completed, after which it was used until the completion of the church. In January, 1906, Rev. C. E. Rice of Elkhart conducted the morning service assisted by the pastor, Rev. W. M. Habey. An amount sufficient to cover all indebtedness was secured at this service. In the evening the building was reconsecrated again to the service of Almighty God.

During the next half century St. Mark remained a small but active church. In 1920 a church orchestra was formed by the young people and about that time the old foot-pumped organ was discarded in favor of an upright piano. The orchestra endured for several years until about 1930 when most of the members married and moved away from the community. The Rev. Frank Stevenson served the longest pastorate in that period, from 1938 to 1948. In 1945 the church celebrated what was called "Seventy and Seven." It represented seventy years since the church was originated and seven years of Rev. Stevenson's pastorate.

In 1918 the General Synod was merged into the U.L.C.A. and the parishioners had to get accustomed to different practices and procedures. Then in 1934 St. Mark was transferred from the Michigan Synod to the Indiana Synod and another set of relationships had to be developed. Today it is a congregation of the Lutheran Church in America (1961) affiliated with the Indiana-Kentucky Synod.

The first Father & Son Banquet was held November 8, 1933. The first Confirmation Class was confirmed on June 3, 1934. The members of that class were Jean Ridgway, Louise Sechler, Edith Stewart, Helen Tustison, Clara Wiers and James Monroe.

Under Pastor Miller's leadership, the chancel and church basement were remodeled and a new electric organ and matching piano were acquired, the organ giving a new dimension to the service.

The Rev. Russell Snyder became pastor of St. Mark in 1965. Members of St. Mark had at that time taken the initiative in undertaking the construction of a new parsonage, and in 1966 the parsonage was built with the St. Peter congregation at Spencerville joining in the effort. The parsonage had been located at Spencerville and was a rather large brick house located next to the St. Peter church. The mortgage on the new parsonage was burned in August of 1973 during the worship service. During the pastorate of Rev. Snyder, a large and beautiful wood cross was made and donated by Roy Reidenbach for the chancel. In December of 1974, a large Conn organ was donated to the church by Paul Keller, son of Don and Lazerne Keller, members of St. Mark.

St. Mark Church is proud of its young men who have answered the call to the ministry. William Billow is one of the young men. He attended Wittenberg University at Springfield, Ohio, Chicago Lutheran Theological Seminary in Chicago, and the University of Chicago School of Social Service Administration. Miss Doris Pretorius became Mrs. William Billow on July 31, 1954. They have three children: Thomas Robert 15, Kenneth Alan 13, and Mary Jo 9. Rev. Billow and Doris were commissioned for missionary work on July 25, 1954, at St. Mark Lutheran Church in St. Joe. His evangelism, business administration, social work and counseling work has reached most all ages of Japanese people. Because of his outstanding representation of the Lutheran Church in America, he has endeared himself to the Japanese people and to the members of St. Mark Church. He and his family are to be congratulated for their many accomplishments.

Another of our illustrious young men is Rev. Allen Amstutz. He graduated from Taylor Univeraity at Upland, Indiana, and attended Asbury Theological Seminary at Wilmore, Kentucky. He was an associate minister of the North United Methodist Church in Indianapolis. He is now the new pastor of the Hanover United Methodist Church in Hanover, Indiana. He and his wife, Beverly, now reside at Route 1 at Hanover with their two sons, Bradley 3, and Grant 1. Congratulations are in order for his accomplishments in his chosen profession.

Through the years an important auxiliary of the church has been the women's organizations. Originally there were two organizations. The Missionary Society's main concern was the study and support of home and foreign missions. The Ladies Aid did just what the name implies—aided the church by their work and monies which they earned for projects in numerous ways, such as serving suppers, selling vanilla and peeling onions at Sechler's Pickle Factory.

In 1958 the two organizations became one, conforming with the synodical recommendation, becoming Lutheran Church Women. Under the guidance of the church, this auxiliary lives to be an instrument of the Holy Spirit in obedience to the commission of its Lord. The purpose of the auxiliary is to further and support the work of the church; to provide for Christian education and fellowship; to do and perform such functions as are assigned to it by the church. Its membership consists of women who express their willingness to subscribe to the purposes of Lutheran Church Women. This organization presented a life membership to Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Billow after their son became a missionary.

In the 1950-1970 period, there was a mass migration of rural dwellers to the city. But now we are experiencing the opposite; people are beginning to move out into our area. Witness the sizable number of new homes being constructed in our area. What this means for St. Mark is growth. At a time when smaller congregations are dying on the vine, we will not. A prophecy? Yes, again. St. Mark is growing because the members of this Church of Jesus Christ care about spreading the Good News of our Lord.

'The Sportsman'

—by Jerry Culbertson

It is very sad that so many people care so little about our natural surroundings — the air, land, seas, rivers and ourselves—which are being destroyed in so many ways that it is difficult to list them all.

In some of our bigger cities the air is so dirty that it just hangs above them in a big cloud for days, blocking out the rays of sunlight so vital to growth.

Let's look at what causes this pollution. According to Environmental Action, Inc., cars account for over 60% of the air pollution in this country. A study by the Department of Transportation has found that cars are used the following ways: 42% of the time they are used for commuting on business, 19.6% used for personal business—shopping, doctor's appointment, 5% for education, religion and civic activities, 33.4% for social and recreational activities.

If each and every individual could cut down on gas consumption, we would slow down the rate at which we are polluting the air, somewhat reduce our dependence on other countries for fuel, and perhaps prevent some car accidents and traffic jams.

If you have a short distance to go, walk or ride a bike. Keep your car tuned up, join a car pool, and make your next car a four or six cylinder one.

Power reduction is also a major polluter. Americans use more than 40% of all the power that is produced in the world. Oil and coal pollute when burned and nuclear power creates wastes that stay radioactive and dangerous for years, not to mention the thermal pollution it causes.

Do we need all this power? I don't think so because we can do without electric toothbrushes, dishwashers, carving knives, shavers, pencil sharpeners and the many other socalled conveniences.

A kilowatt costs between 3 and 4 cents including taxes and fuel adjustment cost. A kilowatt is 1000 watts. If everyone could cut down 5 kilowatts a day, that's 5,000 that would save you about 20 cents per day or around $70 per year.

Here are several appliances and the average amount of watts used per hour: carving knife 266, clock 2, clothes dryer 4,856, dishwasher 1201, frying pan 1196, radio 71, shaver 14, television b&w 237, color TV 332, toothbrush 7, automatic washing machine 512, non automatic 286.

So, let's turn off all lights, radios, TVs, and anything else you have on but aren't using. At your place of employment do the same. Let's work together to help ourselves and our country.

EHS Jr. High Track Season Is Improved

The Eastside Junior High track team finished 5th recently in the 14 team ACAC all conference meet at Woodlan's all—weather track.

Butch McBride and Lenny Moughler led the Blazers as each finished first in their specialties, the mile and 880 yard runs respectively. McBride ran the mile in 4:57 as he easily outdistanced all competition. Moughler used a strong finishing kick to finish first in 2:12.

They were followed by Ed Zimmerman who was third in the mile and Jack Wilmot who placed 6th in the 880. Other places for the Blazers were Lance Billings, 5th in the 440, Dennis Kline 6th in the 220 and 4th in the 440 team relay of Kline, Billings, Gary Rinard and Curt Best.

Huntertown was the team champion followed by Vilage Woods, Homestead, Perry Hill and Eastside.

Other teams were from Churubusco, Leo, Woodlan, New Haven, Ossian, Lancaster, Southern Wells, Monroeville and Adams Central.

Eastside closed the season with a much improved 7 wins 4 losses dual meet record. The previous two years of junior high track competition had netted a total of 2 wins. So, this year was very successful.

Church League Starts Monday

The Saint Joe Church Softball League will open its 24th season next Monday evening with a single game between the Lutherans and Newville Church of Christ, last season's winner of the league's sportsmanship trophy. Norris Chapel I will have umpiring chores for the game.

The schedule for the remainder of next week is as follows:

Tuesday—Norris Chapel I vs Norris Chapel II (umps Coburntown II); and Coburntown II vs Hicksville Church of Christ (umps Spencerville United Methodist).

Wednesday— Spencerville UM vs Coburntown I (umps Newville United Methodist).

Thursday—Newville UM vs St. Joe Church of Christ—Concord United Methodist (umps Newville CC).

Friday—Newville CC vs Hicksville CC (umps Lutherans); and Lutherans vs Spencerville UM (umps Hicksville CC).

There are 10 teams in the league this year, the largest number ever to participate. Had the season been long enough, there could have been two or three more teams involved in the county's oldest church league.

Single games start at 8:15 p.m. with double headers starting at 7:15 and 9:00 p.m.

Each team provides umpires for each game preceding their own games in which they are the home team.

Infants Affected By Smokers

(A health message from your American Lung Association of Northeast Indiana)

Most urban nonsmokers have nicotine in their body fluids for most of their lives, says new research. They get it from breathing indoor air polluted by other people's tobacco smoke.

Measurable quantites of nicotine were present in the blood and urine of most nonsmokers tested at two hospitals in London. While the average concentration of nicotine in the urine of nonsmokers was 10 units, it was 1200 units for the smokers. However, when nonsmokers were deliberately exposed to high concentrations of tobacco smoke in an unventilated room for a little more than an hour, the average level of nicotine in their urine increased 1000 percent.

One startling result of the study was this: after exposure, several nonsmokers had such enormous increases in their urinary nicotine levels that they were higher than those of smokers.

The researchers at the New Cross and Maudsley hospitals said, "Passive smoking may be harmful, and infants are most at risk." Another London study showed that tobacco smoke generated by parents' smoking actually doubles the risk of an infant's attack of pneumonia or bronchitis.

"The fact that some nicotine is present in the urine of almost all nonsmokers suggests that episodes of passive smoking are common in urban life," say the researchers. "We conclude that virtually all urban nonsmokers have measurable amounts of nicotine in their body fluids throughout most of their lives. It is derived from the indoor air they breathe and it requires no more than one or two smokers to contaminate a vehicle or building."

To find out more about the effects of smoking on nonsmokers as well as smokers, contact the American Lung Association of Northeast Indiana, 602 West Wayne in Fort Wayne, the "Christmas Seal" people.

It's a matter of life and breath—everybody's!

The April 21 meeting of the Joy Belles Home Economics Club was held at the home of Dorothy Lepper with nine members present. Sally Schambers had devotions and Dorothy Lepper presented a consumer report, and showed us how to make fabric flowers. Meeting adjourned and refreshments were served.

The May 19 meeting was held at the home of Pat Haley who also had devotions. Sharon Garman presented a lesson on recycling clothes, which we enjoyed while trying our hand at making butter to serve our families.

The six members present discussed the next meeting, a potluck lunch at Sharon Garman's home on June 16 at noon. Our families are also invited to attend, with each family bringing a salad and dessert. We also talked about the style show in June and our upcoming tour of the pickle factory at Saint Joe on August 18 at 1 p.m.

The true essence of freedom is not in the extent to which human rights are exercised; rather, it is in the restraint exercised in pursuing those rights.

Dissent in a free society is like the cultivation of the crops in the field. A little agitation promotes growth; too much destroys the roots.

In unity there is strength; in diversity there is freedom.

Self-discipline is a matter of courage. Anyone can do as he pleases; but it takes courage to do as one ought.

Wisdom is like good whiskey. The best of ingredients are essential; but the proof requires age.

The dissenters of the 1960's-70's sometimes point to Jesus Christ to justify their actions, claiming Him to be the greatest revolutionary of all time, attempting by such comparison to give a holy aura to their own ambitions. They overlook one thing: Jesus did not force Himself nor his teachings upon anyone. He spoke, surely, positively, then left the decision to His hearers. Thus did He grant to all men the freedom God created. Today's reformers could well be admonished, as in the Scriptures: "Go thou and do likewise."

Failures are the rungs on the ladder to success.

The Saint Joe News

Established Saturday, March 7, 1883, as free paper—Second class subscription Friday, Jan. 28, 1887 June 5, 1975 VOL. 93—23

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Keith Bartels and his Mrs. bought the old Fairfield place at Spencerville a few years ago. In the process of cleaning up, they found several issues of the Saint Joe News dating in the 1890's. For some reason, I don't have any back issues from that decade; in years past, they must have been thrown out. But Keith brought the old papers in and, though there are some articles clipped from them, the News Office now has at least a smattering of information about the gay '90's in this community.

Mrs. Hathaway at Butler telephoned recently to say she has a few 1890's editions for me, too. But I haven't had a chance to pick them up yet.

I appreciate the gifts.

Did you see where a man in England, blind for four years, tripped over his seeing eye dog and fell down a flight of stairs in his home. He banged his head against the wall in the fall, and when he sat up, was able to see that his nine year old daughter was wearing something pink.

—That's probably the best trip he ever took.

I've been hobbling around for the past two weeks due to a ruptured blood vessel. And 99 times out of a 100, when someone expresses their sympathy for my predicament, the word "old" is included.

It got so bad that, when I went to Doc Wills for treatment, the conversation went something like this:

Patient (me): Oh doctor, it's (sob) terrible. Every time some-(sob)body asks me about my (sob) leg, they say that (sob) an old man ought to (sob) know better than to play (sob) softball at my age (sniffle) (sob).

Doc Wills: There, there. It's not all that bad. It could happen to anybody any time. You're not old.

Patient: Oh doctor, do you (sob) really mean it? I (sob) don't have to give up my (sob) softball carreer, just (sob) because us athletes get a gimpy (sob) leg once in a while?

Doc Wills: Sure. It will take a while but you'll be OK. I have a shot that will help.

(Jab) (sob).

—What a WONderful doctor he is—and so intelligent. And he tells it like it IS, too.

Funnel Clouds, Rain Mar Weather Picture

Reported sightings of funnel clouds in northeast Indiana and the appearance of ominous rolling dark clouds brought "tornado" closer to home last Friday for residents in this area.

Local firemen twice sounded a warning to Saint Joe residents with the siren at the fire hall and residents of the local mobile home court were evacuated for their protection. Residents at the court took shelter at the elementary school building.

Fortunately, there were no reported touchdowns of the funnel clouds and the area was spared the losses which come with a tornado disaster.

However, daily rains the past several days, some of them fairly heavy, have soaked the ground and fields are marked with unwanted ponds of water. Damage to crops is quite possible but no definite report or estimate has been heard at this writing.

Recreation To Start Monday

Tennis is to open the summer recreation program next Monday with Terry Kern in charge of the Riverdale program. Kickball will begin next Tuesday.

Due to the large enrollment by fourth and fifth grade students for tennis, the sixth grade students are asked to report for lessons at 2:00 p.m. rather than 1:00 p.m. as previously scheduled. 7th and 8th grade students are to meet at 2:00 p.m. as announced. All enrolled are required to bring a tennis racquet and two tennis balls.

Swimming lessins will head the second week of the program with the final enrollment of swimmers showing a total of 63. The bus will leave Spencerville at 8:30 a.m., Saint Joe at 8:35 a.m. and Newville at 8:45 a.m. Approximate return times (subject to change) will be Newville 11:25 a.m., Saint Joe 11:35 a.m. and Spencerville 11:40 a.m.

Students may bring their money for lessons and a season pass the first day and checks should be made out to "Auburn Community Pool."

Soccer will begin June 30 at 9:00 a.m. and coed softball will follow on Tuesday, June 31, at 9:00 a.m. also. It is not too late to register for any of the activities, except swimming.

Because of the two hour gap between the morning and afternoon activities, adult tennis lessons will be given to those interested. The lessons would begin about 11:15 a.m. and run to around 12:30 p.m.

Anyone is welcome and the lessons would begin the week of June 30 and run those days that are convenient for the participants. Further details will be given after a response is shown by those adults interested.

For information about the adult tennis or any other activities of the summer, feel free to call Terry Kern at 337—2053 or drop a line to her at R1 Saint Joe.

Pastor Accepts Call To Columbus Parish

Rev. Dennis Kuchera, pastor of the local Lutheran parish for the past two years, has accepted a call from a congregation at Columbus, Indiana.

His decision was announced to a joint council meeting Monday night and his resignation was reluctantly accepted.

Pastor Kuchera came to this area in July of 1973 to serve his first parish after graduating from seminary studies.

During his stay here, he utilized brief children's sermons at the beginning of Sunday morning worship and these appeared to have an appeal for the young people, though on occasion one would "backfire" due to the unpredictability of some of the "props" he used as well as the unpredictability of the young people themselves in their responses. At the same time adult attendance showed an increase in recent months. There were numerous baptisms in the past two years.

Pastor Kuchera and his wife, Nicky, and two children will probably leave this parish in July.

Coggins Test Offered By Saddle Club

Walter Schuller, president of the Bar None Saddle Club, has announced that, as a public service, the club will offer the Coggins Test to DeKalb County resident owners of horses and ponies.

For some time the Coggins Test has been recommended for horses and ponies in this state. Surrounding states have made the test compulsory, and animals entering these states must show a negative certificate.

A committee of Marvin Dowden and Dan Bushee have set up the program for owners to bring their horses and ponies to the DeKalb County Fairgrounds at Auburn Friday, June 27, at 5:00 p.m. The cost will be $1 per head. Dr. Balser and the Bar None Saddle Club will pay the balance of the cost.

Papers should be brought with registered horses.

Reservations may be made by contacting any of the following: Marvin Dowden at Saint Joe 337—4535; Walter Schuller at Corunna 281—2886; Dale Lockwood at Auburn 925—3723; Dale Rakestraw at Waterloo 837—6142; or Paul Whittington at Garrett 357—4551.

St. Joe-Concord Township VFD

—by Guy Mausteller

We have reached the time of year when the danger of TORNADO and ELECTRICAL STORMS is a threat to our crops, lives and properties. A very good example of this was set Friday evening of last week when those black clouds started rolling through our area.

"What does your Fire Department have to do about the weather, I thought they just fought fires?" This is just another of the duties of a volunteer fireman. We are notified in advance of severe weather conditions by the National Weather Service and through the State Police. When we receive this information, we are instructed to sound the SIREN for a period of THREE MINUTES. This will be a steady sound, not on and off such as what you hear when we respond to a fire. All firemen report to the fire station at this time and the "Chief" assigns the various duties. Some men are sent to the mobile home court to alert those people of possible danger and to take shelter at a friend's house (with basement or storm cellar) or go directly to the Riverdale School (which has been designated as a safe shelter). If no transportation is available, we will provide same. Other firemen are dispatched through town to alert people, while others man the fire equipment and take it to various areas where they can observe the skies and also to keep the equipment separated. This is necessary in order to have some available should we lose any of it in the event a tornado should touch down.

Should you hear the steady blowing of the siren or be alerted by one of the firemen of a possible tornado, don't feel foolish in seeking a safe shelter. As one of our firemen stated Friday night, "You may be the smartest person." While property is difficult to replace, lives are impossible to replace.

We hope that we never experience an actual tornado in our area. But we ask that you take every precaution in the event of an alert and please cooperate with the department, as they do have firsthand information.

Your fire department is here to help you in case of any disaster. Remember—we are all seconds or a few minutes away while the nearest emergency help (other than your fire department) is miles and many minutes distant.

We are grateful for the fine cooperation we receive from the people in our area which makes us proud to be of service to you.

Problem: School Discipline

The second reaction I referred to last week (concerning my comments about educators and education) pointed out an omission I have made. The omission was also pointed out to me several weeks ago, but I failed to acknowledge it. The omission was also evident to me this week as I conversed at length with a member of our high school faculty.

A former teacher said two weeks ago that she agreed generally with my criticisms of educators and education, but I had not mentioned one thing for the benefit of teachers. That problem—and my omission—is discipline. The former teacher said the matter of discipline is related to parents as much as it is to teachers, perhaps more so, because the student entering school has had five years of training by the parents. If students don't behave, the parents have a responsibility in that matter. I agree wholeheartedly.

Parents are responsible for putting into office those elected representatives who have doted on "rights" but ignore responsibilities. Many younger parents have grown up under conditions of exaggerated permissiveness, and their behavior has been undisciplined oftentimes; so how can we expect their offspring to be any different?

Supreme Court decisions have virtually destroyed the ability of school boards to establish rules and enforce them. Teacher union leadership has also been able to get legislation passed which infringes upon the responsibilities of school boards. Dress codes are practically useless, unless there is some obvious and glaring violation such as a see-through blouse or some such distraction. There should be no objection to "casual" dress for school, but some students' interpretation of "casual" is more accurately described as "sloppy" or in some cases "indecent." And teachers and school administrators are practically powerless today to do anything about it. True, some teachers are setting a bad example as far as dress is concerned. But for the most part, teachers recognize a certain point beyond which "freedom" in dress codes becomes disrupting to the total educational process.

It's strange. If kids HAD to wear what they wear now, had to because the family couldn't afford any better, they would holler their heads off — "I won't go to school wearing THAT! I won't go to school wearing jeans with PATCHES—especially THAT patch!" (Guess where.)

When rehearsal was being held for graduation exercises for the Class of '75 at Eastside High School, I am told the girls stripped down to the barest essentials—and my informant is no prude. The boys wore trunks and a robe. When the principal began remarks during awards to seniors at the school annual awards day, I was told this week that senior boys as a group pulled out comics and made an obvious show of ignoring the principal. When one of the awards was made, the boy honored pulled off his shoes and came forward to receive the award, in violation of a "no bare feet" regulation. I'm told he was a sensation—with the students.

Nothing was done about those pointed displays of disrespect and arrogance. What can you do? The situation is not so much angering as it is disappointing. My observance to those young men and young women is: if you feel you have proved something by your behavior, you're right. You have proved how immature you are, how selfish you are, and how little appreciation you have for the efforts of your teachers, the money spent for your educational opportunities, your community's support (whenever you want some money, you expect the community to shell out for magazines, bake sales, car washes, etc.), and your parents' good name. And you have proved how right such people as the editor of The Saint Joe News have been in opposing and questioning the involvement of students in decision-making. You have shown how selfish you are, how absorbed in yourself you are to the point of thumbing your nose at authority. And you want to be treated like responsible, mature citizens!

Are all students involved? No, but enough that disciplinary problems at Eastside appear to be at the top of the teachers' list of concerns—along with pay raises.

Teacher Group Says 'Impasse' Reached In Contract Negotiations

After 13 bargaining sessions, the Eastern DeKalb Education Association has been forced to declare that an impasse exists, according to a news release this week from the association which has been bargaining with the DeKalb County Eastern Community School District.

"The association has repeatedly attempted to discuss with the school board spokesperson, Mr. H. Charles Winans, the facts as to the amount of funds available for improved programs for Eastern DeKalb Schools," stated Ken Olin, association president. "The answer is always that it is none of our business," commented Mr. Olin.

The school board's latest offer failed to meet the requests of teachers for:

1. Two elementary teacher aides.
2. Personal leave in line with state law and accumulated with sick leave.
3. Payment of earned severance pay to the survivors.
4. Posting of job openings.
5. A voluntary sick leave bank.
6. Maternity leave provisions in line with new state law.

Most of the above items are contained in area bargaining agreements or have been established by state law.

Additionally, teachers had requested "only moderate salary and fringe benefit increases" to keep in line with the rapidly accelerating cost of living. They are seeking improvements in health and hospital insurance which would cost the school corporation only $3,132, according to association figures. Increases were requested in key areas of the extra duty schedule totaling a "similarly modest amount of $3,100."

The salaries now paid teachers provide the lowest lifetime earnings of any school corporation in the northeast corner of Indiana, the association charges. "We must stand fast for a salary schedule that will attract quality, experienced teachers," emphasized Donna Hollabaugh, association bargaining chairperson. "In this period of 12% cost of living inflation, the board's last offer of one—third of this amount is an insult to our professional staff," she said.

The two sides appeared to be close to agreement a few weeks ago. "We don't know what happened, but suddenly the board spokesperson's offers became less reasonable," said Mr. Olin.

The local association alleges that the Indiana General Assembly provided a significant increase in new state funds to Eastern DeKalb. A State Department of Public Instruction printout of funds available shows the local district receiving $80 per child new state aid, plus additional monies for transportation. The document states that this is about an 11.4% increase in new funds for Eastern DeKalb. "We believe the community wants to maintain a quality school system and that it is fair to apply this percentage to all categories of the budget," reasoned President Olin. "The fact—finder in Prairie Heights last year stated that the single most important factor in the school was the teacher. We agree with this reasoning and will continue to work toward this goal in this year's bargaining," he concluded.

Forms will now be filed with the Indiana Education Employment Relations Board declaring impasse, the local association said in its news release. A mediator will then be assigned to the bargaining parties in an attempt to assist them in resolving the differences. If mediation is not successful, the teacher bargaining law calls for a fact—finding hearing.

—from DEAN'S ENCO SERVICE
The Chilago Cubs haven't won a pennant since 1945. But they came close in 1969 but "blew" a subsantial lead. It seemed they would make it in the next couple of years, but didn't. Now they are virtually an all—new team. It is interesting to note that during their stay in last place for several years before getting back into the first division in recent years, they did not always lack for batting power. In fact, during one season the Cubs had five hitters with 20 or more home runs—Walt Moryn, Dale Long, Lee Walls, Bobby Thompson and Ernie Banks—but ended in last place!

'Flood Prone' Area For Saint Joe Brings Problems, Expense

A legal notice is being published in the county daily at the present time announcing a meeting of the Town Board of Saint Joe to consider the adoption of a Zoning Ordinance to establish a Plan Commission and Zoning Board of Appeals to regulate land use in the town of Saint Joe.

The information came unexpectedly this week when town legal counsel Don Butler told the News Office of a special meeting of the Town Board held Monday night. The meeting was requested by Mr. Butler to get the board's approval of action he has taken thus far in meeting a deadline date of July 1, 1975, to qualify the town for low cost flood disaster insurance. A Zoning Ordinance is required to qualify.

Copies of the zoning ordinance and related documents about the compulsory insurance program can be inspected at the News Office and the Post Office.

The federally subsidized program was authorized by Congress in 1968, then augmented with new requirements in 1973. Under new regulations, property owners in communities where flood insurance is being sold must purchase such insurance to be eligible for any new or additional federal or federally related financial assistance for any building located in areas designated by the office of Housing and Urban Development as "flood prone." All "flood prone" communities must enter the program by July 1, 1975.

A threat to property owners if a community does not enter the program after having been designated "flood prone" is that if a property owner wishes to sell his property, no mortgage money is available to the buyer from lending institutions operating under federal regulation, including banks and savings and loan associations.

Hud has designated an area at the east end of Saint Joe as "flood prone." It includes property on which are located the tavern, coin laundry, elevator, houses on the main street on the south side from the elevator to Second Street (Widney Avenue) and the houses on the east side of Second Street from the main street to the cemetery.

The hearing on June 20 is to consider a zoning ordinance for the entire town under which a Plan Commission and Board of Zoning Appeals would be established. Such an ordinance is mandatory in order to qualify for the subsidized insurance which is mandatory for a "flood prone" area. Thus, an ordinance is being forced upon the town by federal action even though the town has not indicated a desire to establish a Plan Commission under which all property in the corporate limits of the town is regulated by the Plan Commission. It is the same program as is in effect in DeKalb County under which improvements, additions or changes to any structures must be approved by the county Plan Commission and a fee must be paid. Thus far, no town board has been inclined to seek such regulation of property.

An oddity in HUD's designated "flood prone" area in Saint Joe is that, although high waters from the river do back up into the lowland, there has never been any damage of consequence in the area. The houses included in HUD's "flood prone" area are high above the lowland. In addition, houses located across the street from the affected properties are on the same level generally speaking as the "flood prone" area houses, but they are not included in the so-called "flood prone" area.

HUD bases its designation of Saint Joe's "flood prone" area on the projection that the area is likely to be flooded once every 100 years.

Out of concern for the mandatory aspects of the total situation, The Saint Joe News has set up a public meeting to be held next Monday night, at 8:00 p.m. at St. Mark Lutheran Church. The town's legal counsel has volunteered to be present to assist in providing information about the matter and answer questions. The editor said the concern of the local paper is that the town and some of its residents are being forced to comply with federal regulations and bear the expense when there is no benefit to be gained from such compliance. Certain home owners will be forced to buy "low cost" flood insurance for which they have no apparent need. And all residents are being forced to use their property under a regulatory body and bear additional expense which they have not asked for.

Monday's meeting has been set up to provide time for discussion of the situation and time to give the matter some thought prior to the town board's official public meeting on the zoning ordinance June 20.

The official notice reads as follows:

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING to adopt a Zoning Ordinance and to provide for the creation of a Plan Commission and Board of Zoning Appeals for the Town of St. Joe, Indiana

Notice is hereby given that the Town Board of Trustees of the Town of St. Joe, Indiana, on the 20th day of June, 1975, at 8:00 P.M. in the Town Hall at St. Joe, Indiana, will hold a public hearing on a proposal to adopt a Zoning Ordinance and to provide for the creation of a Plan Commission and Board of Zoning Appeals for the Town of St. Joe, Indiana.

Interested persons desiring to present their views on said proposed ordinance, either verbally or in writing, will be given the opportunity to be heard at the above stated time and place. A copy of said proposed ordinance is available for public inspection in the Post Office in the Town of St. Joe, Indiana.

Town Board of Trustees of St. Joe, Indiana
by: Emma Frank, Clerk-Treas.

The reason for the "quickie" approach to the situation is that the town's legal counsel was not given all pertinent information until little over a month ago. There are two provisions under which an appeal can be made concerning the "flood prone" designation, but not enough time was available to make any appeal.

Fire Siren Used For Tornado Protection

Residents of Saint Joe and surrounding area are reminded that the local fire department is utilizing a warning system for protection against tornadoes.

When reports come to the department of the possibility of a tornado in the immediate area, a steady blast of the siren is sounded for three minutes. If a funnel cloud is reported as sighted in the surrounding area, a second steady blast of three minutes is sounded and this means "take cover."

The west wall of a basement is considered the best place for shelter, according to Fire Chief Joe Robinson. A service tunnel and the cafetorium at Riverdale are being utilized as shelter for those who cannot get to a basement.

Attendances June 8 were 133 for Bible Schol and 116 for morning worship. This was a new record for our Bible School.

Father & Son Banquet Saturday, June 14, at 6:30 p.m. at the church in the basement.

Father's Day sermon June 15 is, "God, Give Us Men." Each father present will receive some token for the day.

The minister would like to remind all who go on a vacation, please don't take a vacation from God. Hunt up a Bible church on Sunday and attend. Also remember the expenses continue on in the summer while you are away. Be a faithful steward of God and He will bless you for it.

The Saint Joe News

From the editor's desk. . . .

'—with liberty and justice for all'

A week from Friday, citizens of Saint Joe will be a party to—or victims of—a classic example of bureaucracy in action, of citizens' rights infringed, of private property becoming the responsibility of government whether the citizenry likes it, wants it, or not.

I refer to the hearing announced for June 20, 1975, when the town board will be forced to hold a public hearing on the adoption of a Zoning Ordinance and building code. But no one has asked for the building code, the board has not of its own will decided to adopt such an ordinance.

The real reason for the hearing on the building code and its details is this: such an ordinance MUST be in effect in an area which has been declared as "flood prone" by the Office of Housing and Urban Development, better know—and feared!—as "HUD." And believe it or not, Saint Joe has been declared to be in a "flood prone" area—not the entire town, but a portion of it. And that is enough to require the entire town to be involved in the MANDATORY (you have no safe choice) program of low cost flood insurance.

On the surface, this may sound not too bad, even though the idea of a flood in Saint Joe is almost a joke. If low cost protection against floods can be obtained, it's a good thing, one might think. It is—IF you need it. So, let's look at the actual situation in the town.

By government decree, through HUD, the eastern part of town has been declared "flood prone." Now, everybody around here KNOWS that when the river is up, the lowlands at the east end may be under water—and it hasn't hurt anybody and no structures of any consequence have been affected. But can you feature The Oasis inundated by flood waters? Or Slentz Elevator? Or the houses along the main street on the south side from the elevator west? Can you picture the Goldner home under water, or the Lynn Lake home, or the Kenneth Roberts home, or any others on down the street down to the Charles Carnahan place? If any of these houses ever are flooded, so will be the houses across the street from them—BUT THE OTHER HOUSES ARE NOT IN HUD'S "FLOOD PRONE" AREA!

Why get so excited? Here are a few reasons:

Number 1—certain home owners (and the entire town) are being "railroaded" into participation in a program of "low cost" (government subsidized) flood insurance WHICH WILL NEVER BE NEEDED. If any of the houses in the "flood prone" area ever do get flooded, the needed relief won't be in the form of low cost insurance. The needed relief will be another Noah's Ark. That sounds like just a joking comment; but think about it for a bit. If water ever DOES get that high, there won't be reason to be concerned about any insurance because the affected area would be massive and far beyond the boundaries of HUD'S "flood prone" area in town.

What is most significant is that none of the houses or businesses in the "flood prone" area has ever been close to being flooded.

Number 2—the mandatory flood insurance program is forcing the town of Saint Joe to adopt an ordinance which it does not want, a highly restrictive zoning and building code ordinance. One of the pleasures of living in a small community is the comparative freedom we enjoy in the use of our private property. No one tells us whether we can or cannot do this or that to our homes, businesses, or land, generally speaking, within Saint Joe's corporate limits. But in the county and in larger communities, it's a different story. You must ask, you must pay a fee, you must obey. While it is true that abuse of Saint Joe's freedom of property use is possible without extensive controls, it is also true that there is a degree of voluntary community control through the pride of our local citizens. And legally, if there is a legitimate objection to property use due to a potential and obvious public health or safety hazard, the situation can be coped with. We in Saint Joe have gotten along pretty well on the American concept of use of private property as the individual owner sees fit.

Number 3—5 or 6 years ago when I was on the town board, the idea of a plan commission and zoning ordinance came up. I asked the town attorney how much it would cost to set up such a program. The answer: "About $2,000." Thus HUD'S arbitrary establishment of a "flood prone" area in Saint Joe is costing the town hundreds of dollars to set up a zoning ordinance and plan commission from which the town will receive no benefits. And it is being forced on us on the basis of a totally inaccurate designation of what is included in our "flood prone" area.

Number 4—coercion and threats are the basis for implementing the "low cost" flood insurance program. If we do NOT apply by July 1, 1975, (that's just a little over two weeks away), the owners of the businesses and houses in the "flood prone" area are in trouble. Why? Well, under the provisions of the flood insurance program, if we don't get in on the program, any of those property owners would have a rough time if they should decide to sell their property—because the government through HUD would PROHIBIT the financing of such a sale through the usual financing institutions, such as banks and savings and loan associations. In other words, the buyer would have one chance in a hundred of finding some money to borrow for that property. In still other words, under the flood insurance act passed by Congress, government is telling private business how to use its money.

Number 5—if we do not adopt the HUD program, the government will provide no grants for such things as a sewage system within the "flood prone" area. Thus, if Saint Joe puts in a sewage system (which was supposed to have been started two years ago by order of the Indiana Stream Pollution Control Board), the owners of the houses in the "flood prone" area will be left out as far as financial assistance is concerned (and federal and state grants now run to about 85% of the total cost of sewage plants). Presumably, then, the other residents in town would foot the bill for the cost of sewage facilities to houses in the "flood prone" area.

There are other points to make. But this is long enough already. However, there should be enough here (technical information provided by the town's legal counsel) to indicate to Saint Joe residents how dangerous the implications are in HUD's program. The fact that other communities have gotten in on the program has no bearing on our situation. In some instances, according to the town's legal counsel, participation elsewhere has been primarily undertaken in haste due to the deadline date factor. And many attorneys were not aware of the far reaching involvement of government through the compulsory regulations.

Why is this such a last—minute rush for Saint Joe? Because the town's legal counsel was not provided with pertinent information from the town board until just a few weeks ago—leaving inadequate time to appeal the matter and avoid the expense of establishing a zoning ordinance and plan commission.

HUD's manner of publicizing the program—or not publicizing it, as you may look at it—strongly suggests a deliberate attempt NOT to adequately inform the public about what is happening. It is, to all appearances, an example of trickery and deception under which the American citizen loses more of his liberties. While information was provided to the public officials involved, there was no explanation of the total program by our top elected officials. And it WAS the Congress which passed legislation giving HUD vast powers.

Saint Joe faces the expenditure of a few thousand dollars to comply with regulations to qualify for benefits which will never be used or needed. Saint Joe residents face the control of their property in an ordinance REQUIRED in order to qualify for insurance for a few who will be REQUIRED to buy, whether they need it or not.

Are those enough reasons to get excited???

What to do about it? Write Senators Birch Bayh and Vance Hartke and Congressman J. Edward Roush and tell them what HUD's arbitrary and mandatory program is doing to our town. You might even drop a line to the President; he's a former Congressman.

Attend the June 20 meeting of the town board.

Speak up—reasonably and firmly. Unless Americans begin challenging some of the activities of our government at the grass roots level, the erosion of individual liberty will continue. And the birthday celebration of "the land of the free and the home of the brave" in 1976 will be one big joke.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

I think one of the funniest happenings for a long time is the one in New York City at Shea Stadium where, in celebration of its 200th birthday, the Army shot a cannon salute with blank shells—and part of the wall fell down.

It reminded me of the comedy TV show, "F Troop."

In an article this week about the fact that Ford Motor Company will produce a compact to get 30—some miles per gallon to compete with the foreign compacts already on the market with high gas mileage, the following paragraph appeared:

"Technology to increase gas mileage has been available in Detroit for years, but the gain in mileage must be balanced against the increased costs in production likely to result, auto analysts have noted."

Increased costs of production? Why? I don't get it. It sounds more like double—talk than an understandable explanation of something the public has suspicioned for years.

I think teachers' groups are getting away with murder nowadays with the intimidating boldness with which their spokesmen cast doubts on the integrity of school boards and school administrators.

Last week the UNISERV office at Auburn called to announce a "press conference" to which I was invited, along with the other papers in the county. My mental reaction was, "Who do they think they are, that I should go toddling over to their office to see what they have to holler about now?"

I didn't go. But I received a news release later from the DeKalb Educators Association concerning a dispute with the central board and superintendent. Arbitrator Sinclair Kossoff of the American Arbitration Association is mentioned, and here is where the murder comes in. Said Mr. Kossoff:

"It may well be argued on the side of the Union — and I do not here decide the point or express any opinion on it —that the Employer's conditions attached to the enjoyment of the contractually negotiated benefits are unreasonable restrictions."

Now, if that isn't an opinion, I don't know what is. Here is a person, supposedly involved to hear both sides of a question and then give a decision, saying, "I'm not going to give an opinion"—and then giving an opinion! And of course, it's the school administration, not the teachers, who come out of it with a black eye.

Even the president of the teachers' union, Larry Dove, saw what was going on. But his reaction was not related to the need to be fair, for he said:

"If you read between the lines you can tell that Mr. Kossoff thought the policy less than desirable. That's as close as an arbitrator can come to giving an opinion that a policy should be abolished without actually saying it."

It makes one wonder how both men ever qualified to make public statements, when neither one knows the difference between "fact" and "opinion." One says "I won't give an opinion" and then does—the other says, "That's as close to an opinion as you can get" when it's not close at all—it IS an opinion. And it's a totally unethical practice under the circumstances.

50 PLUS CLUB

—Galen Markle, secretary

The May 28 meeting of the Fifty Plus Club was held in the basement of St. Peter Lutheran Church in Spencerville with MM Lehr Wilder and Gaylon Markle hosting.

Following the usual delicious potluck supper, president Ida Reed conducted a short business meeting. She mentioned the various "days" observed in May, such as May Day, Mother's Day, Senior Citizens Day, Memorial Day and Graduation Day. She read three poems, "Memorial Day," "Those Growing Old" and "Sick Folks." She then reported on the condition of our sick members as of that day. Final plans were made for the Country Store at Covered Bridge Days.

Berniece Wilder led the pledge to the flag and the group sang several songs. She then introduced Mrs. Martha Lee of the Social Security office in Auburn who gave an interesting and informative talk, followed by a question and answer period.

The next meeting will be held Thursday, June 26, with MM Page Hood and Sarah Amstutz as hosts. Same time—same place.

IJHS Wins 1st At State Convention

The newly organized Indiana Junior Historical Society won first place honors in its first year, competing May 3 at Indianapolis against 19 other historical units at the annual IJHS convention.

The display was a "working" Blacksmith Shop. The background was a fake wooden wall and on it we had hand saws, harnesses, yokes and other tools and items that were used back then. In front of that we had an old portable forge, anvil, blacksmith's huge hammer, tongs, different sizes of nails and tools and also a cooling method for cooling the forged items.

To complete the setting, the boys took on "challengers" on a homemade checkerboard and used three small nail kegs to sit on.

A very pretty little girl, Karen Schmucker of the Riverdale Little Hoosiers, brought her broken antique wagon to be fixed.

Dressed in complete blacksmith clothing and operating the forge were Keith and Kyle Flesher, Doug Jewel and Ron Schmucker. This operation included firing the forge, and periodically using the bellows, really making red hot irons which they finished shaping into very good looking horseshoes. Explaining the step by step demonstration were Robyn Loy, Lisa Parker, and Sherry Schmucker. All girls were also dressed in long dresses and skirts as was the style then.

We were judged on the following categories:

1. Historical thought, 30 points.
2. Creative ability, 30 points.
3. Clarity and dramatic value, 20 points.
4. Technical skills and thoroughness, 20 points.

We just happened to be placed near a large tree and Rev. Jewel said it was too bad it wasn't a chestnut tree. When we looked at him kind of funny, he recited the whole poem. It was really neat listening to him and watching him recite the poem, his eyes laughing and him dressed in blacksmith clothes—he's really neat and fun.

It was Rev. Jewel who really taught us the art of blacksmith work. He taught us the names and uses of the different tools and why they were needed. He told us a lot of other things that happened around a blacksmith shop, too, like checker games, fixing toys for children, and also a very common occurrence of people coming by the shop to get rid of poison ivy.

We would like to know if any of you know what this so-called cure was. If you do, or think you do, please call President Doug Jewell 925—4007 or Secretary Lisa Parker 337—4096 or any other member. We would like to add this to our scrapbook of this year's project along with our pictures. Thank you!

The large trophy we won for our display is sponsored by the Society of Indiana Pioneers and we will keep it for one year.

Our DeKalb Club also won first prize in the big tree contest. We found a giant oak tree on the Shilling farm near Spencerville. It is approximately 29 feet in circumferences. We received a certificate and a beautiful double rubber tree for this. By unanimous vote, we agreed to present this rubber tree to the Auburn—Cord—Duesenberg Museum in Auburn in appreciation of their generous offer to use one of their rooms as a meeting place twice this year.

A certificate of merit for outstanding club activities was also presented to us.

Our club President, Doug Jewel, was awarded the Jay County Historical Society Award for being the outstanding junior high history club member. The Jay County award carries with it a plaque and a $25 check.

It has been a very rewarding year for us in IJHS. We learned a lot about Indiana history and people and we had a lot of fun.

We are now looking forward to going through the Freedom Train during June 17, 18 and 19.

—Bivere Brush, reporter

just FACTS

—from DEAN'S ENCO SERVICE

Sam "Toothpick" Jones pitched a no—hitter for the Chicago Cubs in 1955. He also led the league in issuing bases on balls that year. To show how brilliance and mediocrity can share the spotlight, in that no hit game against the Pittsburgh Pirates, Jones walked the first three batters to face him in the ninth inning. He then struck out the next three batters, for one of the most exciting moments in baseball history.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Every so often I see something which makes me sick at heart. The most recent occasion occurred a week or so ago when the front page of one of the Fort Wayne dailies showed the President of the United States eating a box lunch with military officials on a reviewing stand, while two servicemen demonstrated their abilities in man to man combat. One of the servicemen was in mid—air, being tossed over the shoulder of his "enemy."

Isn't that great? Our young people exposed to a visual record of violence performed in the presence of the leader of this "peace loving" nation while he is enjoying a box lunch!

—Just like the old "bread and games" of the Roman empire, as Pastor Kuchera pointed out when I mentioned the incident to him.

Headline: "Bayh Urges Ceiling For Spending"

But examination of the entire article brings the information that he wasn't talking about ALL spending—he just meant defense spending. He didn't include any other categories.

—I thought that headline was too good to be true.

Quite a bit of street maintenance is in progress now, with a repaving project at the intersection at the Enco station at the west end and a sealing operation on the pavement along the Chessie right of way on the south side of the tracks.

The town board also is installing new sidewalk on School Street, apparently part of an agreement between the board and school board in the town's leasing of the bus barn.

Senator Birch Bayh has begun a campaign in earnest to change our election process to eliminate the "electoral college" under which Presidential elections are held and change it to a simple majority vote nationwide.

I think people should think twice before accepting his explanation that, since we live under the principle of majority rule, it is senseless to do otherwise when we elect a President.

Why? Because we were "given" a republic by our founding fathers, not a democracy. Because a republic involves decisions made by those elected by the public, it presents a more stable type of government than does a pure democracy. One need only watch the fluctuation in public opinion polls to see that we in the U.S. are sometimes "changeable as the weather." If we strictly adhere to "majority rule" in all matters INCLUDING the election of a President, what assurance can anyone have for the future???

While our republic is far from perfect, it's better than a democracy, if you ask me.

Senator Bayh is, once again, off target.

Because of vandalism at Wild Cherry Park, Bob Stiver stopped in last week to say that the Town Board will prosecute the offenders if they are caught.

The latest foul play included ripping out a partition in the rest room facility.

It's too bad someone just has to be destructive at our neat and attractive park area which is the scene of a good many family get togethers.

It just seems like someone else told me to put their ad in the column on the back page, but I couldn't find another slip of paper with the information. If your ad isn't in, let me know.

Apparently the public has expressed gripes about the length of the grass growing along the freeway right of ways. The explanation was given by the state highway department that mowing schedules had to be cut down to three times a year due to increasing costs and lower revenues.

This is an example of the fact that many John Q. Publics just have not gotten the message that what we became accustomed to in the past just can't keep on. The high living, which 99 times out of a 100 involves the use of manufactured energy, can't keep up. Our problems in energy and in spending come from abuse — abuse that historically has come from affluence.

God has given us a free will. With it comes intelligence—or the potential of intelligence. The selfish nature of man MUST be overcome by the recognition of God's provision of all that we need — IF we exercise restraint. Otherwise, chaos and confusion result—and we have that condition today.

That's what old Mr. Krushev was talking about not too many years ago when he referred to the "decadent democracies." We scoffed—but he knew what he was talking about.

And the lesson comes to light in such an everyday thing as mowing grass and weeds along the highways.

40 At Meeting On Flood Insurance

Approximately 40 persons attended the public meeting held Monday night for the purpose of discussing the proposed zoning ordinance for Saint Joe which is related to another controversial matter involving subidized flood insurance.

The federal office of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has declared a portion of the town at the east end as "flood prone." Included are some businesses and several residences. A question has arisen about the "flood prone" designation because the affected dwellings and businesses are situated several feet above the average level of the St. Joseph River. In addition, in those instances when the river has been "high" and waters have spread beyond the river bank, the area covered by the spreading water in the lowland at the east edge of town has involved no dwellings or buildings; there has been no actual dollars and cents damage, generally speaking.

Attorney Don Butler was present at the meeting to review the situation faced by the local town board and town residents. He reviewed the provisions of the flood insurance program and answered several questions during the hour and a half meeting.

Of greatest concern generally was the fact that the town was being forced into something it does not need or want. Interest and concern was also shown by those directly affected by the "flood prone" designation and what the implications are for them.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the attorney said he did not think the conclusions of HUD were "right" or proper, in telling about the provisions of the flood insurance program, he was not trying to "sell" the program. He was just relating the legal requirements and the difficulties involved in this particular situation.

The exact nature and source of HUD's information is not known, yet the burden of proof that HUD is wrong lies on the town, the attorney pointed out. HUD requires "scientific" proof of error before a change in the "flood prone" area would be made.

Acting chairman Ted Haberkorn, who had set up the meeting to give the public an opportunity to hear the details and ask questions, suggested that approval of the zoning ordinance "which nobody wants" should be supported but only because it is a requirement related to the flood insurance program. Its passage is acceptable only on the basis that the town board would appeal the "flood prone" designation and take whatever action needed to remove the town from the restrictions represented by the zoning ordinance. Under the zoning ordinance, a plan commission and board of appeals would be set up. A permit fee would be charged for property improvements of designated nature.

HUD'S Ignorant Intrusion

The public meeting Monday night about the "flood prone" area in Saint Joe and the required zoning ordinance for the town in order to qualify the town for "low cost" flood insurance brought out a few points, some of which were obvious, others not specifically mentioned but nevertheless evident.

From some of the remarks made by the town attorney, it may have sounded as if the information given in last week's issue of this paper might be making more of the situation than is necessary. In particular, it sounded as if present property owners in the "flood prone" area were not in any particular jeopardy; if they don't want the insurance, they don't have to buy. But that leaves the fact that such non-involvement in the program may relate to such things as federal grants for a sewage plant which Saint Joe can in no way pay for "on its own" to all appearances. —Or maybe I have that confused. There are many ways in which we can get "wrong ideas" or at least become confused in determining what can or cannot, what should or should not, be done. This seems to be the case whenever the federal or state government steps in with a program to "benefit" the public.

Of one thing I am certain, however—that the entire situation is another step in the trend toward extensive government control of private lives, of government holding an axe over citizens' heads to force compliance with government edicts of questionable wisdom.

One point stood out from Monday night's discussion. According to the town attorney, we do not know how HUD (Housing and Urban Development) arrived at their conclusion that certain houses in town as well as the lowland at the east edge are "flood prone." Yet, the burden of proof that HUD's conclusion is in error lies on the "appellants" (that's us). To appeal HUD's decision, we must present to HUD "scientific data" to confirm what every resident knows as a fact — that the houses and businesses in the "flood prone" area just won't be flooded. But if they were to be flooded, so would many other houses and businesses in town NOT included in the "flood prone" area. That doesn't mean that more houses should be included; it means that the ones now in the area should be taken out.

As for the zoning ordinance, this matter must be allowed to go through in order to meet the standards set by Hud to qualify for the flood insurance certain properties don't need(!). The deadline date is too near to allow an appeal to be made. But an appeal can be made after the flood insurance matter is set in motion. And if successful, an appeal could remove the affected houses from HUD's "flood prone" area. If legally necessary, thereafter, the area still termed "flood prone" but having no structures on it could be disannexed upon request by the affected property owner or owners, according to town counsel. Then the zoning ordinance could be rescinded and we could be back where we have been for so many years, free to use our property as we see fit and in a reasonable and proper manner—but short several hundred dollars, perhaps into the thousands, in tax money used for expenses to protect us from the government which is supposedly the "protector."

A couple of comments have been made that we (the town of Saint Joe) could be taken into the county zoning program. Apparently it is thought this would eliminate certain expense, and it possibly would. I have been aware of the possibility for several years; it was mentioned to me by town counsel while I was on the town board a few years ago.

However, while there might be the elimination of expense in becoming "zoned," the basic question to be answered is: do we want to be subject to ANY such board and program? If we were to enter the county program, we would be subject to the permit rates and standards of approval as established by the county board. We would be subject to decisions by those not involved in town affairs otherwise. Is this "home rule," one of the favorite campaign comments by those seeking public office? To me, it is not a question of "how can we get a zoning program and plan commission at the lowest cost?" The question is: how can we keep from becoming subject to an agency and rules and regulations, keep from becoming subject to a permit fee (even if it is only $10)?

I think it is a perfect example of government meddling in local affairs in this situation, meddling which adds to the cost of living, adds to the cost of maintaining governmental programs with no real benefit to the public. The federal government through HUD did not ask our town board, "Do you have any homes or businesses threatened by potential flooding?" The government just went ahead on its own, then made the burden fall on our shoulders to prove government is wrong.

Why should anyone in town be forced to pay $10 for a permit to do what they have been able to do in the past for nothing? The zoning ordinance to be considered Friday night has been made as unrestrictive as possible, yet meet HUD's demands. The $10 fee included in the ordinance is simply a token amount which brings no benefits. Why should anyone be forced to pay something for nothing? Why should certain home owners feel compelled to purchase flood insurance which they will never use? They would not be buying needed protection for themselves; they would be helping to pay someone else's flood damage bills. Fair? I don't think so.

Taking the town's legal counsel at his word, there is nothing the town can do at the present time but go ahead with passage of the zoning ordinance. I support the town board in this action only in the sense that such passage is a "protection" against a more trying situation later on. But the support is given with the definite expectation that the town board will proceed with an appeal which can, according to counsel, if successful, lead to restoring the freedom which property owners have enjoyed here for decades.

Mr. Houston And Related Events

CONCLUSION—THE ANNOUNCEMENT

The mayor waited patiently until Elwood and the man next to Charlie had finished their duet, then intoned:

"Ladies and Mr. Stacey. Kindly take your seats and let us proceed with this hearing."

So Elmira and the ladies of the LTM escorted Elwood to the front row, where nineteen chairs had been reserved for them, and where they sat down — facing the mayor's and city councilmen's table. Elwood sat with left leg straight and extended, for he could not bend it because of the cast. Then the mayor spoke to the audience.

"Ladies and gentlemen, as you know, I have scheduled this meeting to hear comments on a petition regarding Emit Houston's whittling in the courthouse. Concern about the whittling has been detailed in a petition, and for those of you who do not have a copy of the petition, there are copies available on the table in the foyer."

"You may have noticed that several reasons are cited in the petition as cause for prohibiting whittling in or about the courthouse. Of these several reasons, I believe the two most legitimate ones are 1), that it creates an atmosphere of disrespect, and 2), that it is hazardous to those who work in the courthouse or have business to conduct there. Let us open the discussion by hearing comments about the first of these two objections."

Unnoticed by all except Jake Basswood, Emit had been rubbing his arms, for there was an unusual tingling sensation in them that he had never experienced before. He was not, however, unaware of what might be its cause, so he decided to say nothing and sit quietly.

Just as the young man was about to rise and declare his support of Emit's activities, Emit suddenly slumped forward in his chair. Jake lurched from his chair and grabbed Emit to prevent him from toppling to the floor.

The next day, Jake Basswood printed the following announcement in The New Madison News.

"Dr. Emit Houston, 58, of New Madison, Indiana, died last evening after having been rushed to the Brevitt County hospital. Dr. Houston collapsed at a public hearing in the Brevitt County courthouse from a severe heart attack.

"Mr. Houston, known to the townspeople for his outspoken remarks and capacity for whittling, professed to be illiterate. That was not the case, for Mr. Houston held a Ph.D. in theoretical physics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"In 1966, shortly after his wife died, Dr. Houston abandoned his research into nuclear and theoretical physics and came to live in New Madison. He kept his past association with nuclear devices a closely kept secret, for he believed that his contributions to that science for domestic and peaceful purposes were invariably turned into articles of warfare.

"Mrs. Allison Kittrell, Dr. Houston's daughter, has arranged for his body to be interred next to that of his wife, in Little Falls, Massachusetts, the town of his birth."

The end.

The argument about comparing the batting accomplishments of homerun hitters will probably never be absolutely settled. Babe Ruth's lifetime homerun total has been surpassed by Hank Aaron. The Babe's season homerun feat was surpassed by Roger Maris. In both instances, supporters of "the Babe" point out that his accomplishments came in fewer lifetime at bats or fewer games. And those who are strong admirers of Aaron and Maris say it doesn't matter how many at bats or how many games are involved, the record is the highest total—period. Some may not like "the Babe's" personal life, his manner and manner of living. But on the ball field, it is probably true that there has never been a more powerful and intimidating batter in major league baseball than "the Babe." His fantastic feats include hitting three home runs in the last game of his playing career when he saw that he had become "too old" to play!

On June 14 a Saturday, the Boy Scout troop cleaned up State Road 1 from the DeKalb-Allen county line to the corner of County Road 64. their other plans for this weekend which is to run a "pop stand" and some money making ideas. After patrol meeting, they played softball until dark.

Board Passes Zone Ordinance

The town board met Monday night in a special session to consider passage of an ordinance dividing the town into two districts, "General Purpose District" and "Flood Plain District."

The ordinance is required in order to qualify the town for low cost flood insurance under a program mandated by the federal government through legislation passed by the Congress. Regulations are established and enforced through the office of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Although the town board enacted the ordinance Monday night, the action was more from necessity than desire. Of consequence to the entire town is the inclusion by HUD of several homes and businesses in the "flood prone" area designated by HUD. Apparent inaccuracies in HUD's designation are to be appealed by the town board, it is reported. Public reaction in the community appears to oppose the mandatory and arbitrary regulations imposed on the town and certain individuals under the flood insurance program.

The mandatory zoning ordinance under which a Plan Commission and Board of Zoning Appeals is established does not please most residents of the town, it appears. To many residents, the need for paying a fee to obtain permits from a Plan Commission is an unnecessary expense which has no overall benefits for the town, the population numbering 567 at the 1970 census.

Due to the July 1, 1975, deadline date to comply with regulations affecting "flood prone" areas, it became necessary to pass the zoning ordinance. This is to protect the town should an appeal fail to gain redefining of the "flood prone" boundaries, according to town counsel Donald Butler.

EMS Needs More Volunteers

Emergency Medical Services are scheduled to go into effect in DeKalb County July 1. The three emergency vehicles in the county will be activated on that date.

One unit is located at Butler. However, volunteers to man the vehicle are needed. Special training is required to qualify as a volunteer worker. Anyone interested in the training program should contact Bill McAlpin at DeKalb Memorial Hospital.

The Butler and Garrett units will be entirely volunteer manned. And there is need for more volunteer workers for the Butler unit which serves the eastern side of DeKalb County.

Conditioning Program July 1

The program will be held each week on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 7 p.m., according to John Fallis of the Eastside faculty.

The conditioning program is for all students and is particularly helpful for those who plan to participate in interschool athletics during the coming school year.

CENTENNIAL BRIEFS

Though there are still several loose ends to tie in with the plans for the Saint Joe Centennial, progress was made Monday night at a Booster Club meeting in preparation for the July 18—20 weekend.

A voluntary addition to the fun activities came from Doc and Jackie Wertman at the Oasis Tavern who offered to set up a dumk tank and give the proceeds to the Booster Club.

Loretta Loy and Sandy Leeper volunteered to take charge of a talent contest for the Friday evening of the Centennial weekend. They also will have charge of an "Old Time Fashion Show" at 11 a.m. Saturday, July 19, following the Centennial parade.

The following "capsule" paragraphs give furthern insight as to what is coming in a couple of weeks or so:

Want to be part of the activities at the Saint Joe Centennial July 18, 19 and 20? Plan now to enter the old fashioned made—from—scratch pie and cake baking contest to be held Saturday, July 20, in the cafetorium of the Riverdale School. Entries received from noon to 8 p.m. that day, with judging to begin at 2. Your entry fee is your pie or cake, with the pies and cakes to be sold following the judging and proceeds to go to the Booster Club of Saint Joe. Register with Fern Carr or Gertrude Reinhart at Saint Joe.

Got some old time clothes stored in the closet or the attic? You're invited to get them out and wear them to the Saint Joe Centennial which will include an old—time fashion show at 11 a.m. Saturday, July 19, following the Centennial parade. Male and female are invited to participate and add to the atmosphere of the Centennial festivities. Contact Loretta Loy or Sandy Leeper at Saint Joe.

Waterball competition will be a part of the Saint Joe Centennial weekend, July 18, 19 and 20. The Saint Joe—Concord Township Volunteer Fire Department will participate Saturday, July 19, and Sunday afternoon the state waterball champion Butler Fire Department team will join Saint Joe firemen in putting on a waterball show. Plan to attend the festive weekend which will include many other activities and historic displays. That's Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 18, 19 and 20, for the Saint Joe Centennial.

Inside and outside display space is available at the Saint Joe Centennial to be held July 18, 19 and 20. Organizations and businesses are invited to use this opportunity to place their products, services or projects before the public during the weekend. Call 337—2626 or 337—2352 for rates and reservations.

A talent show is planned for Friday, July 18, at 7 p.m. at the Saint Joe Centennial. Judging will be on an open basis, consideration given to overall talent, appeal, appearance and performance. Entry fee is $3 and registration can be made with Loretta Loy or Sandy Leeper at Saint Joe.

Arts and crafts will be on display at the Riverdale cafetorium during the Saint Joe Centennial July 18, 19 and 20. The Ladies Literary Club is in charge of the display. Also on display will be historic items, this display supervised by April Davis and Sharon Bowser. The Little Hoosiers of Riverdale and Butler will show their award winning exhibits under the direction of Donna Jewel and Betty Wagner.

The annual Saint Joe Lions Club hand—cranked homemade ice cream social will be held Saturday, July 19, during the Saint Joe Centennial weekend. The conservation club at the west edge of Saint Joe is the location. Serving begins at 5 p.m.

Grand Opening Week of the new Knisely Branch Bank at Saint Joe will be held July 14 through 20, in conjunction with the Saint Joe Centennial observance. Prizes and refreshments will be a part of the branch bank's grand opening activities. The bank represents a major advancement in fulfilling the needs of the Saint Joe, Spencerville and Newville area and represents an investment by the Butler bank of over $150,000 in the Riverdale community.

A soapbox derby is planned for the Saturday of the Saint Joe Centennial weekend, July 18, 19 and 20. The derby will be run at 1 p.m. that Saturday, with the fun-type derby open to designs of all kinds. Fred Rayle and Steve Monroe are in charge of the races.

A tennis tourney for various age groups through adults will be held during the Saint Joe Centennial week. Forrest Bevington is chairman of the event and has received a sizable number of entries already. —Tennis, anyone? ?

A community worship service is planned for Sunday, July 20, at 10:30 a.m. at the Riverdale cafetorium during the Saint Joe Centennial July 18, 19 and 20. The service will be followed by a carryin dinner at noon or shortly thereafter, the dinner in turn followed by a program of historic anecdotes about the community. A community service award will be made during the program by the local newspaper.

A golf tourney is planned for the Saint Joe Centennial. Site of the tourney is the Frank Sechler farm adjacent to the general Centennial area. A nine hole course is laid out on the small scale site and players will be "equalized" by the use of plastic perforated golf balls. Mike and Dave Haberkorn are chairmen of the event to be held during the Saint Joe Centennial which will run from July 18 through 20.

The Saint Joe Centennial, to be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 18, 19 and 20, began as just an historic observance. It is now to be utilized partly for the raising of funds to assist in the installation of additional tennis courts at the Riverdale School. Community use of the present two courts is overwhelming, with tennis enthusiasts from the grade school level on through adults showing the need for additional facilities. The Booster Club has indicated that a portion of Centennial proceeds will go toward a tennis court fund, and donations will be accepted from any and all organizations participating in the Centennial on a voluntary basis, as well as from any individuals who may wish to contribute. However, the Boosters must provide for considerable primary expenses for the Centennial before any profit-sharing can be carried out by the club.

Flossie Mavis of Auburn and Gray Woodcox of Garrett, former residents of Saint Joe in "the good old days," are preparing a portion of the historic program to be presented Sunday, July 20, at the Riverdale cafetorium following the Saint Joe Centennial community worship and carryin dinner. Stories and anecdotes in Saint Joe's history will be the basis for the program, and others who attend will be invited to share their recollections with the gathering.

Bob Tejan New Cubmaster; Cubs To Have Old Carnival Games At Cent'l

Cub Scout Pack 3172 held a special called Pack meeting Wednesday of this week.

The Rev. Terry Phyne, new pastor of the Spencerville United Methodist Church, was introduced. We welcome Rev. Phyne enthusiastically to our community and to our Pack as pastor of our Cub Scout Pack's sponsoring church.

Rev. Phyne voiced eagerly his interest in Scouting and would like to work actively with "our boys" and pack committee.

Cubmaster Pastor Kuchera formally announced his successor to be Mr. Bob Tejan. Mr. Tejan will begin immediately working with Pastor Kuchera in Cubmaster duties and continue as Cubmaster when Pastor Kuchera leaves. Mr. Tejan is well familiarizd in Scouting, its importance and values through his help with our local Girl Scouts and this year's involvement in Cub Scouting, actively working with son Dirk in Cubbing and also helping Dean Mother Judy Tejan and the pack committee. We can say Bob truly "got his feet wet" when he accompanied the pack members to Pokagon Sunday for our picnic and swim party.

The rest of our meeting was devoted to the pack's activities at the Saint Joe Cehtennial in July. Pack 3172 will have a Cub Carnival Center which will offer several different carnival type activities popular 100 years ago. Our pack is also looking forward to its participation in the Centennial parade.

The meeting concluded with everyone taking back to Cubs their confirmed plans for boys and adults to begin happy time preparations for the Saint Joe Centennial.

A reminder to all Boy and Girl Scouts that Saturday, July 12, is Scout Cleanup Day. Please, let's all actively participate.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

You think we aren't controlled?

If I understand it correctly, with all the "equality" hullabaloo under which the American public has been intimidated, the high school footballers can't have their own conditioning program. It must be opened to all students.

—Keep that in mind next November—that the judgment, efforts and departmental activities of school faculty members have increasingly come under the arbitrary standards of governmental agencies.

Lois Akey brought in the following this week. And I can fully appreciate her feeling of appreciation for the help given her for Spencerville's Covered Bridge Days last weekend. Those who volunteer and pitch in to help really make the burden of planning more bearable. Lois says:

"I would like to thank the following persons and businesses who helped me so much this year with the two parades for the Spencerville Bridge Festival. First of all my committee members who helped me so much. I'd like to thank the St. Joe News for donating material and space for advertising. I wish to thank the following for their cash donations: Vulcraft, Laub's Shell Mart, Chaney's Restaurant, The Oasis, Indiana Bell Telephone, Spencerville Marathon and Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Baumgartner. Thanks again to everybody whose names are too numerous to remember."

An effort is being made to establish postcard voter registration. Congressional bills to set up the program have been introduced primarily through Democrat sponsorship and—or heavy Democrat support.

Reasons given for such an "easy" registration plan include: events in recent years have turned people away from government; many working people are prevented from registering to vote because of inconvenient locations or the prospect of wage loss.

I think this proposal is one of the worst approaches to solving the problem of voter apathy. It cheapens the right to vote; it opens the door to fraud of even greater proportions than is experienced under the present registration system.

You do not increase the value of liberty by making its obligations "easier" to meet.

I think the argument in support of the measure—that "many working people are prevented from registering to vote because of inconvenient locations or the prospect of wage loss'—is an example of deception. With all the leisure time Americans now enjoy, more than ever before, and with transportation a major part of ALL our everyday activities, it borders on outright and deliberate misstatement of fact—obvious if a person looks at it "the way it is."

The problem is not inconvenience of registration. The problem is not loss of income (under today's liberal contract benefit provision for the average worker). The problem is that our elected officials have violated the faith and trust of the American people. Congress, including those proposing the "easy registration" bills, is the major cause of voter apathy. And Senator Birch Bayh of Indiana is one of those who consistently come up with these ideas which SOUND good but are not based on fact and DO NOT strengthen our elective processes.

The Senator has been a prime factor in passage of the last two or three Constitutional amendments. And the benefits supposedly to be derived from them have not occurred. Even members of his own party say of some of the changes: "We should have left things alone."

In my opinion, postcard registration is another example of an appeal for change for change sake and does not honestly deal with the problem of voter apathy because it does not face facts.

Compared to the "bother" of current voter registration requirements, a postcard IS a cheap way out. If you ask me, that's what will happen to our elective process, too—it will become cheap. You don't strengthen by cheapening.

Did you see that former Senator Daniel Brewster (D—Maryland) pleaded "no contest" on charges of receiving illegal contributions a few years ago? He got off with a fine and no prison sentence.

I mention it because Spiro Agnew pleaded the same way in his legal difficulties a couple of years ago and also got out of a prison sentence but paid a fine, as I recall.

I'm not saying that either or both should have been dealt with differently, sentencewise. I do point out that Spiro Agnew's case was splattered all over the front page. Senator Brewster's story was found on the inside pages and not too much has been made of the matter by the national news media, generally speaking.

Bias in reporting? You dang betcha. And on a special report by CBS—TV the other night on the CIA, President Eisenhower was quoted and a film slip was shown when he made remarks about the need to "eliminate" a Communist-inclined governmental situation in a foreign country.

But—isn't it strange. When Daniel Schorr told about the Bay of Pigs "fiasco" in Cuba, the CIA was mentioned—and only the CIA. Not one word was said about President Kennedy's involvement nor that of his brother who was attorney general at the time.

What makes it even more amazing is that political analysts have in recent weeks often been stating that there is strong evidence to indicate that the assassination plot against Fidel Castro (reportedly uncovered in recent investigations) may even have ORIGINATED with one or both of the Kennedys.

Meanwhile, a former President who resigned in shame, who was near death for a time but is now recovering, bears the direct and implied blame for ALL the misdeeds of our government and its agencies, even for the years when he was NOT President.

And I find it inconsistent, if not unethical, that those who cry for "equal justice" in one instance become deafeningly silent in another similar instance—and the latter instance just happens to involve a liberal or a Democrat while it is a conservative or a Republican who gets crucified.

Take a good long look. Those who are hated most have hated least, oftentimes. Those who have been considered "tolerant" through their "liberal" declarations are, in fact, the least tolerant.

We don't need a third party. We need a re-alignment of the two parties we already have, so that the voter knows he is voting for a candidate who represents individual liberty AND responsibility or a candidate who represents government planning and programming as the basis for our American society.

Soccer Starts Monday In Rec'n

—by Terry Kern, director

Boys' soccer, a part of the Riverdale summer recreation program, will begin Monday, June 30, at 9 a.m. It is open to boys in grades four through eight. It is the hope that enough boys will be interested to form four teams so two teams could play the first hour and the other two the second hour.

Soccer is becoming a growing sport in the U.S. and because of the constant movement involved, it can become an excellent conditioner for school sports such as football, basketball and track.

The first day of soccer will meet in front of the Riverdale School and will be held on every Monday, Wednesday and Friday until August 8.

Another facet to the summer program this year is coed softball. This activity will begin Tuesday, June 31, and will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays. It will start at 9 a.m. on the Saint Joe diamond and run til around 11 a.m. Each team, hopefully, will consist of an equal number of boys and girls to instill the importance of cooperation and good wholesome activities.

Student tennis is also swinging into high gear. 21 eager tennis buffs have chosen partners and are preparing for league play and practicing for a special doubles tourney at the end of the season. Tennis standings thus far show the doubles team of Rich Timmerman and Jeff Vinson in front with Miley McNamara and Kathy Mack leading the way for the girls at the 12:30 class. At 1:15 Dave Griggs and Mike Gettys head the male teams while the female teams are led by Amy Laux and Lisa Fetters. At 2:00 the brothers Dave Charles and Ron Mausteller are out in front along with Robin Loy and Lynette Longardner.

In kickball action, the first game of the summer resulted in Jodi Koester's team defeating Nancy Lothamer's team by a score of 27—10. The Beatty sisters, Dawn and Brenda, each captained a team with Brenda's coming out on top 32—18. In the latest game, a team captained by Rachel Chew overpowered Lisa Bercaw's team by a score of 31—10.

Adult tennis lessons are now under way at the Saint Joe courts. Currently there are five ladies playing tennis. As of June 30, adult tennis will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Fridays from 9 to 11 a.m. A tourney for the adults will also be held as the first of August approaches. It is not too late to join in this activity.

For those still interested in adult tennis or if questions remain unanswered, please call Terry Kern 337—2053 or Tim McAlhany 925—0359.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

It wasn't an oversight not to mention Jeff Dielman who has been working at the local new branch bank. It's just that he is here temporarily until Arla Sechler completes her training at the home bank.

—Besides, it would be difficult to overlook a big, handsome hunk of young man like that! I bet some dirty old women have noticed him.

I am not a farmer, so I don't know for sure. But the old saying about corn—"knee high by the fourth (of July)" to indicate prospects for a good crop— is way behind this year. Around Saint Joe there are fields with corn better than head high and BEFORE the fourth.

My understanding is that the rainfall pattern from now on will be the determining factor.

Roger Voirol and Lonny Emenhiser also had a combined no-hitter in Junior League baseball in the past week. The opposition scored five runs, but their team won 18—5.

Elwood Savage put on a fresh white gleaming coat of paint at the Post Office in the past week. That helps to dress up the town for its centennial July 18—20. The Post Office building is now owned by Ivan and Betty Brown.

I goofed in not mentioning in the publicity about the centennial that Ila Coburn will have on open house at her "North Side Doll Hospital and Gift Shop" during the celebration. It was not an intentional oversight —and I've probably forgotten a few other related details about the centennial, so please remind me.

Peck Reinhart is now in room 712 at St. Joseph Hospital in Fort Wayne. He was taken there for therapy.

Kitty Bowser, Ramon Chew and Marty Loy enjoyed a recent 12 day trip to Mexico. Jay Loy suggested an interview with them. But with the centennial preparations, I'm tied up. So, kids, how about the three of you getting together to write a story—or each one do his own, whichever you prefer?

Speaking of the centennial, people ask, "Are you going to have this or that?" The answer is: yes, if someone wants to take care of "this or that." Because we are putting this thing together in a short time, we depend on anyone in the area with an interest in Saint Joe, past or present, to voluntarily make the move to provide whatever they may think will add to the "once in a hundred years" occasion.

Displays, concessions, parade participation—you name it, we would like to have it as a part of the centennial.

There was some grumbling about kids paying entry fees. It is necessary to do so in order to cover expenses. The tent alone will cost $450, and it is not yet filled with exhibitors. Insurance will cost some $200. There will be electrical expense even though Glen Moore of the Spencerville Community Club has made their electrical facilities available to us. One street banner cost some $40 to $50 with Nicky Kuchera doing the lettering for free. The other banner was donated by The Sisters' Emporium with Mike Haberkorn doing the lettering.

As far as entry fees being hard on kids, I don't buy that one bit. Chances are Mom and Dad will provide the money, and it gives some semblance of an investment when you pay to be able to participate. With so many kids signed up for tennis that Terry Kern had to expand her summer recreation schedule —and the kids had to provide their own tennis racket PLUS two tennis balls (and they aren't cheap)—the charging of an entry fee for ANY age group just isn't that rough. A buck to be in the "soapbox derby" isn't that bad.

Money may be "tight" but not THAT "tight."

What fees there are would seem to be reasonable.

Publicity has not been overwhelming for us—yet—because of the centennials at Hicksville and Garrett—1875 was a good year!

I hope the ladies from all around get into the spirit of the thing and enter the "made from scratch" pie and cake baking contest. Where or when have you seen of something like that in recent years???

Some of the enthusiastic workers already sprucing up the town for our centennial include Loretta Loy, Sandy Wortman and a gang of kids. They painted the trash barrels this week and are repainting the fire hydrants —with faces!

Cooks Challenged In 'Scratch' Bake

One of the efforts to make the Saint Joe Centennial as "old fashioned" as possible is that related to the pie and cake baking contest. Years ago, commercially prepared mixes, frostings and crusts were unknown; those "inventions" hadn't been made yet. Home baking "from scratch" was a normal part of the food preparation for the family.

The centennial contest seeks to revive some of that old time talent—though one or two remarks have been heard from a few of the younger women that "I never did it that way—I don't know how!"

Fern Carr is in charge of the contest. Gertrude Reinhart had volunteered to assist. But due to the serious illness of her husband, Mrs. Reinhart found it necessary to give up her efforts in promoting and assisting in the contest. Esther Haberkorn has been named to take her place.

Registration before the centennial is urged so that plans for space can be made accordingly. Call 337—3445 or 337—2352 to register. The contest is open to men and women, boys and girls.

Judging will be held at the Riverdale cafetorium at 2 p.m. Saturday, July 19, during the centennial. Entrants can bring their pie and cake contest items from noon until 2 p.m. that day. No entry fee is charged. But the pies and cakes will be sold by the Booster Club with a bake sale following judging, with proceeds going toward centennial expenses.

No boxed preparations or prepared crusts or fillings are allowed. That ought to be a challenge to anyone who says "I know how to cook"!

Bingo Set For Centennial Friday

Bingo is a popular diversion for many people today. And the Saint Joe Centennial will have bingo.

Roy Eck, who is in charge of the Saint Joe Valley Conservation Club's weekly Saturday night bingo sessions, has offered to present an evening of bingo Friday evening, July 18, starting at 8 p.m. at the conservation club at the west edge of town.

Friday night is being used for the bingo session because the Saint Joe Lions Club will have their annual hand cranked homemade ice cream social Saturday evening at the club.

So, if bingo is one of your pleasures, mark Friday, July 18, as a time for that particular enjoyment.

Interest Evident For Cen'l Parade

Any and all kinds of parade units, individual or group, are invited to participate and add to the fun of the weekend.

Roger Coburn and Jim Norris are in charge and should be notified of participants' plans to allow for provision of adequate and coordinated grouping of parade units.

Historic Items To Be Displayed

A centennial should have a display of items related to the community and individuals in that community.

And Saint Joe's Centennial will have just that, through the efforts of April Davis and Sharon Bowser of The Sisters' Emporium. The gals have asked for and received a lot of cooperation from various individuals in providing items for display at the Riverdale school lower level.

Anyone having items they want to provide for the display should contact the chairmen at 337—3535.

Rainbow Girls Install Officers

Kathy Friend, daughter of MM Donald Friend of Auburn, was installed June 7 as Worthy Advisor of Spencerville Assembly No. 104, International Order of Rainbow for Girls.

Others installed were:

Cheri Melchi, Worthy Associate Advisor; Dawn Beaty, Charity; Nancy Heffelfinger, Chaplain; Melinda Cannady, Drill Leader; Beth Mumma, Love; Cindy Yoder, Religion; Barbara Mumma, Immortality; Brenda Beaty, Fidelity; Anita Hudson, Musician; Sandy Heffelfinger, Our Hoosier Promise Reporter and Rose Lecturer; and Nancy Heffelfinger, Bible Bearer.

Donald Friend was Installing Officer; Cynthia Troop, Installing Marshall; Leanna Friend, Installing Recorder; Dr. Joan Peppard, Installing Chaplain; Lois Fisher, Installing Musician.

A social hour was enjoyed by all following installation.

Derby Race Open To Kids, Adults; Same Car Can Be Used By 'Team'

Fred Rayle and Steve Monroe have announced rules for the "soapbox" or "pinewood" derby to be held Saturday, July 19, during the Saint Joe Centennial celebration July 18—20.

The chairmen say "ANYTHING with four wheels and can be steered and braked" is eligible for entry in the derby.

And there are two age categories: 10 to 15 years and 16 to 60 years. Width of the vehicle in each class is limited to not over 36 inches. Length is to be not over 84 inches. Weight limit for the 10—15 age group is 250 lbs. including the driver. Weight limit for the 16—60 class is 350 lbs. The same car can be used in both classes. Thus a son or daughter can run a car in the 10—15 group and Mom or Dad can run the same car in the 16—60 group, for instance.

Other rules include:

Vehicle must have steering and brake.

For tips and help, contact Fred Rayle or Steve Monroe.

Registration is urged as soon as possible in order that race plans can be made accordingly.

Sechler's Sponsor 'Social' Area

One of the spaces in the display tent at the coming centennial will be sponsored by Sechler's Pickles as a gathering place for those attending the centennial but especially for old timers who have moved away and may want to visit with past friends.

Frank Sechler reports that he plans to have seating facilities in the social area plus a bulletin board and registration book.

This will enable visitors and local residents to make notice of their presence and enjoy some informal get-togethers during the centennial.

Readers are invited to pass the word along to those not now residing locally that the big 40x100 foot tent will have a special place for socializing, compliments of the local pickle processor.

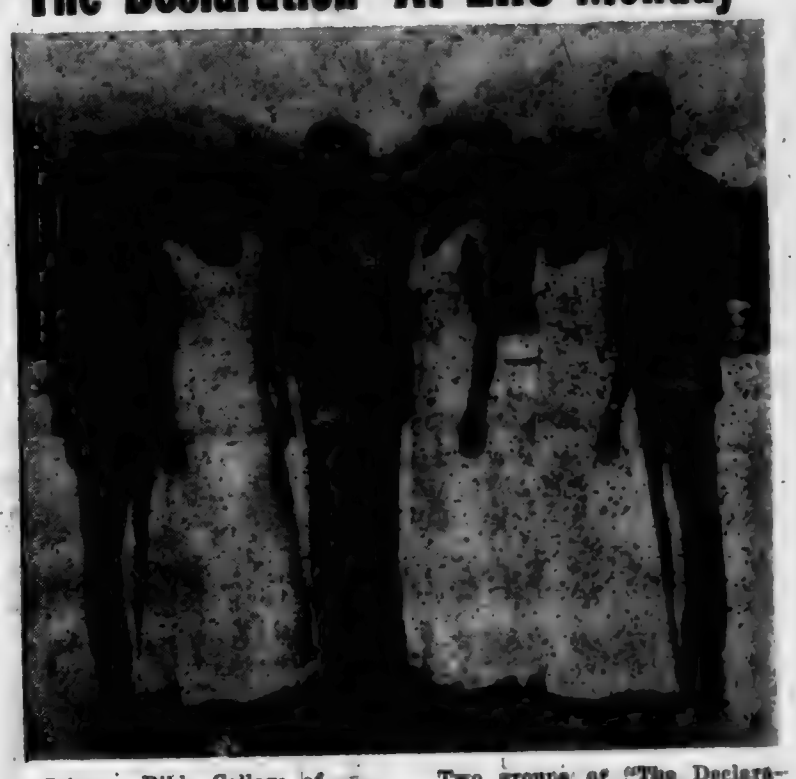
Lions' 'Handcrank' Social July 19

The Saint Joe Lions Club will hold its annual hand cranked homemade ice cream social at the Saint Joe Valley Conservation Club just west of Saint Joe. The date is Saturday, July 19, and coincides with the observance of Saint Joe's 100th anniversary since the original platting of the town in April of 1875.

The local service club will have its usual menu of sandwiches, side dishes, pie, cake, beverage and, of course, the big treat—hand cranked homemade ice cream which became a part of the social dating back to 1958.

The public is invited to enjoy the Saturday night social along with other events during the July 18—20 centennial weekend.

'The Declaration' At EHS Monday



Johnson Bible College of Knoxville, Tennessee, will present "The Declaration," a musical group of current students who are touring the eastern United States during the summer vacation and the coming school year, presenting the Gospel through music.

Two groups of "The Declaration" are coming together at Butler to present their program Monday night, July 7, at 8 p.m. in the Eastside High School cafetorium.

The public is invited. There is no admission charge.

No God?—No Morality

The other day a CBS reporter was interviewing a teacher. I don't recall what city the interview was held in; but it was a national hookup on WGL in Fort Wayne. The topic for the brief interview was the fact that the teacher was making "morals" a part of the study program for the elementary grade involved.

Since there has been a great deal of concern in the minds of many people about "what is happening to us" in view of the increasing inclination to lean toward pleasures which are destructive of the body, mind and soul, I listened with interest — and waited. Waited for what? For some indication that the establishment of a "foundation of morality" for the kids would be based in God, the Bible and-or "the church." I listened in vain. There was no mention of any of what I hopefully anticipated.

Oh, sure, there were comments about the need for children to have some foundation of morals on which to base their living. There was the idea — which I wholeheartedly accept — that young people need such a foundation, something to hold to, to give them strength and confidence, something "unchanging." But how are you going to find it hnless the "unchanging" God is involved—especially when we live in a "changing" world???

Man has tried for centuries to separate himself from the Creator, to be literally and totally "independent." But it can't be done. Eventually, you and I are brought to our knees, figuratively and sometimes literally, when we have tried everything else and failed, when we finally know the truth of the Scriptures—"the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom."

Some people may be encouraged when they hear such things as the interview the other day. To hear someone in a position of influence, as is a teacher, talk about the need for some moral standards is encouraging. However, such talk and efforts will be for naught unless and until it is unashamedly included that "morals" come not from man but from God. Every standard of decency, compassion, love, understanding, forgiveness, tolerance, patience and what have you has come from the inspired writings accumulated over centuries, finally "put together" by a king's order—and the Bible as we know it was born.

Sometimes misinterpreted? Yes. Sometimes misused? Yes. Sometimes abused? Yes. But through it all "the truth" still remains for those who seek it—unchanging truth. And part of that truth is: "morals" come from the Ten Commandments which came from God. Morals come from the teachings of Jesus Christ who came from God. Morals come from God.

I know—it's illegal to teach religion in public schools. I buy that. However, it is not "teaching" in an exact sense (as in pursuing denominational doctrines) to place before youg people the importance of God. This nation was founded on recognition of God and it is essential to keep that constantly before us, or we falter.

I am afraid that teacher is guilty of "intellectual snobbery" because God and the Bible were noticeably absent from the interview. This suggests an attitude of superiority which is noted much too frequently today in the comments of those who are concerned about human suffering and insecurity.

It is not "new ideas" which will bring a strong foundation for young people — or older people, for that matter. It is one very old idea, centuries old in fact, stated in but a few words in another passage in the Bible: "God forgive me, a sinner."

The word for it is "humility." And that's where "morals" begin.

Roush; Other Democrats, Challenge Own Party

The fact that Congress has upheld Presidential votoes much more often than overriding those vetoes indicates one thing — there are some Democrats in Congress who put sound ideas above partisan politics—thank goodness.

Though Democrats have a big enough majority in both houses of Congress to override a veto on party lines, they have not done so. That does not mean everything is "OK" as it now stands. But it does indicate—again, thank goodness—that the "veto-proof" Congress which big labor and "liberal" interests thought they had "ain't."

Of related interest is the fact that Congressman J. Edward Roush publicly announced this week that he has written Senators Birch Bayh and Vance Hartke to support the nomination of Phil McNagny as Northern District Judge in Indiana. President Gerald Ford has said he will nominate McNagny, subject to Congressional approval.

This is significant, because Senator Bayh has stated on more than one occasion that he will oppose the nomination of McNagny (a Republican) until another district court is established and a Democratt is named to that judgeship.

This is the same Senator Bayh who, upon his re-election last fall, made high-sounding declarations of the need for "putting politics aside" and joining in a bipartisan effort to cope with the problems at hand. This is the same Senator Bayh whose past temperament would strongly indicate he favors "taking politics out of the judicial processes."

So, our Fourth District Representative has put his Hoosier colleagues on the spot by recognizing the need for disposing of the matter of the appointment so that a "large backlog of cases now pending" can be dealt with. Mr. Roush has seemingly put party loyalties aside in recognition of a more important responsibility.

In commenting on the situation, the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel editorialized:

"Unfortunately, Senator Bayh had not developed his theory of bipartisanship when, in its closing months, the Johnson Administration rammed through the Senate a spate of Democratic nominees for the Federal Judiciary, including some of questionable capacity and at least one of questionable integrity. And we cannot escape the idea that when and if a Democratic President is elected, Bayh's quest for bipartisanship will be forgotten."

In another editorial about a Consumer Advocacy Agency and its additional bureaucratic burden on the American people, the Fort Wayne paper noted that Senator Bayh did not vote on the issue and had in fact not voted on eight consecutive key issues before the Senate. And Senator Hartke voted against an amendment intended to give some cost protection to the American taxpayer.

Included in the issues on which Senator Bayh did not vote were: authorizations of aid to refugees from Vietnam, and emergency appropriations for railroad improvements and public service jobs.

Where does he stand??? Whom does he represent???

It is refreshing that we have a Democrat 4th District Representative who has set politics aside and urged action by our two Hoosier Senators to act in the interest of the public, not politics.

Also, it should not be forgotten that the nucleus for upholding Presidential vetoes has come from the Republican minority whose cautious and deliberate approach to our problems seems "too slow" to some, but it also keeps us from going completely berserk.

Community Worship, Carryin Dinner, Program Centennial Sunday

A community worship service has been planned for Sunday morning, July 20, during the Saint Joe Centennial weekend.

The service will be held at the Riverdale cafetorium at 10:30 a.m.

St. Joe Church of Christ and St. Mark Lutheran Church at Saint Joe are cooperating in planning for the worship service.

A carryin dinner will follow the worship service, starting at noon or a little thereafter, allowing worshippers time to get their food items and table service, if the nature of their carryin dishes, is such that the food should be kept hot or cold until serving time.

MM Joe Robinson and MM Mose Yoiser have volunteered to provide coffee and cold drink for the carryin.

Following the dinner, a program of historic anecdotes about Saint Joe and its history will be presented. Flossie Mavis of Auburn and Gray Woodcox of Garrett, former residents of Saint Joe from many years ago, will tell what they remember about the community from their childhood until around 1925. Additional history about the town in later years will also be presented. Others attending, who have memories of the town to share, will be invited to do so.

A presentation will be made by the Saint Joe News during the program. The "Distinguished Service Award," begun last year by the local paper, will be presented to the deserving recipient. Last year, Mose Yoiser received the award.

Though "history" is often thought of as "dry, dull and uninteresting" by young people as well as some of the adult population, the reminiscences often heard around town are both amusing and interesting. The historic program July 20 should be of interest to all ages.

Town Board Pres Resigns

Town board president John Heyman submitted his resignation this week. The Heyman family now resides at a lake home.

Board member Dick Roberts has or will also resign due to the sale of the Roberts property in Saint Joe. The family will move to the rural area.

Remaining board member and acting president Bob Stiver said this week he has appointed Joe Robinson to fill the Heyman vacancy. Mr. Robinson is also chief of the fire department.

Saint Joe has a unique situation. Voters have not elected any of the current members. Jack Bowser was elected in 1971 but resigned mid—term. Bill Hubbard was elected but resigned last year. The president was elected but resigned this week. For the past few months, all board members have had their homes listed for sale.

For the next five months, the board will be made up of appointees, two of whom will be appointed by an appointee.

Town elections will be held in November for the 1976 through 1979 term. Party caucuses are held in an election year to name candidates, with an August date as a deadline. The precinct committeemen of both major parties appoint officers to conduct the party caucuses.

Hours Given Arts & Crafts

The Saint Joe Valley Arts & Craft Exhibit, sponsored by the St. Joe Ladies Literary Club, to be held during the St. Joe Centennial, will be located in the former kindergarten room at the Riverdale school.

The hours for the exhibit will be Friday, July 18, noon to 9 p.m., Saturday, July 19, noon to 9 p.m. and Sunday, July 20, noon to 5 p.m.

Numerous artists and craftsmen have arranged to exhibit their work, and it is hoped that the public will take advantage of this opportunity to view this exhibit of local talent.

Delta McKinley

Funeral services were held this week for Delta E. McKinley, 85, of R1 Spencerville. He was a lifelong resident of Allen County and was a retired employee of IHC. He was a veteran of World War I.

Survivors include his wife, Mildred; and five sons, Thomas of Fort Wayne, David of Spencerville, Arlen of Harlan, Richard Francies of Hicksville and Raymond Francies of Green Bay, Wisconsin.

Burial was in Scipio Cemetery.

Current Centennial Briefs

Plans are proceeding for the Saint Joe Centennial to be held next weekend, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 18—20.

In conjunction with the activities scheduled for the area surrounding the local ball diamond and school grounds, Knisely National Bank is having its grand opening all next week with an open house including the awarding of many prizes. The North Side Doll Hospital and Gift Shop will have on open house display during the centennial as will St. Mark Lutheran Church in Saint Joe which recently celebrated its 100th birthday as a congregation.

Interest in the Saturday 10 o'clock parade is growing and several additional units have indicated they will participate. Roger Coburn at 337—3095 and Jim Norris at 337—2475 should be contacted so they can plan the lineup of the parade ahead of time. However, last minute participants will be welcome. The exact parade route is not settled, but it will proceed down the main street for a portion of its route.

Loretta Loy is combing the area for entrants in the talent show to be presented Friday evening of the centennial at 7 p.m. in the Riverdale cafetorium. Apparently there are talented people in the community who are also bashful. Loretta will greatly appreciate hearing from entrants. Call her at 337—3675.

At around 9 p.m. Friday evening, a pubic dance which some are calling "Nostalgia Night" will be held at the tennis court. The local editor has obtained the combo he plays with to provide music for the dance, featuring many tunes from the 1940's and 1950's, plus later music including "soft rock."

The group includes leader Bob Snowball, clarinet and vocals, who is traffic supervisor for Hardware Wholesalers, Inc.; John Whitehart, drummer, who as Fort Wayne's "galloping gourmet" operates the "Gourmet World of Foods" in Georgetown Square; Bob Patnoude, electric bass, who is print production supervisor at McJon's Photofinishing in Fort Wayne; and Ted Haberkorn, piano, who edits and publishes The Saint Joe News. The group has played for various functions in the Fort Wayne area for almost 20 years.

Roy Eck has volunteered to conduct a bingo night Friday of the centennial, starting at 8 p.m. at the conservation club at the west edge of Saint Joe. Mae Ervin and Esther Coburn will operate the kitchen during the evening. Merchandise and cash prizes with a possible jackpot are included for the evening.

The annual Lions Club hand-crank homemade ice cream social will be held at the conservation club Saturday evening, July 19, starting at 5 p.m.

The local firemen will have a lunch stand at the display tent throughout the weekend. And Bob Davis and Jack Bowser are preparing homemade tamales to sell in the concession area.

The pie and cake "baked from scratch" contest will be held in the cafetorium Saturday. Entries may be taken to the cafetorium between noon and 2 p.m. with judging to start at 2 p.m. All entries will then be offered for sale to the public following the judging. Advance registration is not absolutely necessary, but it will help Fern Carr and Esther Haberkorn in planning for the contest if pre—registration is made. Entries will be numbered so that the judges will not know who baked what.

A historic display will be placed in the hall of the Riverdale school at the lower level, with items brought in by area residents related to Saint Joe or the good old days in general. April and Sharon Bowser are in charge and they would like to hear from anyone with items appropriate for the display.

The Ladies Literary Club will have an arts and crafts display in the kindergarten room of the Riverdale school at the lower level. Betty Bevington, Loretta Musser and Louise Church are handling the arrangements for that display. Call 337—3142, 337—3685 or 337—3070.

Forrest Bevington has scheduled the tennis tourney which will begin next Monday evening at the local courts. Eliminations will be held each evening with the courts reserved for that purpose in the evening hours. The finals will be held Friday evening. A schedule appears elsewhere in this issue.

The Booster Club of Saint Joe, which is underwriting the centennial with its officers and directors serving as a planning nucleus, will hold a raffle at the centennial. Tickets are available at The Oasis Tavern, Jiggs' Motor Service, The Sisters' Emporium, the Kone Kastle, Hop's Dairy Store, Brown Furniture & Hardware, Yeiser's Standard Service, Dean's Enco, Slents Elevator, Sechler's pickle plant, Rainbow Farm Center, the Saint Joe Barber Shop, the Vulcraft plant, the Saint Joe Beauty Salon and the News Office in Saint Joe; the Newville General Store in Newville; and Spencerville Marathon, Chaney's Restaurant, Laub's Shell Mart, and Thompson Auto Repair in Spencerville. First prize is a black and white portable TV, second a portable AM—FM radio and third a man's or lady's electric shaver.

The Riverdale Junior League is also having a raffle with the following prizes: first, ice cream maker; second, AM—FM clock radio; third, steam iron; fourth, 2 gallon picnic jug; and fifth, electric clock.

Brown Furniture & Hardware will give away a chair and will have space in the display tent. They also will have refreshments at their store and have a Saturday Special 10% discount.

A "soapbox" race will be held Saturday, July 19, at 1 p.m. with Fred Bayle and Steve Monroe in charge. Entry fee is $1 for age group 10—15 and $1 for those 16 to 60. Registration is requested by this weekend but no one will be turned away if they're late. Call 337—3395 or 337—3285.

Drawings for prizes will be held between the Little League and church team championship games Sunday evening.

The Vulcraft plant will have a display in the tent showing its production facilities and also is sponsoring a series of spot announcements next week on WIFT radio to promote the centennial. Tentative plans include on the spot interviews with those attending the festival with WIFT news director Phil Haberkorn doing the interviews. Phil is a 1969 graduate of Eastside, attended IU at Fort Wayne two years and has been with WIFT for five years.

A golf tourney to give duffers as well as the experts a chance will be held at Sechler's farm just south of town. Plastic "holely" golf balls will be used, according to chairmen Mike and Dave Haberkorn.

The local Junior League teams will participate in a tourney with games scheduled Saturday afternoon and Sunday afternoon.

A church team tourney will be held Friday night, Saturday morning, afternoon and evening and the final game Sunday night.

And there's more!

Ribbon-Cutting To Open Branch Bank Monday

A ribbon—cutting ceremony will be held Monday, afternoon, July 14, at 4:30 p.m. to signify the official opening of the Knisely Branch Bank at Saint Joe.

Present for the ceremony will be members of the board of directors of Knisely National Bank and its officers and employees, representatives of the Booster Club of Saint Joe, representatives of the local town board and representatives of the Vulcraft plant.

The branch bank is having open house all next week to coincide with the Saint Joe Centennial to be held the end of next week.

The new facility at Saint Joe represents an investment of over $150,000 by the Butler based bank. Interest in the project by the bank board was increased by the results of a community survey made by the local Booster Club in the spring of 1974. The president of the club had taken the office on the condition that gaining bank and supermarket facilities would be the club's main target. With the Vulcraft plant opened just three years ago and employing some 250 people at the present time, the potential of this area was enhanced for a financial institution. While there has not been a big increase in homebuilding, there are some new homes in the area and there are many more mobile homes in the local mobile home court and on small acreages surrounding Saint Joe.

Saint Joe has been without bank facilities since the 1930's. The new branch bank represents a step forward in rebuilding the commercial strength of the community and providing for every day needs of area residents.

The public is invited to attend the ribbon—cutting ceremony Monday afternoon.

Community Worship, Carryin Dinner, Program Centennial Sunday

A community worship service has been planned for Sunday morning, July 20, during the Saint Joe Centennial weekend.

The service will be held at the Riverdale cafetorium at 10:30 a.m.

St. Joe Church of Christ and St. Mark Lutheran Church at Saint Joe are cooperating in planning for the worship service.

A carryin dinner will follow the worship service, starting at noon or a little thereafter, allowing worshippers time to get their food items and table service, if the nature of their carryin dishes is such that the food should be kept hot or cold until serving time.

MM Joe Robinson and MM Mose Yeiser have volunteered to provide coffee and cold drink for the carryin.

Following the dinner, a program of historic anecdotes about Saint Joe and its history will be presented. Flossie Mavis of Auburn and Gray Woodcox of Garrett, former residents of Saint Joe from many years ago, will tell what they remember about the community from their childhood until around 1925. Additional history about the town in later years will also be presented. Others attending, who have memories of the town to share, will be invited to do so.

A presentation will be made by the Saint Joe News during the program. The "Distinguished Service Award," begun last year by the local paper, will be presented to the deserving recipient. Last year, Mose Yeiser received the award.

Though "history" is often thought of as "dry, dull and uninteresting" by young people as well as some of the adult population, the reminiscences often heard around town are both amusing and interesting. The historic program July 20 should be of interest to all ages.

Cooks Challenged In 'Scratch' Bake

One of the efforts to make the Saint Joe Centennial as "old fashioned" as possible is that related to the pie and cake baking contest. Years ago, commercially prepared mixes, frostings and crusts were unknown; those "inventions" hadn't been made yet. Home baking "from scratch" was a normal part of the food preparation for the family.

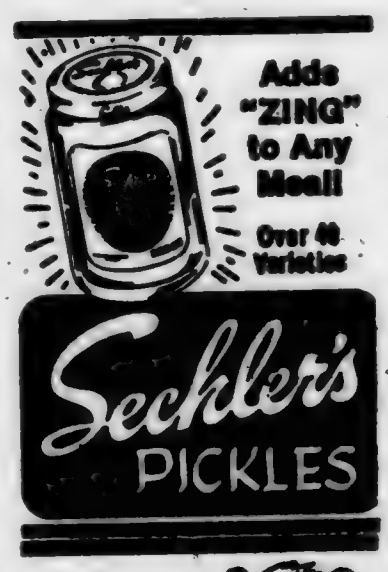
The centennial contest seeks to revive some of that old time talent—though one or two remarks have been heard from a few of the younger women that "I never did it that way—I don't know how!"

Fern Carr is in charge of the contest. Gertrude Reinhart had volunteered to assist. But due to the serious illness of her husband, Mrs. Reinhart found it necessary to give up her efforts in promoting and assisting in the contest. Esther Haberkorn has been named to take her place.

Registration before the centennial is urged so that plans for space can be made accordingly. Call 337—2445 or 337—2352 to register. The contest is open to men and women, boys and girls.

Judging will be held at the Riverdale cafetorium at 2 p.m. Saturday, July 19, during the centennial. Entrants can bring their pie and cake contest items from noon until 2 p.m. that day. No entry fee is charged. But the pies and cakes will be sold by the Booster Club with a bake sale following judging, with proceeds going toward centennial expenses.

No boxed preparations or prepared crusts or fillings are allowed. That ought to be a challenge to anyone who says "I know how to cook"!



just FACTS

—from DEAN'S ENCO SERVICE

The Waco, Texas, high school team in 1921 had such a great defense that they did not allow any team to get past their 35 yard line all season—and we said, "Can you imagine a tougher defense than that?" Well, we understand now that the high school team in Chilton, Wisconsin, in 1969 may have even topped that. They outscored their opponents that season 363—0 and five of the teams they played never crossed the 50 yard line.

Boy Scout News

—Ken Mack and John Bopp

The June 23 Boy Scout meeting started as usual with the pledge of allegiance and the dues. They discussed their few problems and broke into their patrol meetings. For game time most of them had a good time getting wet, while the rest of them worked on advancements.

There was a new boy at the meeting whose name we all know as Gary Staley.

They are helping with the cleaning up of St. Joe on July 12. They are also having some games during the centennial.

A few of the games are: a dunking machine, a water balloon throw, basketball shoot and some others.

We are still looking for boys, so keep coming guys!

Historic Items To Be Displayed

A centennial should have a display of items related to the community and individuals in that community.

And Saint Joe's Centennial will have just that, through the efforts of April Davis and Sharon Bowser of The Sisters' Emporium. The gals have asked for and received a lot of cooperation from various individuals in providing items for display at the Riverdale school lower level.

Anyone having items they want to provide for the display should contact the chairmen at 337—3535.

Interest Evident For Cen'l Parade

Any and all kinds of parade units, individual or group, are invited to participate and add to the fun of the weekend.

Roger Coburn and Jim Norris are in charge and should be notified of participants' plans to allow for provision of adequate and coordinated grouping of parade units.

There is no entry fee. The parade is a "fun thing" for the centennial.

Derby Race Open To Kids, Adults; Same Car Can Be Used By 'Team'

Fred Rayle and Steve Monroe have announced rules for the "soapbox" or "pinewood" derby to be held Saturday, July 19, during the Saint Joe Centennial celebration July 18—20.

The chairmen say "ANYTHING with four wheels and can be steered and braked" is eligible for entry in the derby.

And there are two age categories: 10 to 15 years and 16 to 60 years. Width of the vehicle in each class is limited to not over 36 inches. Length is to be not over 84 inches. Weight limit for the 10—15 age group is 250 lbs. including the driver. Weight limit for the 16—60 class is 350 lbs. The same car can be used in both classes. Thus a son or daughter can run a car in the 10—15 group and Mom or Dad can run the same car in the 16—60 group, for instance.

Other rules include:

Vehicle must have steering and brake.

For tips and help, contact Fred Rayle or Steve Monroe.

Registration is urged as soon as possible in order that race plans can be made accordingly.

Lights For Tennis Courts A Possibility

At Monday's school board meeting, part of the business session centered around a suggestion and offer related to the tennis courts at the Riverdale School.

Saint Joe town board acting president Bob Stiver was recognized and he in turn introduced Richard Musser of Saint Joe. Mr. Musser said he would be willing to accept responsibility for the entire installation of tennis court lighting. He said he would donate labor toward the project and would install six 1500 watt quartz lights, using underground cable. The installation costs would be reimbursed through the use of coin meters, with a posible rate of $1.00 per hour.

The board gave favorable response to the suggestion but did not take any immediate action. It did, however, request that Mr. Musser prepare a schematic drawing accompanied by complete cost information. The information is to be presented at the board's next meeting.

The initiative by Mr. Musser is indicative of the interest in tennis observed in this community. The two local courts are in virtual constant use, and the installation of lights would serve to relieve the backlog of tennis players often waiting their turn before darkness comes.

No concrete proposal has yet been made concerning installing additional courts. However, the local Lions have held discussion in the past about such additional facilities, and the Booster Club has received a suggestion from its president that a portion of any profits from the town centennial could be designated for a tennis court expansion fund. It is hoped by some that, between the Lions Club, the Booster Club of Saint Joe and the school board, an expansion of tennis facilities at the Riverdale School can be accomplished.

Community Club Meets Monday

A meeting of the Spencerville Community Club will be held next Monday night, July 21, at 7:30 p.m. in the community building at Spencerville.

Part of the business to be discussed will be a report of the finances related to the recent Covered Bridge Festival.

All interested persons are invited to attend.

Guy C. Smith

Funeral services were held Friday for Guy C. Smith, 80, a native of Newville Township who died at DeKalb Memorial Hospital Wednesday of last week. He had been a resident of Butler since 1968.

Mr. Smith was born February 11, 1895, the son of Alfred and Olive (Roberts) Smith. He married Helen Smith who died in 1962. His second wife, Esther (Hose) Smith, survives.

Mr. Smith was a partner in Smith Oil Company in Fort Wayne in years past. He was a member of the Newville and Butler Church of Christ, Saint Joe American Legion, Forrest Lodge 239, Shrine, and Fort Wayne Scottish Rite.

Other survivors include two step daughters, Mrs. Alice Tumbleson and Mrs. Ruth Gearhart of Butler; a brother, Howard of Syracuse; three grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

"Flint," a group of three young men from Kendallville, will provide live music for a dance at the cafetorium from 8 to 11 p.m. Saturday night. Admission will be $1 and Loretta says "once you're in, you're in"! This is to help control traffic in the cafetorium area where centennial displays will be present. Cooperation was obtained from those responsible for the displays in arranging for the teen dance.

Graveside services were at Woodlawn Cemetery at 2 p.m. Tuesday with the Rev. William Heimach officiating.

New Program On WIFF

A new radio—telephone counselling program for people with troubles and crises is now on the air locally at 9 p.m. Saturdays on WIFF radio at 105.5 on the FM dial.

Called "The 700 Club," the program couples a variety format with a mass counselling ministry. Listeners faced with physical, emotional or spiritual problems are invited to call a central "700 Club" number for free counselling by a group of volunteers.

The program is produced as a public service and ministerial outreach by the Christian Broadcasting Network," a non—profit non—denominational corporation from Virginia which syndicates radio and television programs nationwide.

The program is made available to people in this area courtesy of the Fort Wayne area chapter of the Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship International.

The CBN currently provides programming services to about 1,200 radio, TV and cable TV stations across the country. The network is supported primarily through contributions from listeners and viewers.

Bingo Prizes Valued Up To $45

Tremendous response to the requests from Jim and Tonda Miller for merchandise donations to be used in the Friday night bingo session of the Saint Joe Centennial has brought a change in the starting time for that activity. Originally set to begin at 8 p.m., bingo will now get under way at 7 p.m. Friday.

After conferring with bingo chairman Roy Eck, Booster Club president Ted Haberkorn said, "We don't like to have conflicts in scheduling of major events in the centennial program. But the large number of donations for bingo made it necessary to set an earlier starting time. The talent show is also set for 7 p.m. However, it appears that those who have interest in both the talent show and bingo can attend both. With the number of prizes donated, bingo will be going for quite a while"

Cooperation from merchants in the Saint Joe, Spencerville, Leo and Grabill areas brought merchandise items ranging in value up to $45.00. Some Auburn merchants also responded to the Millers' solicitations. Butler and Fort Wayne are on the list of contributors, too.

So, with the large list of prizes and Esther Coburn and Mae Ervin serving food from the kitchen Friday night, it appears that bingo fans will have quite a night at the local conservation club.

Lions Handcrank Social In 18th Year

One of the big attractions at the centennial this week end will be the annual Lions Club hand cranked homemade ice cream social. It will be held at the conservation club at the west edge of Saint Joe starting at 5 p.m. Saturday evening.

The club began the hand crank approach to an ice cream social in 1958 and has carried it on ever since, making this the 18th year of "blood, sweat and tears" for the members and their wives.

The club's changing to hand cranking was imitated in years following by other groups in the area, the "old fashioned" effort having a special appeal to many people.

The club anticipates a bigger crowd than ever, with the Saint Joe centennial in progress during the weekend.

Interest High In Baking Contest

With nearly 40 entries received by the first of this week, the "baked from scratch" pie and cake baking contest appears to be of special interest to many cooks in the area. It should provide some interesting competition.

The "scratch" pie and cake baking contest Saturday afternoon at the centennial will have a "celebrity" touch, one with an admitted "sweet tooth" for such contest goodies.

Previously committed judges Ruth Butler of Spencerville and Effiebelle McCann of Saint Joe were joined this week by WIFF radio personality Sandy Mafera who conducts a daily interview program on the local station.

One of the efforts to make the Saint Joe Centennial as "old fashioned" as possible is that related to the pie and cake baking contest. Years ago, commercially prepared mixes, frostings and crusts were unknown; those "inventions" hadn't been made yet. Home baking "from scratch" was a normal part of the food preparation for the family.

The centennial contest seeks to revive some of that old time talent—though one or two remarks have been heard from a few of the younger women that "I never did it that way—I don't know how!"

Judging will be held at the Riverdale cafetorium at 2 p.m. Saturday, July 19, during the centennial. Entrants can bring their pie and cake contest items from noon to 1:50 p.m. that day. No entry fee is charged. But the pies and cakes will be sold by the Booster Club with a bake sale following judging, with proceeds going toward centennial expenses.

No boxed preparations or prepared crusts or fillings are allowed. That ought to be a challenge to anyone who says "I know how to cook"!

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

Anybody find my old ball glove? I must have left it at the ball diamond after a game last week. It's an old floppy thing and fits a left—hander.

As was mentioned last week, she and Sandy Leeper have redecorated the fire hydrants with faces and have repainted the litter barrels white with red and blue stars. Loretta has asked the business places to display the flag now through the centennial weekend and urges residents to plan for some residential decorating for the festive weekend.

Jeanine Arnett has been in on the decorating activities, too.

There has been a big hulabaloo about the EMS (Emergency Medical Service) and the three vehicles now stationed in DeKalb County for emergency use. But there has been no information about how much it will cost an individual to use such service and vehicles. The statement has been made that the service will be offered with little or no cost to the taxpayers. But I'm afraid the public thinks there will be little or no cost—period.

There may be some rude awakenings. In Noble County it costs $35 PLUS mileage to have an EMS vehicle called.

If that makes medical care cheaper, even with all the volunteer help involved, I'm a monkey's uncle.

I've never been convinced that there are a sizeable number of situations in which the presence of a "trained" individual and a well stocked vehicle is a deciding factor between life and death. If there is any chance at all, the main factor would seem to be to get the victim to a hospital and under doctor's care as quickly as possible.

Excluding the stopping of excessive bleeding and making a victim as comfortable as possible, there isn't much which can be done until a doctor is involved. I'm not putting down the volunteer trainees who have gotten into the program; I think it's great that they have such public spirit. My concern is that the cost for the professionals involved, the director, the trained 24 hour personnel and the required equipment will go beyond our pocketbooks. And it is true without question—once these government programs get started, they ALWAYS cost you and me more.

We now must support three trained medical technicians at DeKalb Memorial Hospital whether they have 10 calls or no calls in a week.

Fort Wayne has budget problems now with their EMS program which, as I recall, runs over $1 million a year. We aren't that big, to be sure; but we ought to keep an eye on statistics to determine whether or not we can afford somebody's bright idea.

Remember, in the past you could get ambulance service from funeral homes at little or no cost. But federal and state regulations were made so exacting that this community service is no longer practical from the funeral homes.

We think we are getting ahead. —I wonder.

Freedom of speech has its price.

Everyone agrees that everyone else has a right to say what they think. But the second half of that freedom is just as important: to NOT condemn the individual who says what he or she thinks and deny them friendship and a smile just because you don't agree with them—or to NOT allow one circumstance or situation be the deciding factor in other matters.

It is a bitter pill for me to swallow sometimes to see announcements of engagements and/or weddings, or other activities, in the Auburn or Butler papers when it involves people in or around the Riverdale area—but the Saint Joe News does not get any such information. I pick up the items from the other papers so that people in this area may have the information.

It is also a bitter pill to work for the community as a whole, try to gather as much information as possible about local situations, then to have an obvious avoiding of conversation or discusion about these matters.

This may sound egotistical, and perhaps it is. But I have comparable experiences in civic matters and church matters about gaining as much knowledge and understanding of both general and specific situations as possible, then to be classified as a "know it all" or radical or something of that sort when I use that knowledge. Fortunately, there are those who recognize the problem and offer words of encouragement and support.

Most upsetting is the inclination for people to make statements without knowing the total circumstances. In the matter of the appointment of a town board member, for instance, I am told that people in town have been informed it is necessary to fill a vacancy on the town board with someone from the same political party as the resigned member. THIS IS NOT TRUE. Such an appointment can be any qualified individual in the precinct or district. Party affiliation is NOT a deciding factor.

I am told that people in town have been informed a town board appointment from a district in town (there are three) cannot be of the same party affiliation as the town clerk-treasurer. THIS IS NOT TRUE. The clerk-treasurer is elected "at large" from the entire town. Party affiliation of the clerk-treasurer has nothing to do with the appointment of a town board member to fill a vacancy.

Far too many activities have gone on in our town affairs in the past three and a half years without the board finding out proper procedures. I don't like red tape any more than anyone else. But you can't always just say, "Let's do this," and go do it. But that's the way it has been on occasion. There is also the matter of being open with the public in informing the public as to what is being considered or planned. Some will say, "That's YOUR job as a newspaperman, to find out." As a one—man operation, I am not always able to devote as much time as I would like to such "digging." However, it is also true that our town officials have an obligation, if they have any respect for the public, to themselves provide information voluntarily (and that means more than just legal notices, some of which, incidentally, were published elsewhere but not in the town newspaper.) This hasn't been done for three and a half years.

At the last election, two incumbents, including myself, were defeated, my defeat by only five votes. I tried to take that bitter setback philosophically. I told myself, "You thought you had it in the bag; you thought too highly of yourself. You deserved to get beat." But comments starting just shortly thereafter from disgruntled residents have stuck with me ever since. And I have wondered what town voters were voting AGAINST in that election.

I still don't know the answer. But I do know that the ones who were elected found out being a town board member is more than just a thought that "Yeah, I guess you can put my name on the ballot" or "I think I'd like to be on the board."

And I do know that the town is now being run by officials NOT elected by the public. An elected board member resigned a couple of years ago. A second one resigned last year. Now the president has resigned because he has moved; he has not been in the community very much for the past six months. And one of the appointees who replaced one of the elected members is also resigning because he, too, will move from town. And the remaining board member, an appointee who is acting as president (no one else is left until additional appointments are made) has HIS house listed for sale and plans to move from the community.

Right now, the town budget for 1976 is being prepared. Residents of Saint Joe are now being obligated tax—wise by UN-ELECTED officials. And one of them is chief of the fire department.

For the past three and a half years, town activities have been oftentimes masked in secrecy. Board members have "gotten together" on their own, made decisions and undertaken obligations without informing the town clerk, thus without a record of such activities in the minutes of the town board meetings. Every taxpayer in town has been jeopardized by liabilities involved in some of these activities (such as the razing of the old town hall). Just recently, the town was financially obligated on the spur of the moment for materials to improve the leased bus barn. And it took some quick maneuvering by the town attorney to get the board "off the hook" in that matter. Just my opinion? No — fact.

A comment is often heard in such matters — "It's difficult to get capable people unless you're willing to pay." I can't buy that observation because it implies that where capability and willingness are found, it is because of the pay. This is not fair to the select people—capable people—for whom service to their community is a matter of desire to make their community a better place. Money is at the bottom of their list of "important" factors.

There is nothing personal intended by these remarks. The remaining board member has been "running his tail off" in recent weeks because of the responsibility dropped on his shoulders. But he is not an elected official. The fire chief is conscientious in that capacity. But he is not an elected official. There have been some accomplishments in the past three and a half years—the purchase of a needed new drain rooter, street improvement (but this is a "must" paid for by state reimbursement, not local tax levy), leasing and improving the bus barn for storage and perhaps other purposes, making two lots available for the new branch bank.

However, these do not override the fact that nothing has been done to comply with sewage treatment deadlines. And right now we (the taxpayers of Saint Joe) are paying hundreds of dollars in legal fees to try to get out from under a ridiculous "flood prone area" designation by HUD (Housing and Urban Development) because the board failed to respond to information relative to deadline dates in that subject.

If you get worked up about Watergate, the CIA, the FBI, the wiretapping, the assassination plots, and so on and so on, what about right here in little ol' Saint Joe where responsibility in public office has been treated lightly, where local public office is considered a plaything to some, where the desire to retaliate influenced some people when they cast their votes a few years ago in electing town officials.

It's something to keep in mind also when voting for state legislators, U.S. Congressmen, state governors and officials and the President of the United States.

Is what you're voting "against" worth the price?

Is your vote based on total overall accomplishment—or a single grievance?

There is a saying—you get what you ask for. If some town voters voted the way they did three and a half years ago "for spite," Saint Joe IS getting what it asked for.

I regret that, due to the press of centennial activities, last week's edition of the paper not only was late—late, it also did not have the pairings listed for the centennial tennis tourney. I planned to publish eight pages last week. But when it got to Sunday afternoon and evening that I was still working on the first four pages, I decided to let it go at that.

Perhaps of interest to some of the newer residents of Saint Joe and others from years gone by is the "open house" at the waterworks pump house by Bill Mansfield, waterworks superintendent. Bill says some folks think we are drawing our water from the river instead of from a well. And a look at the facilities might be of interest to many people.

He'll be at the pump house at the west end of town from 4 to 5 p.m. Saturday.

SAINT JOE CENTENNIAL
INDIANA—1875-1975

MAP NOT TO SCALE

Above is a map of a portion of Saint Joe, indicating the areas involved in the observance of the town centennial. One change has been made. The con-cession area will not be on School Street, as indicated on the drawing. At the suggestion of Chick Wagner, longtime operator of game concession at fairs andcarnivals, concessions will be located off the street just north of the big tent, on what is now a stoned parking area. This will provide a more compact andunified activity area. The Saturday parade at 10 o'clock will start at the east end of town and proceed on the main street to the Exco station, then south tothe city limits to disperse east of State Road 1 on County Road 60.

Community Worship, Carryin Dinner, Program Centennial Sunday

A community worship service has been planned for Sunday morning, July 20, during the Saint Joe Centennial weekend.

The service will be held at the Riverdale cafetorium at 10:30 a.m.

St. Joe Church of Christ and St. Mark Lutheran Church at Saint Joe are cooperating in planning for the worship service.

A carryin dinner will follow the worship service, starting at noon or a little thereafter, allowing worshippers time to get their food items and table service, if the nature of their carryin dishes is such that the food should be kept hot or cold until serving time.

MM Joe Robinson and MM Mose Yeiser have volunteered to provide coffee and cold drink for the carryin.

Following the dinner, a program of historic anecdotes about Saint Joe and its history will be presented. Flossie Mavis of Auburn and Gray Woodcox of Garrett, former residents of Saint Joe from many years ago, will tell what they remember about the community from their childhood until around 1925. Additional history about the town in later years will also be presented. Others attending, who have memories of the town to share, will be invited to do so.

A presentation will be made by the Saint Joe News during the program. The "Distinguished Service Award," begun last year by the local paper, will be presented to the deserving recipient. Last year, Mose Yeiser received the award.

Though "history" is often thought of as "dry, dull and uninteresting" by young people as well as some of the adult population, the reminiscences often heard around town are both amusing and interesting. The historic program July 20 should be of interest to all ages.

Summer Rec'n

—Terry Kern, director

Despite the hot days which normally plague the summer, kids are still finding strength to endure. And that enduring is happpening at Riverdale recreational activities.

Soccer opened the summer, small in number but full in enthusiasm. The two teams captained by Bob Gettys and Paul Wiley found it close all the way with one team scoring and then the next. Despite sudden surges of energy in the last minutes of the game, the final score stood at 4—4. A second game produced a tie also at 5—5 with Paul Voirol and Raymond Miller as the team captains.

The first game of coed softball started off in a close battle, but unusual circumstances. A few adults were drafted in order to make the team more in number and the game exciting. Jodie Ault headed the winning team and Jim Bice took charge of the losing one. The softball game July 3 resulted in Michelle Freeze's team becoming victors by a score of 19—9 over Renee Chew's team. By far one of the closest games thus far took place last Tuesday as Jane Hollabaugh's team tied the game in the bottom of the third inning and came on strong in the fourth to put it out of reach for the losing team captained by Vincent Freeze. Coed softball is now being opened to those adults who have the time on Tuesdays and Thursdays between 9 and 11 a.m.

Kickball is producing some well—in—conditioned girls as the result of the many trips around the bases as the scores indicate. A 6 inning game July 1 resulted in Linda Koester's team almost doubling their opponent's score. The team captained by Jody Lepper fell with a 22—13 score. Lisa Parker was the booster for the winning team by kicking 3 home runs, one being a grand slam. Lisa Parker, Loretta McPherson and Michelle Freeze took home run honors as Lynette Longardner's team came back in the top of the fifth with 13 runs to win the game from Robin Loy's team. The final tally was 36—27.

With only a few weeks left before the tennis tournament, Rich Timmerman and Jeff Vinson are the only doubles team that remains undefeated with a 7—0 record. Jon Hollabaugh and Ron Eichel are close behind with an 8—2 record. Miley McNamara and Kathy Mack head the girls division with a 2—5 record. A tennis tournament will be held the last week of July and the first week in August. There will be trophies given for boys and girls doubles, boys singles and girls singles during the 12:30 p.m. and 1:15 p.m. classes. During the 2:00 hour the girls singles winner and boys singles winner will each receive a trophy. An adult tennis tournament will also be held in the coming weeks sometime in the morning.

Junior League

—Mark Haberkorn, reporter

The Junior League season has been one of high and low scores. The Tigers and the Reds are vying for the top spot in the standings with records of 8—2 and 7-3 respectively. Top hitters are Ron Eichel and Rich Timmerman for the Tigers, and Roger Voirol and Lonny Emenhiser for the Reds. The Red Sox have third place clinched while the A's have not won a game yet this year.

Work has the privilege of being the only boy to hit two home runs in one game yet this year.

Jeff Vinson turned in a pitching gem earlier this year by throwing a perfect game for the Reds against the Tigers. Vinson struck out five and spoiled Bryan Mansfield's bid for a nohitter by singling, and later scored the only run of the game when Lonnie Emenhiser hit one that was bobbled. The score was 1—0, Reds winning.

Jeff Edgar also had a game to remember when he threw a nohitter for four innings as his team, the Tigers beat the Red Sox, 6—1. The game lasted only four inning due to rain. Edgar struck out six and gave up free passes to six.

Roger Voirol and Lonnie Emenhiser also have a nohitter, collaborating on a 15—2 job against the Red Sox.

The Reds have scored the most runs in a single game as on June 10, they humiliated the A's, 23-11 with Roger Voirol getting four hits and batting in eight runs. The Reds got 12 of their 23 runs in the third inning.

In PeeWee action, the Tigers-Red Sox have won six of the seven contests.

The true essence of freedom is not in the extent to which human rights are exercised; rather, it is in the restraint exercised in pursuing those rights.

Dissent in a free society is like the cultivation of the crops in the field. A little agitation promotes growth; too much destroys the roots.

In unity there is strength; in diversity there is freedom.

Self-discipline is a matter of courage. Anyone can do as he pleases; but it takes courage to do as one ought.

Wisdom is like good whiskey. The best of ingredients are essential; but the proof requires age.

The dissenters of the 1960's-70's sometimes point to Jesus Christ to justify their actions, claiming Him to be the greatest revolutionary of all time, attempting by such comparison to give a holy aura to their own ambitions. They overlook one thing: Jesus did not force Himself nor his teachings upon anyone. He spoke, surely, positively, then left the decision to His hearers. Thus did He grant to all men the freedom God created. Today's reformers could well be admonished, as in the Scriptures: "Go thou and do likewise."

Failures are the rungs on the ladder to success.

Historic Items To Be Displayed

A centennial should have a display of items related to the community and individuals in that community.

And Saint Joe's Centennial will have just that, through the efforts of April Davis and Sharon Bowser of The Sisters' Emporium. The gals have asked for and received a lot of cooperation from various individuals in providing items for display at the Riverdale school lower level.

Anyone having items they want to provide for the display should contact the chairmen at 337—3535.

Interest Evident For Cen'l Parade

Any and all kinds of parade units, individual or group, are invited to participate and add to the fun of the weekend.

Roger Coburn and Jim Norris are in charge and should be notified of participants' plans to allow for provision of adequate and coordinated grouping of parade units.

There is no entry fee. The parade is a "fun thing" for the centennial.

Derby Race Open To Kids, Adults; Same Car Can Be Used By 'Team'

Fred Rayle and Steve Monroe have announced rules for the "soapbox" or "pinewood" derby to be held Saturday, July 19, during the Saint Joe Centennial celebration July 18—20.

The chairmen say "ANYTHING with four wheels and can be steered and braked" is eligible for entry in the derby.

And there are two age categories: 10 to 15 years and 16 to 60 years. Width of the vehicle in each class is limited to not over 36 inches. Length is to be not over 84 inches. Weight limit for the 10—15 age group is 250 lbs. including the driver. Weight limit for the 16—60 class is 350 lbs. The same car can be used in both classes. Thus a son or daughter can run a car in the 10—15 group and Mom or Dad can run the same car in the 16—60 group, for instance.

Other rules include:

Vehicle must have steering and brake.

For tips and help, contact Fred Rayle or Steve Monroe.

Registration is urged as soon as possible in order that race plans can be made accordingly.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

This is my card of thanks.

It will undoubtedly be incomplete and overlook someone who should not be overlooked. But since I coudn't keep a written record of all the kindnesses shown me as chairman of the centennial, memory will be relied on.

The centennial was a 'success', by many standards, as others have stated. But I look at it as a birthday party, and you don't have a birthday party and later say it was a success or failure. You just have a party. And that's what we did. And it was quite a party.

There are so many people who got caught up in the enthusiasm of the event without realizing what was happening. The parade in this little 'burg' was amazing. It was unbelieveable. And thanks to Roger Coburn and Jim Norris, it was the high point of the weekend, if you ask me.

Thanks to Forrest Bevington, for taking charge of the tennis tourney and to those who participated. Thanks to Fern Carr and Esther Haberkorn for taking care of the details concerning the pie and cake baking contest, and to Gertrude Reinhart, who agreed to help at first but then was forced to withdraw due to Peck's need for attention and care. Thanks to the judges, Ruth Butler, and Effiebelle McCann, for the help in a tough job of picking the best pie and cake. And thanks especially to Sandy Mafera, who broke up her lake weekend to come back and help judge. Of course, she almost had no choice. When she told me of her family's plans to be at the lake and said she couldn't come to Saint Joe, she asked, "Will you be too upset if I don't come?" I said, "No, I won't be upset—I'll just never speak to you again!" I don't know if that did it or not (I was just kidding, of course); but she came. And I think maybe she was surprised like the rest of us at the response to the contest—pleasantly and reassuringly surprised.

Thanks to all those who exhibited in the tent, particularly Frank Sechler who provided space in the tent for social gathering of those attending the centennial.

Thanks to the church softball teams for participating and for cooperating in providing umpires for the church tourney in the pattern set by our local church league. And thanks to umpire draftees like Terry Parris, Jack Frank and Rich Musser for the championship game.

And special thanks to Rich Musser, too, for taking care of the electrical hookups, a task which was challenging and frustrating. I am certain he was ready to "chuck it" one day, but he hung in there and "played it by ear."

Thanks to those who had concessions including Doc and Jackie Wertman who provided the dunk tank and gave the profits to the Boosters. Thanks to the "dunkees," especially Jay Loy who was the main target, and Pam Holman who took several baths when the bullseye was hit, as did Robin and Marty Loy and a few others I do not know about.

Thanks to Loretta Musser for seeing to it that the school was secured when I could not do so myself. And to the kids at the teen dance who responded to Loretta Loy's suggestion that they clean up the cafetorium and set up the chairs Saturday night for the Sunday morning community worship service.

Thanks to Bud Shockley for serving as "anchor man" for that worship service, to Connie Hollabaugh for serving as song leader, to the quartet and accompanist for its special number, to Forrest Bevington for his closing prayer.

Thanks to Doris Yeisen and Halphine Robinson for helping to get the carryin dinner organized and to Roy Singer for making school facilities ready and presentable.

Thanks to the Ladies Literary Club for its impressive display and to all those who brought items for display. Thanks to April Davis and Sharon Bowser for getting together an impressive collection of memorabilia and to Bill Hurni for bringing his large historic display.

Thanks to Sheriff John Graham and his staff for their cooperation and interest and to the Eastside band for its participation.

Thanks to the volunteer security men who guarded the centennial area Friday and Saturday night. They were Chuck Trumbull, Chuck Laux, John Sechler, Guy Mausfeller and Joe Robinson—and maybe a few others.

Thanks to Nicky Kuchera for lettering one of the street banners and to Mike Haberkorn for lettering the second banner and getting both put up. One took a beating from breezes whipped up by semis going through town.

Thanks to Roger Coburn and Jim Norris who did such a bangup job in organizing the impressive parade and to all who participated.

Thanks to the Junior League managers who set up two Sunday afternoon games after our planned tourney had to be cancelled due to rain.

Thanks to Jerry Markle who, though from Spencerville, gave of his time and help so freely you'd have thought he lived in Saint Joe all his life.

Thanks to Jim and Tonda Miller who volunteered to solicit for bingo merchandise and came up with an amazing total of $1,000 in such donations in less than a week! And thanks to Roy Eck of Butler for puting on the bingo night (he does it regularly for the conservation club at Saint Joe) and to Esther Coburn and Mae Ervin for manning the kitchen (or "womaning" if you prefer) during the bingo games.

Thanks to Knisely National Bank for scheduling its grand opening to coincide with the centennial and the same for the Lions Club and its ice cream social.

Thanks to Julie and Dean Mishler for puting on a successful beard and mustache contest and to judges Mary Beaty, Red Strombeck and Bob Garmater, plus Bob Wilder for MC-ing the proceedings.

Thanks to Loretta Loy for voluntarily taking the responsibility to see that our 22 water hydrants became amusing faces in time for the weekend. And to Loretta for volunteering to conduct an old time fashion show (which got rained out) and a talent show which then had some problems but went on anyhow, and for setting up the Saturday night teen dance. Her cohort was Sandy Leeper.

Thanks to Bob Snowball, John Whitehart and Bob Patnoude for joining me in presenting some listening and dancing music Friday night, and to those in the small but appreciative crowd who attended.

Thanks to Fred Rayle and Steve Monroe who tried to set up a "soapbox" derby race on a bigger scale than that which resulted; the same to Mike Haberkorn and Dave Haberkorn for the golf tourney but rain was a hindrance.

Thanks to Vulcraft for sponsering 40 radio spot promotions for the centennial on WIFF and for providing a flatbed semi for stage purposes. And to Phil Haberkorn who tried to present remote broadcasts from the centennial but ran into broadcast problems. And to WIFF owner Wayne Paradise who cooperated so much and showed his usual interest in the community and its efforts during the weekend.

Thanks to Glen Moore and the Spencerville Community Club for the use of its wiring and other equipment.

Thanks to Ray Foltz for his assistance and suggestions about our wiring problems.

Thanks to Bill Mansfield for setting aside time for an "open house" for those interested in the manner in which the town's well water supply is provided, and for helping to return items to owners when the big tent was dismantled.

Thanks to the firemen for all their efforts, including the waterball contests. I missed them and was disappointed in not being able to see the fun; the ladies were in on the waterball contests, too, and I understand Corky Hershberger may switch brands of panty hose due to the rigors of waterball.

A great big thank you to Superintendent Kenneth Cole who cooperated so tremendously in carrying out the school board's directive to make all needed school facilities available to the centennial, and to the board for its directive.

Thank you to the public in general for keeping the centennial area comparatively litter free and for respecting the property of others and the needs of the centennial area in parking matters.

Thanks to Paul Graham and the county highway department for barricades used in traffic control.

Thanks to the kids in the community who could have had some "fun" vandal—wise but did not. Your respect for the centennial and its preparations was noticed, even by "that mean old editor."

Thanks to the five lovely young ladies who added zing to the parade as Saint Joe News "newsgirls" distributing souvenir centennial papers and hostessing at the tent thereafter. They were Jan Weaver, Norma Beebe, Eleanor Koch, Nancy Haberkorn and Kay Bollier. In case any of you fellows didn't notice, their outfits were patriotic—white short shorts with wide blue belt, blue turtleneck top, red and white neckerchief and red boots to accent coffee-colored "Leggs." You can have your Miss America contest and your Miss World contest and your Miss Universe contest. As far as I'm concerned, Saint Joe had all of 'em beat for looks and tied up in one package last weekend—a package of five gorgeous girls with wonderful personalities to boot—and that's not intended to be a pun.

Oh—and thanks to their husbands (there were four "Mrs.'s" in the "newsgirls") for letting their wives take time for the parade and to help at the "News stand" in the tent Saturday and Sunday.

I know I'm missing somebody in acknowledging the efforts of so many; I'm doing this just by memory. But there is one last person without whom I would have been totally lost. I'm talking about Bob Stiver. He took care of so many little details, was constantly present at the centennial site to help in whatever way he could (even with a bad back). There is no way I can adequately express how valuable he was to me, personally, and to the whole centennial weekend — except maybe with one word — "priceless."

So, Saint Joe has had its centennial. And the comments heard since our birthday party indicate a general feeling of accomplishment and satisfaction — the occasion was appropriately observed and because so many people cared, there could not have been a better weekend than what we enjoyed.

I'm certain all those people know what I mean when I say—"it's a good feeling."

Centennial Observance A Success Despite Rain

Though a heavy rain fell for a while Saturday noon at the Saint Joe centennial and broke up the attendance potential immediately following the parade, general opinion expressed by those attending and participating in the event is that the endeavor was worthwhile and a success. 'Amazing' might be a good word to describe the centennial, since so many comments this week have included "I never thought....." concerning the enthusiastic participation of people from the Saint Joe area and from the county.

Friday's attendance was good and with Saturday's parade having a total of some 55 units plus a good size crowd lining the streets, it seemed like a really 'big day' was ahead. However, the rain started shortly after the end of the parade, part of the rain a heavy downpour for a few minutes. It continued to drizzle for a while, long enough to break up the number attending. Mid afternoon, the sun came out and a 4 p.m. church tourney game was played following the judging of beards and mustaches. The rain forced the cancellation of the Junior League baseball tourney. However, the four local teams did play Sunday afternoon to give those attending an opportunity to observe the young baseballers in a couple of regular season makeups.

Some 14 exhibitors had space in the 100x40 tent. They included: St. Joe—Concord Township Fire Department lunch stand: Brown Furniture and Hardware with a chair and croquet set drawing: Universal Tool and Stamping with a display of car jacks: the Conservation Club with a chair and gun drawing to be held August 10: Rainbow Farm Center with a display on fertilizer and chemical farm needs: a snow cone concession: Mid-West Softener Sales with water softener equipment on display; Maxton Motors with a new car on display: a Fuller Brush display by Bob Tejan: space donated by Dean and Julie Mishler for use by Cub Scout units: EHS cheerleaders with a pop concession: the Saint Joe News with a display of old past issues and a group of eye-popping 'newsgirls' serving as hostesses: a display of half-barrels from Sechler's with the decorative pieces 'going like hot cakes'; and a display by the Vulcraft plant showing its steel processing and girder assembling operations. A social center was provided by Sechler's with a bulletin board and a register book plus picnic tables and some chairs for visitors to utilize for snacking or just visiting.

Outside there was a kiddie game area operated by the Cub Scouts; a 'jail' in which unbearded men with no license to be clean shaven were temporarily confined, plus bearded men with no beard or mustache license; A flea market display by the Auburn TOPS Club; another flea market display by MM Denny Taylor; a tamale concession operated by Jack Bowser and Bob Davis (and they sold some 500 tamales by mid afternoon Sunday); a dunk tank which at times had a big crowd watching (the display was donated by the Oasis Tavern); a ring toss by the Butler Lions Club; two game concessions from the Chick Wagner family, who follow a summer route of fairs and festivals; a two game concession by Boy Scout Troop 192, operated by Kenny and Stan Mack. Kugler's pony rides; a display from Saint Joe Camper Sales who also donated the use of a fold-down camper for emergency purposes; a refreshment stand at the ball diamond operated by the parents of Junior Leaguers; a basketball toss by the EHS adult boosters; a penny pitch operated by the Hershberger kids; a display by the fire department of its van and emergency equipment; and a county EMS vehicle.

Parade Considered High Spot Of Centennial

Excellent organizational and planning efforts by Roger Coburn and Jim Norris resulted in a Centennial Parade Saturday which had everyone talking. And the talk was all of amazement at the large number of participants. Considering the size of Saint Joe (population 567 in the 1970 census), a parade with 55 units is quite unusual.

Following Booster Club President Ted Haberkorn's request to 'de-emphasize' prizes and stick to a 'do-it-for-fun' theme, in Centennial activities, the parade chairmen set up the event strictly on a participation basis. There were no prizes, no divisions, no competition. However, each entrant received, or will receive, a participant ribbon with the town name and the centennial years 1875—1975 imprinted on it. One unit of young people was reportedly thrilled to receive such participation recognition. The 4H dog club participated because of the 'for fun' theme of the parade. And others obviously were caught up in the spirit of observing the 100th anniversary of the Saint Joe community's first platting. Tears were in the eyes of one Saint Joe resident who said, "It's been so long since we've had anything like this." Another said, "It was good to see so many people here Friday night."

The parade chairmen assigned all units with a number, and numbers were placed on side streets on trees and mailboxes to denote unit positions. Sheriff John Graham's cooperation in providing an escort for the parade helped to allow the event to be run with virtually no 'hitches.'

However, the most impressive aspect is the total response by all involved in the parade, the willingness of many people to take time to prepare for it, and the obviously efficient manner in which Roger Coburn and Jim Norris set the whole thing up.

Centennial Publicity Brings Questions Of Freedoms

This writing is prompted by incidents related to the preparation for our centennial, including two or three comments to me concerning "not enough publicity."

Sometimes when it seems adequate credit is not given for some particular localized effort, and this may seem to happen with regularity, a person or a group can develop an "inferiority complex." I have on occasion thought that other news media have not given adequate coverage to events related to the Saint Joe community. (One exception is WIFF radio which goes out of its way to accommodate community projects regardless of locality—but I may be prejudiced in that viewpoint!)

This "snubbing" by news media has occurred often enough that I sense my own "inferiority complex" or "persecution complex" on occasion. But—I know from experience that the Saint Joe-Spencerville area often comes as an after-thought at countywide meetings on occasion—"Oh, and we shouldn't forget Saint Joe and Spencerville."

This has irked me, no end. And it did not help any that the Butler Record-Herald and the Auburn Evening Star (excuse me, I should say the "DeKalb Record-Herald" — Butler isn't big enough to satisfy the new owner, apparently). Anyhow—those two papers, while publishing a picture of the ribbon-cutting ceremony of the Knisely National Branch Bank at Saint Joe recently, failed to give the names of any of the officials involved; not one name was mentioned. It was almost as if the use of the picture and any mention of the event was a favor granted by those papers, suggesting an imposition on their space standards.

Here we have the chairman of the bank board of directors; the president of the bank; the president of the Saint Joe town board; bank board directors; other bank officials; representation from the Vulcraft plant; representation from the local Booster Club; and all the bank employees — and not one name is given — not even in the Butler newspaper—and the home office of the bank is in Butler!

Oh boy.

The photographer was given the names of four or five important officials involved at the time the ribbon-cutting photo was taken. But the names were not used. This suggests something other than oversight. It suggests an attitude, an attitude which is disturbing, if you want my opinion.

There is more.

I was aware that not much publicity was being given our centennial a few weeks before its scheduled dates. One or two comments were made to me about it at the time about "not enough publicity."

My explanation is this. With the recent Hicksville centennial, and especially with the Garrett centennial just two weeks before ours, publicity about little ol' Saint Joe would be overwhelmed by events in the larger communities—or so I reasoned. I purposely waited until after those two celebrations so that we would have a "clear field" in this area—or so I assumed. I overlooked other factors.

A news release sent to both Fort Wayne newspapers about the event, including a very brief history of the town's beginning, was cut way down. In fact, one of the papers used almost none of the information I provided except the dates, incorporating our celebration in an article which was more a general story of festivals occurring in the tri-state area.

The same news release given to the DeKalb County daily was not used in advance of the centennial. Instead, it was saved until the Friday issue when the centennial began, then incorporated in a story about St. Joe's 100th birthday with the credit for the information taken by a staff writer. (It seems that staff writers nowadays just HAFTA have their names put at the head of everything they prepare for publication, whether they have written it or not.) The article was a nice one—front page, with an interview with Lola Northrup who is our oldest resident—and so on, including what appears to be almost verbatim what I had taken to the paper in person three days earlier as "advance" publicity. But publication of the material on Friday, the day the celebration began, is not "advance" publicity.

Another thing. The Corunna community recently felt insulted by the manner in which a story was written about that community by a Fort Wayne newspaper. Corunna's upset was over the seemingly "looking down upon" attitude of the reporter preparing the story.

Well, I was upset, too, in our county daily's front page story in which the staff writer said: "Although softball and tennis will be going on and siphoning off interest, there will be a talent show at 7 p.m. in the Riverdale cafetorium."

"Siphoning off"??? Good heavens! Saint Joe has the oldest church softball league in DeKalb County. And we have had in the past, and still do have, church teams from the Auburn and Butler areas wanting to get in our league, if we can accommodate them. For 24 years, our churches in this area have been participating in the league. That's one-quarter of the community's "official" lifetime; church league softball is a PART of our one hundred years. "Siphoning off" is the reporter's opinionated and sophisticated—and wrong!—outlook about our centennial program.

As for tennis "siphoning off" interest, that sport has become a national pastime in recent years. Thank goodness for that—it's a lot better than watching TV. And the tourney was conducted during the week BEFORE any of the other centennial activities got under way. The tennis finals took only a brief period as the opening event of the centennial. And MORE interest in tennis by adults was promoted by the centennial tourney; they wished they had participated! And—the tourney was conducted by Forrest Bevington, a man who has for years been active in Riverdale AND Auburn communities as summer recreation director— who as a Saint Joe resident was also a teacher in our elementary schools, is a devoted husband and father, has been a faithful church member and Sunday School teacher—in general and in total, a person who has devoted efforts to guiding young people toward physical and mental growth AND a wholesome attitude. This is "siphoning off" interest? If it is, we need more siphons!!!

Another quote from the county daily:

"The concessions open at 5 p.m. tonight, and the excitement will start building in the hamlet."

"Hamlet"?? Why the "put down"? Saint Joe isn't a "hamlet." It's a town. From the Readers Digest Great Encyclopedic Dictionary comes the following definition of "hamlet": "a group of houses forming a small rural community; a little village. (Brit.) a village without a church of its own." It has been one hundred years since Saint Joe was a "hamlet." Why use the word to describe it now? Ignorance?—or self-righteousness???

There are those who will wonder why I am so upset about these seemingly little things — especialy after the way we all surprised ourselves in such things as an "amazing" parade of some 55 units—and a bingo night which had a thousand dollars in donations for prizes—and historic exhibits and crafts exhibits which were so worthwhile for those interested in this community and reflected a lot of preparation which said "we care" by a lot of people. Well, I'll tell you. The reason goes deeper than just a centennial celebration, deeper than just irritation over late and snobbish use of publicity. It involves the question: what chance does a small community have when it doesn't have its own newspaper—or loses the one it has had? This episode illustrates the fallacy of relying on bigness, because bigness may not have much interest in the small community. When a community loses its local newspaper, it loses part of its opportunity to exercise free speech and almost all of its guarantee that what is important to that community will be made known to the public.

With bigness overwhelming small businesses in recent years, with bigness destroying the local ownership of many, many community newspapers bought up by larger interests and made part of a chain, or the newspaper just goes out of business because of prohibitive costs and the public's gullibility in being brainwashed that "big" means "better," thousands—no, millions —of people are losing or have already lost their first line of defense—the smalltown, hometown newspaper—against the influence which can be used against their interests and welfare. What happened to Corunna, what happened in our centennial publicity in certain other newspapers is a perfect example of how "bigness' in newspapers leaves the smaller community at the mercy of, sometimes, the personal opinion or outlook or attitude of one person—the staff writer on the bigger paper who has no concept of the small commmunity's interests. We are considered rather "quaint" in our mode of living and our motivations. Too many journalism students have their noses too high in the air.

Modern journalism has tended toward opinionated reporting ("advocacy" journalism) and away from reporting facts. It is disappointing that so many young people in journalism place themselves upon a judgmental pedestal in preparing a "news" story and allow their personal outlook to be their guide. They are not reporters; they are manipulators. They use people, what other people think, where other people live, how other people live, to elevate their own position by the use of opinionated and inappropriate words to downgrade others. Either that, or they are too lazy (or too proud???) to use the dictionary occasionally to make certain of the meaning of the words they use—"hamlet" for instance.

Wow! A few words brought all this on? Smile if you will. But I have just been justified in my contention (and fear) that when you get beyond your own local smalltown community newspaper, freedom of speech and freedom of the press for that small community goes out the window. The community then lies at the mercy of those whose interests lie elsewhere and whose intent may be to present "the truth," yes—but "the truth" as they believe it to be. They are incapable of being honest in reporting facts; the facts must, in their opinion, always lead to an outlook or opinion in a "news" story. They just CAN'T take a news item given to them and use it as it is (with editing for clarity and unity).

When I started running this paper, it was the custom—an old custom—for papers in the area to exchange issues. The purpose was to give each editor an opportunity to pick up from the other papers those items which might be of interest to his own readers. When the county daily was under Vern Buchanan, outlying communities saw their activities publicized in the county paper—condensed, yes, but at least there was SOMETHING. When Vern died, so did the small community's representation in the county daily. The "big city" approach has prevailed since and that means "we'll do it OUR way with OUR people in our own good time."

Issues are still being exchanged. But it just isn't the way it used to be—and the public is the loser—except those getting the Saint Joe News because I still follow the practice of picking up items from elsewhere which will give readers a glimpse of what is happening elsewhere.

This paper was never perfect; it isn't now. But this paper, like a lot of other small papers, has given representation for the people living in the community it attempts to serve. You may disagree with the editor's opinions. But you can use its columns any time you wish to express an opinion, to report what you wish.

Though an accusation to the contrary has at times been directed my way (I had one just last week), I can honestly say that I have never knowingly or purposely edited a news item or news release or letter to the editor so that it said anything other than what the writer wished to convey to the public. I have never purposely left an item out of these columns; any omissions have been because of space limitations and I try to get it in the next week—or I lost it!

If big papers are more impressive, just because they are big—well, I can't do much about that, except sorrow a little — and remind myself that quality has nothing to do with how many pages are published or how big the pages are. My goal is to fulfill the old saying: "Big things come in small packages."

However, the main concern in my mind is that dissemination of information in this free nation has its grass roots imbedded in smalltown, independently owned community newspapers. Those roots are being pulled out, bit by bit, by various influences. And the resulting domination by "bigness" — just — doesn't — make it.

Letters to the Editor

'KUDOS FOR YE EDITOR'

Sharon and April (Bowser and Davis of "The Sisters' Emporium") want to say "thank you" to Ted Haberkorn for his realization the town of St. Joe was platted 100 years ago, and imparting this information to the members of the Booster Club.

We are totally sure there would not have been any 100th year commemmoration without Ted's alertness to and imparting of the platting facts. We thank you for being civic minded and a real do-er in organizing we other do-ers into a wonderful celebration of St. Joe's Centennial.

We would like to commend the wonderful people of this community and surrounding areas for their selfless lending of their St. Joe artifacts. The word "no" was never spoken! Our showing was an immense and delightful success. The reminiscing that was done as an article or picture was handed to us was heard and appreciated.

We enjoyed every moment of our collecting and showing of St. Joe artifacts. Thank you, luvs!

And an extra "thank you" to Harvey Carr for preparing many of the items for display.

On rare occasions (once or twice a contract year) the school authorities reserve the right to order a transport quantity and split the load by dumping a portion at the Riverdale School in Saint Joe, Indiana, a portion at the Butler Elementary School in Butler, Indiana, or a portion at the old high school gymnasium in Butler, Indiana.

The bidder is expected to give a single competitive bid price based on his terminal source price with the understanding on the part of both parties having potential in the contract that the price as quoted can be adjusted both upwards and downwards upon written proof of cost variation. The successful bidder will be responsible by contract for delivering No. 2 fuel oil from September 20, 1975, through September 20, 1976. The school will measure all tanks and notify the successful bidder twenty—four (24) hours in advance of the real need for oil. The estimated consumption of fuel oil in round numbers for the years described would be approximately 50,000 gallons plus or minus.

2. Leaded regular gasoline having a 91.5 octane rating or greater to be delivered to the 12,000 gallon underground storage tank on school property near the Eastside Jr.—Sr. High School in Butler, Indiana.

The school authorities will stick the gasoline tank and keep the successful bidder advised of the need for gasoline when the need is equal to a full tanker load, and the successful bidder must agree to make absolutely every legitimate effort to deliver a transport lot to this one site within 48 hours of said reporting of the need for gasoline.

The bidder is expected to give a single competitive price based on his terminal source price with the understanding on the part of both parties having potential in the contract that the price as quoted can be adjusted both upwards and downwards upon written proof of cost variation. The successful bidder will be responsible by contract for delivering gasoline as stipulated September 20, 1975, through September 20, 1976.

The estimated consumption of gasoline in gallons in round numbers for the contract period would be approximately 30,000 gallons plus or minus.

Norris Chapel Is Centen'l Champ

Norris Chapel II won the church team tourney at the Saint Joe centennial. The score in the fina Sunday night game was 13—9.

Newville UM had to play "catch up" ball early in the game and had tied the score at 5—all. But consecutive homers by Denny Zeisloft were "back breakers" and Newville couldn't catch up again.

Other teams participating in the tourney were Mt. Pleasant UM, St. Joe—Concord, Spencerville UM and the Lutherans.

Tennis Tourney Winners

In the girls age 13—30 group, Karen Sechler of Saint Joe won over Laura Bevington for the championship.

Soapbox Derby Winners

Entrants for the "soapbox" derby at the centennial included Derek Herschberger, Troy Rayle, Raymond Miller, and Shawn and Tim Rayle. Shawn and Tim participated in two exhibition races with offical soapbox derby cars.

The cars that were built for the local "fun" derby included those of Derek Herschberger and his dad; Troy and Shayne Rayle, and Raymond Miller.

The winner of the local derby was Troy Rayle; second was Dereg Herschberger and uncontested third place was won by Raymond Miller.

The entry fees were paid for by local businessman Mose Yeiser.

Tennis Tourney Set Up

Forrest Bevington, who headed the tennis tourney for the recent centennial celbration, says that interest promoted by that tour- has prompted a request for more tourney activity.

He therefore has set up a tourney for women ages 30 to 99(!) to be held at 9 a.m. August 11 through 15. Participants should bring their own tennis balls and signup with Mr. Bevington should be by Wednesday, August 6.

A mixed doubles tourney is also in the making for all ages. Time is 5:30 p.m., August 11—15. Bring tennis balls and sign up by August 6.

School Board Takes Issue With Recent Teacher Statements On Contract Negotiating Difficulties

A press release issued by the Eastern DeKalb Education Association representing teachers employed at the DeKalb Eastern Jr.—Sr. High School Butler Elementary School and Riverdale Elementary School recently stated that the teachers have been "insulted by the wage offers made to them by the school board," according to a statement issued recently by the board. The statement declares that the teachers made "forty-one costly demands to the board plus a demand for a wage increase of eighteen per cent for each teacher, when negotiations started this year."

The school board's view on the situation continues:

"On July 9, the School Board offered a settlement package to the teachers which included additional medical and hospitalization coverage which would cost the taxpayer $3,132.00, in addition to the $11,500 medical insurance cost now paid, plus added pay for teachers doing extra curricular work at a total cost of $21,910.00, plus one additional teacher aide in each of the two elementary schools, plus a guarantee of two days personal leave to each and every teacher to be added to their sick leave accumulation if not used at an additional cost of $3,915.00, plus job vacancy posting in all teacher lounges, plus maternity leave provisions in line with the new state law the cost of which is estimated at $1,500.00, plus guaranteed payment of severance pay once it is earned by the teachers, PLUS a wage increase for each and every teacher over and above what they earned in the past school year. This package offer was rejected by the teacher committee and a demand was made that the board grant a pay raise of 11% PLUS an increment of $205.00 for each teacher with a masters degree and $195.00 for each teacher with a bachelors degree plus all of the offered fringe benefits the board had offered."

The board statement continues:

"On May 16, the teachers advised the school board negotiating committee that if the board rejected this demand, the teacher committee would declare an impasse and raise its demand to 15% PLUS $205.00 for each masters degree holder and $195.00 for each bachelors degree holder. The last demand is 1% more than they were demanding on May 16, and it represents a demand for more new benefits than there is new tax money available."

The statement by the school board indicates that after the teacher demands were presented by the teachers' negotiating team, the board made a new salary proposal on a teacher by teacher basis. Pay increases in the proposal would range from 4.76% for a teacher with masters degree or five years training and 22 years experience up to 8.58% for a teacher with the same training and but one year of experience.

Under the board's proposal, a teacher just beginning his or her career would receive a starting salary of $8,270 with a bachelor degree and $8,650 with a masters degree or five years training.

The board also has offered all of the benefits of last year's contract including emergency leave, professional leave, severance pay, sick leave, bereavement leave and special leave for jury duty and court appearances. The proposed salary schedule is for wages for 180 days' work.

During the school year 1974—75, the board points out, taxpayers in the eastern district paid out $911,823.00 for teachers' wages. The teacher work day starts at 8:10 a.m. and ends at 3:45 p.m. Under the school board offer, a teacher with five years' experience would make in excess of $50.00 per day. A teacher with 22 years would make $74.00 a day.

The board says its increased salary offer and fringe benefit package, which the teacher's spokesman stated was "insulting, would cost the taxpayers over $72,000.00 more than was spent last school year.

The board has offered to increase its wage position giving the teachers more pay check money if the fringe benefit demands can be dropped, according to the board's statement.

The statement says that the eleven percent wage demands made by the teachers with the fringe benefit package would cost the taxpayers $152,350 more than was spent last year, and that is more additional cost than the school corporation will receive in state money to meet the added costs of everything including gasoline for school buses, heat and electricity increases and general operating cost increases.

Readers interested in seeing the teacher by teacher review of the board's proposal can see it at the News Office. The list is lengthy, having all teachers listed; and to pick out a half dosen examples might be interpreted as unfair by those selected for review. However, readers can see what was paid teacher by teacher in the next issue of this paper when the annual report is published listing all expenses for the past school year, including individual teacher salaries.

It should be noted that such publication of itemized expenses for teacher salaries is sought to be eliminated by the Indiana State Teachers Association, as stated in a recent issue of the organization's official publication, "Teacher Advocate."

Teacher negotiators appear to be functioning under close consultation with UNISERV, a comparatively new organization devoted strictly to teacher welfare. There is no comparable organization representing the interests of the taxpayers.

Freida Guilford Receives Disting'd Service Award

The climax of the program of Saint Joe history was the presentation of the annual Saint Joe News 'Distinguished Service Award'. This year the award went to Freida Guilford.

Editor Ted Haberkorn noted that 1975 is being called 'Women's Year', but Mrs. Guilford would have received the citation anyhow. The award read:

"In recognition of efforts devoted to the growth and development of individual knowledge; instilling respect in the minds of the very young for those in authority; for the further development of that respect, one for another, by granting authority, to those learning, in simple but necessary daily tasks and relationships; the 1975 Distinguished Service Award is hereby presented to Freida Guilford in grateful appreciation for her many years of community service as elementary teacher in this community."

Before the historic program began, a worship service was held at the cafetorium with co-chairman Bud Shockley presenting scripture texts on 'love' and co-chairman Ted Haberkorn giving a message on 'love' as related to the responses of many individuals helping to prepare for and helping to carry out the centennial plans. He noted that those who accepted jobs for the centennial or offered to fulfill certain responsibilities, or just went ahead and did what needed to be done, were saying 'I love you' in the sense of the all-encompassing love which God gives to all men. Such love is outgoing; it sees a need facing someone else and responds with the spirit of 'I can fill that need' — without expectation of reward or recognition, just the desire to help others.

A special number was sung by a quartet composed of Mr. Shockley, Allen Holman, Pam Holman, and Sheila Holman. Larry McKown accompanied on the piano.

Following the worship service, a carryin dinner was enjoyed and the historic program followed.

Flossie Mavis of Auburn, Gray Woodcox of Garrett and Doris Yeiser of Saint Joe led the presentation of historic information. Mrs. Lela Northrup, oldest resident of Saint Joe, offered several bits of information during the program, as did Pauline Baumgartner of Spencerville and a few others attending the program.

TO THE PEOPLE OF ST. JOE, INDIANA

As St. Joe marks its first hundred years of achievement, it is well for all of us to reflect on the community spirit and unity of purpose which is so essential to the maintenance of quality living in Hoosier cities and towns.

That civic spirit can insure a worthwhile future for this fine Indiana town. I encourage all St. Joe citizens to take on added initiative and constructive endeavor to preserve and promote the unique characteristics of small-city living.

You have my heartiest best wishes for a successful centennial observance. I am sorry that I was not able to attend your ribbon cutting ceremony Monday, July 14th, but due to a heavy schedule I had prior commitments which I had to honor.

Kindest personal regards,
Otis R. Bowen, M.D.
Governor

School Board Votes 'No' On Lights For Riverdale Tennis Courts

A proposal prepared by Dick Musser of Saint Joe for installation of lights at the local tennis courts hit a snag last Thursday at a meeting of the school board. The courts are located on Riverdale School property at Saint Joe.

Mr. Musser had met with the board the week before and received favorable response. It was requested by the board at that time that a cost analysis and complete proposal be given to the board.

The requested information was presented to the board Thursday and it appeared the way was clear for approval. However, it is reported that a last minute question about providing some funds for court lights at Butler to "equalize" board support influenced the board to back off on its favorable consideration. While no tabulation of votes is given in the official minutes of the meeting and the margin of decision is not mentioned, records indicate that the school board then voted not to provide funds for the project.

Mr. Musser had offered to provide some of the labor at no cost to the school.

Group Goes To 'Indy' For Meeting About Sewage Treatment Plans

To investigate the status of the Town of Saint Joe relative to sewage disposal, a trip to Indianapolis was made Monday, July 28. Town legal counsel has had all pertinent information given to him by the recently resigned town board president, and the attorney, Don Butler of Auburn, set up a meeting to get sewage matters in order. Deadline dates on preliminary plans and other legal requirements have not been met. No effort has been made to officially set sewage plans in motion.

A public meeting was set up by the Booster Club of Saint Joe many months ago to inform the public in Concord and Spencer townships through their elected officials of the possibility of establishing a sewage district to accommodate the Spencerville community as well as the Town of Saint Joe. The idea was favorably received as far as undertaking investigation of the possibility. But no steps were taken by the town board in that direction. As a consequence, the town has "fallen behind" in the matter.

No new or changed regulations were particularly mentioned at the Indianapolis meeting, other than the "permit" procedure for emptying waste water into rivers and streams.

Making the trip to Indianapolis were Mr. Butler; Robert Stiver, acting town board president; Joe Robinson, recently appointed town board member; Emma Frank, town clerk—treasurer; and Ted Haberkorn, former town board president.

'Scratch' Baking Contest Had 44 Entries For Centennial

A surprising— pleasantly surprising— number of people, including a few men, took time to prepare cakes and pies for the 'made from scratch' pie and cake baking contest headed by Fern Carr and Esther Haberkorn. A total of 44 entries was received for the Saturday afternoon judging of entries during the Saint Joe Centennial weekend.

The quality of the entries was obvious, with the judges needing two hours or more to pick the winners in the two categories, pies and cakes. Judges were Ruth Butler, Effiebelle McCann and Sandy Mafera.

Winners were:

PIES—Loretta Musser first with a sugar cream pie; Kathy Blaine second with a pecan pie and Marcia Sible third with a cherry pie.

CAKES—Evanna Keener first with a spice fruit cake; Becky Knight second with chocolate cake and Martha Haberkorn third with a fresh apple cake.

Following the judging, the entries were sold to the public with proceeds going to the Booster Club treasury.

Sandy Mafera, a WIFF radio personality, served as judge for the pie and cake baking contest. Though her family had a lake weekend, Sandy came to Saint Joe just to be a judge. She was invited to participate when she indicated a 'sweet tooth' for goodies during a radio interview with centennial chairman Ted Haberkorn before the centennial.

The next Monday, on a news broadcast, Sandy said that she just had to tell listeners of her enjoyment of the contest. She stated that it was so good to 'taste butter frosting with butter in it and chocolate cake with real chocolate in it.' Her closing comment was a challenge to those participating in the contest and it went something like this: 'The entries by the ladies were so good that they should never buy another box of prepared mixes again.'

There are two ingredients not found in boxes— time and TLC.

50 PLUS CLUB

—Galen Markle, secretary

The June 26 meeting of the Fifty Plus Club was held in the basement of St. Peter Lutheran Church at Spencerville with MM Page Hood and Sarah Amstutz hosting.

At 6:30 the group was called to order and after prayer by Harold Stiver, all enjoyed the delicious potluck supper.

In the absence of our president, Ida Reed, our vice president, Sarah Amstutz, conducted a short business meeting. She welcomed all present. Happy birthday was sung to those having June birthdays and their birthday offering was received. Congratulations and best wishes were extended to MM Faye Wilmot who were celebrating their wedding anniversary that day. Mrs. Amstutz then reported on the bake sale and Country Store at the Covered Bridge Festival. The balance of the evening was spent playing indoor golf which was greatly enjoyed by all.

The Sewage Meeting

Lest there be a misunderstanding about the meeting this week at Indianapolis about sewage treatment, the trip was NOT made to get some action from the state or federal government. A sewage treatment plant is NOT being pushed by the town nor by the state at the present time, even though two or three previously announced "deadline" dates in setting up a sewage treatment plan have passed. But — planning such a project is a definite "must."

The meeting was to determine if any changes had been made in basic regulations concerning the planning of a sewage treatment plant. A new agency (Water Pollution Control Division) has been set up in the State Board of Health. This agency issues "permits" to private corporations and city and town corporations allowing the discharge of waste water into rivers and streams. There is really nothing new in the sewage treatment plant program. There was no particularly new information gained at the meeting this week in Indianapolis.

As a member of the group which went to the state capital (asked to do so because of my past term on the town board when sewage treatment was a topic of study), I was aware that the Booster Club meeting of just two summers ago set up an opportunity to get things in motion about sewage treatment. If you will recall, the trustees and advisory boards of Concord and Spencer townships were represented, Spencerville was represented, the office of Congressman J. Edward Roush was represented, the engineering firm of Clyde E. Williams & Associates was represented, the town board was represented and citizens in general were represented.

A main point of the evening was the suggestion that establishment of a sewage district be seriously investigated, such a district to serve not only Saint Joe but also the Spencerville community and any appropriate area between the two communities. It was noted that only those properties within a sewage district would have financial obligations related to sewage treatment. This was emphasized to remove any fears in the minds of those in the two townships involved as a whole that they would be paying for sewage treatment for Saint Joe and Spencerville because the townships would be involved in part.

The reaction at the meeting was almost 100% favorable to the suggested investigation. Unfortunately, the town board didn't follow through.

So, what we had this week was merely a restatement of a possibility of a sewage district and an indication from the three state officials present that a sewage district could be the answer, but this is something the engineering firm must study and research.

It will cost some money to research the idea; how much, no one knows exactly. The expense would be toward study of a sewage district plan. But it certainly would not be the $20,000 or so which Saint Joe would have had to come up with about six years ago had it gone ahead at that time with installation of a sewage treatment plant. The original study just for Saint Joe cost $1,200 about eight years ago. That study can presumably be used as a basis for further study in the matter of establishing a sewage district. My guess would be several hundred dollars more (give or take a couple thousand!). But it would be worth it, if you ask me, to find out if we can make a bigger stride in sewage treatment in this area by going beyond just Saint Joe's involvement.

One treatment center for both Saint Joe and Spencerville would seem to mean a lower cost per household, but this is not positively known to be true.

If you think the district concept should be investigated, tell the board now or at Monday's board meeting. Or if you don't think it's a good idea, let them know. With grants now paying 85% of the total cost of sewage treatment installations, it is way past time to make a move.

But for heaven's sake, don't rely on the "planners" in governmental agencies. They are as much at a loss in these matters at times as you and I. Your own good judgment based on facts is as good as any official suggestions you might get from some of the planners. Fortunately, there are some of them who admit they don't know all the answers, and we talked to three of them this week.

The Booster Club had things lined up two summers ago. This time, let's see that something gets done. The potential hasn't changed a bit.

Jim And Tonda Miller Had $1000 In Donations For Centennial Bingo

LEGAL NOTICE

The DeKalb County Eastern Community School District, 300 E. Washington St., Butler, Indiana, by and through the Board of School Trustees will receive sealed bids in the Office of the Superintendent of Schools until 8:00 P.M. on August 28, 1975. The bids will be for: 1. Number 2 fuel oil to be delivered to the tank at the Riverdale School, Saint Joe, Indiana, to the tank at the Butler Elementary School, Butler, Indiana, and to the tank at the old high school gymnasium, Butler, Indiana.

The fuel oil bidder will agree to make absolutely every legitimate effort to deliver transport lots to either tank site within 24 hours of his being notified by telephone by the school authorities of the need for oil. All of the tanks involved are eight thousand (8,000) gallon capacity.

On rare occasions (once or twice a contract year) the school authorities reserve the right to order a transport quantity and split the load by dumping a portion at the Riverdale School in Saint Joe, Indiana, a portion at the Butler Elementary School in Butler, Indiana, or a portion at the old high school gymnasium in Butler, Indiana.

The bidder is expected to give a single competitive bid price based on his terminal source price with the understanding on the part of both parties having potential in the contract that the price as quoted can be adjusted both upwards and downwards upon written proof of cost variation. The successful bidder will be responsible by contract for delivering No. 2 fuel oil from September 20, 1975, through September 20, 1976. The school will measure all tanks and notify the successful bidder twenty—four (24) hours in advance of the real need for oil. The estimated consumption of fuel oil in round numbers for the years described would be approximately 50,000 gallons plus or minus.

2. Leaded regular gasoline having a 91.5 octane rating or greater to be delivered to the 12,000 gallon underground storage tank on school property near the Eastside Jr.—Sr. High School in Butler, Indiana.

The school authorities will stick the gasoline tank and keep the successful bidder advised of the need for gasoline when the need is equal to a full tanker load, and the successful bidder must agree to make absolutely every legitimate effort to deliver a transport lot to this one site within 48 hours of said reporting of the need for gasoline.

The bidder is expected to give a single competitive price based on his terminal source price with the understanding on the part of both parties having potential in the contract that the price as quoted can be adjusted both upwards and downwards upon written proof of cost variation. The successful bidder will be responsible by contract for delivering gasoline as stipulated September 20, 1975, through September 20, 1976.

The estimated consumption of gasoline in gallons in round numbers for the contract period would be approximately 30,000 gallons plus or minus.

All bids for both the fuel oil and the gasoline must be properly submitted on Revised Form No. 95, and the Board of School Trustees reserves the right to waive any and all formalities of the bidding and to accept or reject any and all bids.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Anybody lose a 2"x6"x15' plank? I found one Tuesday along the Chessie right of way next to the shop.

Headline: "DEMOS SPEND $6.6 MILLION IN CAMPAIGN. Seven Democrats already have spent $6.6 million the battle for their party's presidential nomination."

But somehow, it doesn't seem to hit the public as hard as it would if the headline was about Republicans spending that much.

The old line about Democrats having money problems while those fat—cat Republicans have it to spend as if it were going out of style just isn't true.

Incidentally, that $6.6 million was what they have spent—they have actually raised $9.1 million!

—Maybe that financial disclosure law I have been bucking isn't so bad, after all—if the public pays attention to what those reports are saying.

UNION DOUBLETALK: With postal workers now to get a $1500 raise in two years plus other fringe benfits (all of which will add to inflation), it is interesting to note the comments made by Letter Carrier President James Rademacher who said: "It is the best we can do. There is enough in this contract."

He also said, "We must realize that if we outprice ourselves we won't even have a job."

This is indicative of the self-centered motivation of big union leadership. There is not one word to indicate concern for the quality of "service" given by the postal department. It's all get—get—get.

And mediator W. J. Usery, Jr., said the settlement struck "a proper balance" between the interests of the postal employees and the American public.

Baloney. There wasn't a member of "the American public" in on negotiations; the public is never represented in union contract negotiations. In fact, the use of the word "negotiations" is tricky. "Negotiations" has an implied thought of give—and—take by two parties to reach an agreement. But when it comes to union contracts, the only "negotiating" is over how much more will be given to the union cause. Have you ever heard of a union leader agreeing to see that his workers put in an eight hour day of production for an eight hour day's pay? I haven't.

And to compensate for the greed of postal employees, the public faces a 12 or 13 cent charge for mailing an ounce of first class mail—while getting third class treatment.

You can't fight inflation by paying more money for less work—simply because that is what inflation is—more money paid than work produced.

What is extremely disappointing is that Congress now votes itself a pay raise and thus contributes to automatic inflation through automatic cost of living pay increases for itself. And Indiana Senator Vance Hartke says "We have it coming" and Indiana Senator Birch Bayh, who has harped no end about inflation, votes for the pay raise, too.

It is heartening to note that the loudest disagreement with the Congress' action came from a few Democrats who recognize the dangers lying in such self-centered action. But they are outnumbered by their liberal party members.

Pauline Baumgartner passed along a compliment to the town board during the centennial. She was impressed by how neat and well kept the alleys are in town. That's due to Kenny Roberts' periodic grading the past several years and an application of oil in the past couple of years.

A cheer for Dr. Albert H. Cox who addressed a recent opening session of midwest governors. He told the group that "politicians pose the No. 1 threat to economic recovery." He aroused the wrath of many at the conference by his observation that the "slow" but apparently steady economic recovery the nation is now making is the best way to recover and he criticized "politicians who want to quickly lower the unemployment rate." He said that if you do too much too soon, you risk another inflation or even depression. He said the governors should re—study unemployment statistics and pointed out that "hardship unemployment" is now only 3.1 percent.

Dr. Cox is chief economist for the Lionel D. Edie Company of New York City. So he ought to know something of what he is talking about—New York City is bankrupt due mainly to efforts to keep employment up. A recent article about that big city's problems noted that one out of three New Yorkers are "kept" by the other two.

Next November keep in mind from which side of the fence most of the harping about unemployment has come—the same side which constantly pushes for more government programs to provide jobs.

4H activities are about 100% good in their directing of young people in productive activities. But a recent news release makes me wish they had turned down a grant program.

The news release stated that Iowa, Michigan and Pennsylvania will receive $800 grants to develop and expand activities in the North American 4H snowmobile program. The funds are provided by the Ski—Doo snowmobile company.

I know there are a lot of snowmobile owners in this area and I know they don't like my outlook on the machines. But I still think there is more harm than good from snowmobiles and that 4H'ers could be directed in more constructive recreational ways than "developing and expanding" snowmobile activities. The machines are dangerous, they represent another use of fossil fuel which consumes energy and creates air pollution.

Snowmobiles have a definite place in emergency use during winter months when heavy snows can present problems. But as general recreational vehicles, they are to me a definite liability. We really don't know the number of injuries caused by the use of snowmobiles "for fun" because they are used for the most part on private property. But there are those around here who know of close calls by others or themselves in the use of snowmobiles.

Is it worth it???

As I said, I wish the 4H organization had turned down that grant offer.

A widely publicized news article a couple of weeks ago told of the fact that most Americans are "unable to use math."

A nationwide survey indicated that MM John Q. Public are unable to use basic math to solve everyday consumer problems ranging from balancing their checkbooks to deciding which sized package is the cheapest.

The survey also showed that men "consistently outperform females on exercises involving buying and household situations."

The director of the project said "too many students apparently fail to see the relationship between math courses in school and the use of math in everyday living" (adults do better than 17 year olds in consumer math).

I have a few reactions:

As far as balancing the checkbook, my problem isn't math—it's having enough money in the bank to match my checkbook-keeping.

And what can you expect when our federal government hasn't balanced its checkbook for YEARS—but our "representatives" go on spending like crazy. When I try the same thing, I get into trouble—it isn't fair!

On the point of men outperforming the women, I won't say a word—except that cartoonists have for years cashed in on the situation wherein the wife tells hubby how much she "saved" by buying two dresses on sale.

As for the students' problem in using math for everyday purposes—it's no surprise. The "new math" has been opposed by such as myself since its inception because of its impractical nature. And many educators are seeing the deficiencies as time passes.

Want to know where some of your tax money goes? Under a new law, each state is required to advertise its proposed social services program in newspapers every year. That means, the more you and I submit to the "opportunities" the federal government is providing, the more jobs are created for people to administer such programs—and the more people there are making a living off someone else in telling someone else what they ought to do and how to do it.

That's bureaucracy. That's inflation. That's thought control. That's more taxes.

If you want to see the "Citizen's Handbook On Social Services '75," stop in at the News Office. That handbook represents more printing by the government, more paper used, more drain on woodpulp supplies, more paper shortages, more cost to everyone.

An [illegible] about a school dress code problem in Pasadena, Texas, [illegible] how ridiculous government control has become in matters of local responsibility.

The school board chairman in the Texas city noted that "you can't ban girls from wearing pants when you can't mention the word 'girls' in the code. The same goes for boys' hair."

The public doesn't realize how LITTLE a school board has to say nowadays in how its school system is to be run.

An item headlined "Family Income Takes Pounding" mentions in particular "poor whites" in telling about the drop in purchasing power.

I'm as willing as anyone can be to provide aid for those who need aid—but the key word is "need." I'm irked at the emotional appeal in politicians' referring constantly to "the poor." What about the inroads into the middle income class (like us) where, as a self employed, there is no automatic pay increase according to the cost of living index, where there are no paid holidays, there are no paid days off for "personal" affairs, and so on. The self employed small shop keeper is taking a pounding, not the "poor whites."

Town Republicans Set Convention For Thursday Of Next Week

Local political activity got under way with Republican Town Chairman Jack Bowser issuing a call for the Republican Town Convention to be held Thursday, August 14, at the fire hall at 7:30 p.m.

The purpose of the convention is to nominate candidates for the three positions on the town board and for clerk-treasurer.

All persons living within the corporate limits of Saint Joe who will be voters in the town election in November and who consider themselves to be Republicans are invited to attend and help nominate candidates for the various town offices.

A minimum of 20 voters is required to conduct the nominating convention.

The process for selecting town board members requires that one person be nominated from each of the three wards of the town.

Ward 1 is bounded on the south by Washington Street (State Road 1), on the west by North Spencer Street (County Road 59 at the Enco Station), and on the north and east by the town boundaries.

Ward 2 is bounded on the north by Washington Street (State Road 1), on the west by South Fourth Street, and on the south and east by the town boundaries.

Ward 3 is an L-shaped area in the southwest part of town separated from the other wards by a line running down the center of North Spencer Street (County Road 59) to where it intersects with Washington Street, then east to Fourth Street and south to the south boundary of town.

The clerk-treasurer is elected at large from the entire town.

The Republican Town Committee was appointed according to law and Republican Party rules by Concord Township Precinct Committeeman Keith Crow assisted by county vice-committeeman Sharon Bowser and county chairman Bob Wilder.

The committee consist of:

Jack Bowser, chairman.

Effiebelle McCann, vice chairman.

Ruth White, secretary.

Roger Coburn, treasurer.

The town committee is responsible for conducting the town GOP convention and serves through the November election.

Town nominating conventions must be held by the last Saturday in August. No announcement has been made about the Democrat nominating convention at this writing.

Voting eligibility requires the voter to be 18 years of age or over; a resident of the town; a resident of the township 60 days; a resident of the precinct 30 days; and registered to vote in the town election only if the town requires such registration. There is no known such registration requirement in Saint Joe.

Fred Rayle Appointed To Town Board; Fire Hall 'Addition' Approved

At Monday's meeting of the town board, Fred Rayle was inducted into office to replace Dick Roberts who resigned as of August 1.

Town clerk Emma Frank said this week the board designated Charles Miser, a licensed engineer, to prepare plans for an addition to the fire hall. The town has some $12,000 in revenue sharing funds plus several thousand in the Capital Cumulative Investment Fund (cigarette tax) with which to construct an addition. Reportedly, revenue sharing funds cannot be used for governmental buildings such as a town hall. Therefore, the addition is being made to the fire hall.

Attorney Donald Butler made a report on the sewage treatment situation for the benefit of the townspeople attending the meeting.

The town board is presently composed entirely of non—elected members, an odd situation which would seem to occur "once in a hundred years."

As indicated in the town budget proposedd for 1976 and appearing elsewhere in this issue, the current board proposes to spend more money than ever before appropriated in the history of the town, utilizing an accumulation of Revenue Sharing Funds from the federal government and cigarette tax money from the state level for the proposed "fire hall addition."

Booster Club To Meet Wednesday

There will be a meeting of the Booster Club of Saint Joe next Wednesday, August 13, at 7:30 p.m. at the fire hall.

GOP Picnic Next Tuesday

The annual picnic of the DeKalb County Republican Women's Clubs will be held Tuesday, August 12, at 6:30 p.m. The outing will be held at the Waterloo Park.

A program has been planned by members from the Waterloo area.

Family, friends and neighbors are invited to attend the picnic. Meat and beverage will be provided by the committee. Those attending are asked to bring a covered dish and table service.

Trash Pickup Day Changed

A change has been made in the pickup day for trash in Saint Joe.

The regular Friday pickup will be made through August 15, then the next pickup will be Wednesday, August 20. Regular pickup day thereafter by Merritt, Inc., will be Wednesday of each week.

The 'Even Steven' Theory

I am going on what I have "heard" and also on a bit of direct information concerning the reversal of attitude by the school board recently in considering the installation of lights at the tennis courts at the Riverdale school.

The story is that the board thoroughly discussed the matter a couple of weeks ago when Dick Musser first appeared before the board to make a presentation. Reaction was favorable and Dick offered to provide some of the labor at no cost. The board requested a written proposal for its next meeting.

The next meeting was the following Thursday and the board again reviewed the proposal. The superintendent indicated that funds were available for the project and it appeared the board was set to accept the proposal.

Then, reportedly, a question was asked if there was enough money to undertake a similar project at the Butler tennis courts. The idea expressed was: if you are going to spend "X" dollars at Saint Joe, you must spend "X" dollars at Butler.

Apparently the question scared some board members off, because it would appear from the makeup of the board at the present time that anything related to Riverdale improvement matters would find a majority vote on the board. But if the board voted not to go ahead with the Riverdale tennis court lighting proposal (the minutes of the meeting do not record a vote on the matter, only a "polling"), then it seems that someone was intimidated.

Isn't that something? An offer of some free labor for a worthwhile project — and we can't have it.

This is unfortunate. It illustrates the narrowness which can appear in someone's thinking in school matters. It also illustrates that whoever was responsible for raising a strong enough question to sway the vote from "yes" to "no" had overlooked the fact that there are now four tennis courts at the Butler school and only two courts at the Riverdale school.

Therefore, Riverdale has two courts coming —but we haven't raised a fuss about it.

Perhaps we can take care of the lights ourselves after things are "equalized" in the manner in which one board member evidently approaches school affairs.

—Then there is another outlook—if we had two more courts, maybe we wouldn't need the lights. Lights mean energy use and that ought to be considered.

Question: how soon is the school board going to install two more courts at Riverdale to make things "even" ?? Perhaps we should offer a "thank you" to that board member for having brought the inequality "to light."

Letters to the Editor

Why do some farmers lose so many cats thru sickness?

From my personal observation and study of cats over a period of years, I find that the farmers or people for that matter who lose too many cats are the ones who think that a cat must be half starved to be a hunter. Fact is—they are too weak and don't have the energy to hunt. Whereas a well fed cat will hunt for the sport of it, will bring their catch for you to see. They very seldom eat many of them because they know they are not good for them.

A cat who has to hunt or starve usually eats too many if he can catch them and is soon poisoned by them without milk or other food to balance their diet. They certainly are worth a little good food.

Football coach John Fallis has announced the pre-season events as Eastside prepares for the coming football season. Physical examinations should be made immediately. Then August 12, at 3 p.m., seniors are to pick up their equipment with juniors to get theirs at 3:30. At 4 p.m. the sophomores will get their equipment with the freshman due at 4:30. At 5:30 there will be a practice session with no pads. A meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

August 13 and 14 there will be practice at 5:30 and a meeting at 7:30 both days. August 15 is set for practice at 8 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. with pads.

August 26 is the Football Jamboree at Leo.

The season opens August 29 with Southern Wells.

The season is starting one week earlier than last year due to the opening of school a week earlier.

A bus will run at all summer practices and will leave Butler one and one—half hours before practice begins. The route will be US 6—CR 59 to Saint Joe; SR1 to Spencerville; CR 64 to Coburn Corners; SR 101—SR 1 to Butler. The bus will also take players home following practice.

On August 12 ONLY, the bus will run following practice, but not before, due to the varying time schedule.

The junior high football practices will get underway when school starts, according to Mr. Fallis.

No Hiding From Hay Fever

Hay fever sufferers can't run away from their problem. If they're going to seek refuge anywhere, it should be at their doctor's office. Only a physician can tell what's causing the condition and what to do.

Hay is sometimes the culprit but not always. Airborne pollen from certain trees, grasses and weeds are what's bothering the sensitive victim—that's one out of every 20 Americans.

Moving to a different part of the country is no guarantee of escape; the same or a whole new set of substances may trigger the symptoms. Hay fever is actually an "allergic rhinitis" — a sensitivity to various pollens, found indoors as well as out. Ragweed is the most familiar offender. 75 percent of hay fever sufferers are sensitive to it.

"Sneezing one's head off" is the most common symptom. Others are stuffy and watery nose, redness, swelling and itching of the eyes, and maybe also of the nose, throat, mouth and ears. No fever is involved, unless the sufferer has another ailment.

Hay fever can't kill, but about 30 percent of hay fever sufferers develop asthma. Chronic sinusitis, or nasal polyps or growths can be other "spinoffs."

Depending on various factors and parts of the country, the "sneezin' season" can run from early spring to the first frost, with the peak at midsummer.

Here are some things that may help. The doctor can prescribe antihistamines or other drugs if he thinks they'll help. He may use injections that will desensitize against the allergen. Seasonal travel may bring "time out." Air conditioning and air purification also may bring relief.

For more information, ask your American Lung Association of Northeast Indiana, 809 West Wayne in Fort Wayne, for the leaflet on "Hay Fever." It's one of many services rendered to make living and breathing easier.

It's a matter of life and breath. Everybody's.

—from DEAN'S ENCO SERVICE

The contract signing of Joe Namath last week for $900,000 for two years of football indicates how "money" has crept into sports, making what was in former years a competitive challenge into a dollars and cents matter, for the most part. Of course, the taxes on that amount of money are tremendous, unless the salary is spread over several years, puting Mr. Namath in a lower tax bracket (which is a smart thing to do). But the emphasis on money does take a lot of the "sport" out of "sports." The true essence of freedom is not in the extent to which human rights are exercised; rather, it is in the restraint exercised in pursuing those rights.

Dissent in a free society is like the cultivation of the crops in the field. A little agitation promotes growth; too much destroys the roots.

In unity there is strength; in diversity there is freedom.

Self-discipline is a matter of courage. Anyone can do as he pleases; but it takes courage to do as one ought.

Wisdom is like good whiskey. The best of ingredients are essential; but the proof requires age.

The dissenters of the 1960's-70's sometimes point to Jesus Christ to justify their actions, claiming Him to be the greatest revolutionary of all time, attempting by such comparison to give a holy aura to their own ambitions. They overlook one thing: Jesus did not force Himself nor his teachings upon anyone. He spoke, surely, positively, then left the decision to His hearers. Thus did He grant to all men the freedom God created. Today's reformers could well be admonished, as in the Scriptures: "Go thou and do likewise."

Failures are the rungs on the ladder to success.

WITH THE EDITOR

Donna Norris passes along a "thank you" from the committee in the Firemen's Auxiliary to all those who donated pies for the firemen's lunch stand at the recent centennial celebration. Such cooperation is greatly appreciated.

—And it wasn't until after I had obtained the map sketch of the town for publication in this paper (showing the locations of the various businesses and other points of interest) that I realized Dick Witte's welding shop was omitted. It should have been included—and it was my oversight.

Incidentally, if anyone wants a copy of that little souvenir newspaper we handed out during the parade (with items from 1887), there are additional copies available at the News Office.

Somewhere I got the idea that school was starting the last week in August this year. But I was wrong—thank goodness—because our vacation starts this weekend and runs through that last week in the month. The next issue of this paper will be published in September.

I find it very difficult not to get aroused about the situation related to the current town board, the current proposed town budget, the fire hall, the fire department and certain of its members.

Here we have a proposed bud—get totalling some $52,000—that's right, FIFTY—TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS!—and not one of the board members is an elected official, there is no way to say that what they propose is a reflection of public will.

I know—circumstances made the current situation, but only to a certain degree. The remainder of the situation has to do with the people who were elected four years ago to do a job and all three pulled out, one way or another.

It's significant that the new big budget proposes to spend funds for a "fire hall addition"—and two of the recently ap—pointed board members are active fire department members. Of secondary thought, to them, is that the addition can be used by the town board.

As a resident taxpayer of Saint Joe, I can't accept the influence of sources outside the town board in decisions affecting town property. Though the fire de—partment is run cooperatively by members from Saint Joe and from Concord Township, the fire hall is town property, it was paid for by residents of the town and is the responsibility of the town board. The fire de—partment functions independently in fire prevention and fire fighting matters. But beyond that, it is the town board which has jurisdiction AND PRI—MARY RESPONSIBILITY re—lated to physical properties. The township trustee and advisory board share such responsibility in those instances of cooperative funding of certain expenses with the town board.

We need facilities for a town hall—and I don't mean through the courtesy of the fire depart—ment letting the town use a new "addition." If the fire depart—ment needs more room, then let's bring it out in the open and not be sneaky about it. And sneaky is the way it has been.

For instance, did you know that when the fire department made its recent public appeal for money to buy a new resuscitator, it already had the money? The public appeal was to replenish the department's treasury! And did you know that the chief stated the department "broke even" at its centennial lunch stand; but another fireman said this week they made almost $300? And did you know that the chief said recently (two persons have passed this along to me) that townspeople don't appreciate the thousands of dollars worth of equipment the firemen have provided?—apparently forgetting that taxpayers paid for the building materials, the township truck, the town truck, paid $1200 of the $1800 cost for a two way radio system, plus the cost of other equipment. The firemen (some of them) have given many hours, yes, in main—taining and sometimes assembling certain equipment. But the tax—payer has shelled out many dollars, far more than the chief gives credit for.

Why the "negativeness"? Why the misrepresentation? Why the reluctance to share with the public the financial condition of the department, when it is the cooperation of the public which provides those finances? It is not a legal requirement, but it certainly would help public re—lations to have an annual finan—cial report from the fire de—partment. I have suggested this to a half dozen firemen, but no such sharing has been forth—coming.

Frustrated? You bet I am—because three people, two of whom have particularly pointed interests, are now in a position to obligate the town beyond any amount ever dreamed of in the past. And it's proposed to be spent by three people who never ran for the office they're now in.

Before any of the firemen get tough at me—again—as they did a year ago when I expressed my concern about some of these matters, keep in mind that I am talking about ADMINISTRA—TIVE procedures, not fire fighting effectiveness. I have never said a word to downgrade the fire department for the protection they provide in the community. And — — some of the grumblings I'm grumbling I have heard from—firemen!

As far as I am concerned, the present town board has chosen to ignore past conjectural planning, has chosen to be influenced by ambitions related not to total town affairs but to one limited area, and a big bundle of cash is involved.

Crooked? No. Inconsiderate? Yes.

The tail is wagging the dog.

There were nine women who were installed at the ceremony.

'False Alarm' - Trash Day To Remain On Fridays

Apparently the announcement last week of a change in the collection for trash in Saint Joe was issued prematurely.

Clerk Emma Frank notified the News Office this week that Friday will remain as the day each week for trash pickup by Merritt, Inc. Though the town board voted last week to make a change, it appears that such a change was not agreeable with the Merritt firm.

So—Friday of each week re—mains "T—Day" for residents of Saint Joe—"Trash Day," that is.

Cross Country

The DeKalb Eastside varsity cross country team will hold its first scheduled team practice on Monday, August 18, at 6:30 p.m.

All boys in grades 9—12 this fall at Eastside who are inter—ested in running should report to coach Mark Bixler at the high school gym at that time.

Candidates for the team should bring a completed physical ex—amination form with them and should come prepared to start practicing promptly at 6:30 p.m. Physical slips may be obtained at the high school office any weekday during office hours.

Those boys who are interested in participating this fall should begin running as soon as possible on their own.

Letters to the Editor

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Esther and I are deeply grateful for the assistance given our oldest son when he was attacked and beaten. We also appreciate the volunteer efforts by some of his friends to locate the attacker.

It is gratifying that so many people called him, sent cards, visited at the hospital and generally provided a pattern of concern for his welfare.

There is just one thing. Esther and I would suggest that, in a case like this where there is a question about the seriousness of the injury and a question as to whether or not to notify the family of an injured person, the benefit of the doubt ought to go toward notifying the family. We did not learn of Mike's situation until 12 hours after the attack occurred. And even though he is "free, white and 21," he is still our son. A person who is injured to an unknown degree is not capable of exercising good judgment, especially when a head injury is involved. Parents (and brothers in this case) have a right to know what has happened under certain circumstances, that the injury may be serious. Mike's desire not to interrupt our vacation is understood; but he was "out of his head" much of the time due to the head injury and didn't know what he was saying. He didn't know he was in the emergency room for two hours until a couple of days later; he didn't know it was "touch and go" on his condition for a while, as a nurse informed Esther at the hospital; he didn't know what he said to one of the nurses in the emergency room until she offered to tell him—then he said no thanks, I don't think I want to know!

—Anyhow—while Esther and I were rather upset about the situation for a while, it is true (as Mike pointed out) that everyone was trying to do the right thing, but not knowing exactly what the right thing was.

It is obvious Mike has a lot of friends—a LOT of friends. And for this—and their help—we are very grateful.

Norris Chapel II Wins Church League Title; Newville CC 'Sports'

The 1975 season of the Saint Joe Church Softball League ended last week with Norris Chapel II the champion. The team had a 16—2 won—lost record. Norris Chapel had two teams in the league this year.

In second place was Newville United Methodist with a 14—4 record. Third place went to Coburntown I with 13 wins and 5 losses.

Newville UM was named the winner of the sportsmanship trophy, by vote of the other teams.

In the All Star game which annually pits the league champion against a team made up of players from the other teams, Norris Chapel won a close 4—3 contest from the All Stars.

The final standings were:

TEAM	W	L
Norris Chapel UM II	16	2
Newville UM	14	4
Coburntown CC I	13	5
Hicksville CC	12	6
Coburntown CC II	9	9
St. Joe—Concord	8	9
Spencerville UM	8	10
Newville CC	4	13
Lutherans	3	13
Norris Chapel UM I	1	17

Some of the changes in the league activity this year included the improved record of Newville CC with four wins. In the past few years, that team had been taking its lumps. With a few young ladies on the squad the past few years, the team had a rebuilding job to do. With experience, they became more than just "fill-ins" for the boys who couldn't get to games because of farm work. This year, the team became "spoilers" and surprised the opposition four times.

Going in the other direction were the Lutherans who had a strong team the past several years. This year, shortage of players and enthusiasm led to a poor 3—13 record, including a 36—3 shellacking from Coburntown I.

To review the past season and take care of any matters related to the past season, there will be a meeting of the Church League Thursday, September 18, at 7:30 p.m. at St. Mark Lutheran Church at Saint Joe.

Rec'n Program Termed 'Success'

—by Terry Kern, Director

Rich Noragon and Robin Loy were chosen to receive the Saint Joe Summer Recreation Outstanding Participant Award. The recipients were chosen on their involvement and attendance in the several activities held during the summer, with a good wholesome attitude and a display of good sportsmanship.

Several other participants were also honored at a recent picnic at Wild Cherry Park, ending the summer program.

Rich Timmerman received one of the boys' singles tennis trophies as the result of his victory over Ron Eichel. The other boys' singles title went to Mark Haberkorn who played Larry Gettys for the title.

In boys' doubles, Rich Timmerman and Jeff Vinson teamed up to take the title over Jon Hollabaugh and Ron Eichel. It was one of the best matches in the overall tourney.

On the other side of the racquet, the girls' singles title went to Jane Hollabaugh as she struggled to defeat Joyce Cook in the finals. In the older bracket, Robin Loy fell to the much improved Tina Miller in the final match.

Mixed doubles in the older group offered many surprises and well played games. When it was all over, Dave Charles and Tracy McKown came out on top. They defeated Robin Loy and Tom Gettys.

Of course, there were also the adult ladies' singles games. It was quite a family affair, as in one bracket Judy Ault defeated sister Vickie Miller and then went on to defeat Katie Laur in the final. As for the doubles, Vickie Miller and Terry Kern teamed up to defeat Katie Laux and Judy Ault in the final match.

Kickball for the girls also had its share of winners. The winning team included Tammy Wolf, Jodi Koesters, Lori Crow, Amy Laux, Jody Lepper, Michelle Freese, Nancy Lothamer, Diane Miller and Renee Chew. Their opponents were Lisa Parker, Lynette Longardner, Robin Loy, Lynette Parker, Julie Mishler, Melinda Koesters, Lisa Fetters and Tracy McKown.

Tammy Wolf led the tournament with five home runs. Game scores were 30—24, 20—19, 9—10, 28—8 and 22—7.

I would like to thank those people and organizations who contributed to the success of the summer program. To the Lions Club for investing in insurance for the children, equipment, payment for a driver and bus for swimming lessons, trophies and ribbons; to Mrs. Bissell for her time and patience in driving the bus; to Mr. Bevington for his knowledgeable help; to the school system for the use of the bus; to Mrs. Musser for her time and help; to Mr. Ray for his permisson to use the elementary gym; to Ted Haberkorn for his help in providing publicity; and of course to those participating and their parents.

Without this help, the program could not have been the fulfilling learning experience that it was.

Tennis the name and winning was their game as these hearty guys and gals took home the number one spots.

The older generation are winners, too.

Robin Loy takes her outstanding participant award all in stride.

Insurance Office, Law Office To Open At Saint Joe

A gradual growth in services available to the general public continues in Saint Joe with the announcement by Tim Kuker of Kuker & Associates of Fort Wayne that an insurance and bond office will be opened soon in a building on the main street owned by Roy Bowser. The official designation for the building will be "The Professional Building."

Legal services will be readily available in the same location as F. John Rogers, a Fort Wayne attorney, will have an office in the Professional Building for the convenience of residents of this area. Tentative plans are for some two days per week for the local law office with Mr. Rogers continuing to maintain his office in Fort Wayne as a partner in the firm Peebles, Kear & Rogers. He has been practicing law for the past five years in Fort Wayne and is a native of Iowa.

Mr. Kuker said the insurance office will be known as "Saint Joe Property & Casualty Co." and will offer auto, fire, health and life insurance, plus bonds. The firm is a member of the Independent Insurance Association, referred to professionally as "the Big I".

Mr. Kuker expects to have the offices in the Professional Building in operation by October 1.

The announcement of the new professional services in Saint Joe appears to indicate a slow but steady growth in community professional and business services, marked particularly by the recent opening of a branch bank here by Knisely National Bank of Butler.

Local Man Suffers Broken Neck In Recent Apparent 'Sneak' Attack

A Saint Joe man was attacked and beaten early Sunday morning, August 17, as he conversed with one of four young men in a car parked at the Oasis Tavern. He suffered a broken neck and a scalp wound requiring over 30 stitches, plus scratches and bruises.

Mike Haberkorn, 29, of Rt Saint Joe was attacked from behind at about 2 a.m. as he talked with the driver of an as yet unidentified car which contained three other young men. The victim said later that, for some reason, he turned just in time to see another person bringing down a jack handle with a two—handed blow to the head. He was also hit on the neck, causing a cracked vertebra and apparently on the back and possibly was kicked. He said later he could not remember just what happened after the first blow. He provided the investigating deputies with a partial description of the car, but the sheriff's office reported no progress this week in the investigation of the attack.

Jay Loy, a part time employee at the local tavern where the beating victim has also been employed in the past on a part time basis, left the place at about 2:30 a.m. and heard a call for help. Haberkorn was found under a car on the tavern lot with only his feet showing from under the car. It is not known if he crawled there to avoid the attacker or was dragged there.

The Emergency Medical Services vehicle was summoned from Auburn but was delayed by a train, it is reported, and did not appear until some time after the call was made. Meanwhile, Haberkorn was taken into the tavern. His clothes were described as "a bloody mess." And the local fire department was summoned for assistance.

Dr. Clifford Shultz of Butler was summoned from his lake weekend to the hospital to give emergency medical treatment. The victim was in the emergency room for some two hours. Several persons remained at the hospital during this time.

It was not until two or three days later, after swelling had gone down, that the broken neck was found in x—rays.

The victim was released from the hospital the following Thursday. He had gone to Lake James with his parents the Saturday evening before the attack and returned there after release from the hospital to rest and recuperate. He is still under medical care and wears a restraining collar to limit head and neck movement. The scalp wound is healing satisfactorily.

KONE KASTLE

DAILY LUNCHEON SPECIAL

Who cares? Because you benefit, we care.

We're proud.

For the third year in a row we are America's most efficient electric utility in power generation—an achievement based upon the use of the most advanced technology available today and the burning of coal.

At American Electric Power and all our operating companies, striving for greater efficiency is a never-ending process.

On the basis of latest industry reports, we managed to squeeze more electricity out of the fuel burned than any other electric power company in the U.S.A.

And the benefits are big.

If, for example, last year we were average instead of best, we would have had to burn 3 million more tons of America's coal. An expense of over $60,000,000 our customers would have borne.

Or, looked at another way... if we had been burning oil instead of coal, America's fuel saving would have been over 12,000,000 barrels!

That's conservation... pure conservation in keeping with Federal Energy Administration goals. When anyone conserves, all America benefits.

If every American will commit to conserve through the efficient use of energy... and if our government will make a full commitment to coal, our most plentiful fuel, America will have the basic ingredients for solving our energy problem:

Coal and conservation.

Together they can further our country's magnificent production record, which will make possible a fuller life for every American—especially the less privileged.

Show you care.
Join the movement to coal and conservation.

Lambda Sigma

—Meredith Storer, reporter

With the advent of the new school year, it is time to reflect on all of the summer activities Lambda Sigma Chapter of Sigma Phi Gamma kept busy and productive with a variety of events.

The members are getting very involved with plans and programs for next February's Province Convention to be held at Win Schuler's and the Marriott Inn in Fort Wayne.

Three workshops were held under the direction of general chairman Lyndia Suntken. Programs for the meals, etc., were constructed and name tags prepared. A band is being lined up and many events and raffles planned.

The International Convention in Columbus, Ohio, was attended by Sally Bercaw and Lyndia Suntken in June. Many exciting ideas were exchanged. Lambda Sigma was the third place winner of the membership drive. An award of $25 was extended to the chapter.

July 27 was the date of our annual swim party at the home of Renee Johnson. Good weather, food and friends were enjoyed by all.

A profit of $98.50 was made from the raffle of a $100 bill at Butler Days. The money will go toward various local charities. $5 goes toward the Muscular Dystrophy Telethon.

Founders Day rounded out the summer activities. Pi Chapter of Garrett invited Lambda Sigma to meet August 25 at the American Legion Hall in Garrett with other area chapters.

August 14 marked the start of our new season with the installation of new officers. Past President Sheila Holman presided for the ceremonies to install:

President, Sally Bercaw.
Vice President, Ginny Miller.
Recording and Corresponding Secretary, Lynne Bercaw.
Treasurer, Linda Kandel.
Special Service Secretary, Lyndia Suntken.
Ways and Means and Social Secretary, Debbie Miller.
Organizer, Deanna Jennings.
Historian, Renee Johnson.
Editor, Becky Leas.

The September 11 meeting will include a pledge service—and Lambda Sigma will be well on its way to another successful year.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

It's a shame that I goofed the headline last week about the winners of the sportsmanship trophy in the Church League. But I did.

It was Newville United Methodist who won the award. And it is particularly noteworthy because having a winning team in competition and still keeping a level head is a difficult combination to come by.

So—my apologies to Charlie Cole, Ralph Haines, Bill Sipe and the rest of the team for my error.

That doesn't mean Newville Church of Christ didn't have good sports; they did. But after considering their players, I think they ought to get an award for having the bench I'd most like to get thrown out of a game to sit down on — or with — or something.

—You know what I mean.

Speaking of thankfulness, as I was in last week's edition, Gloria Keltner, tall good-looker working in the high school principal's office, credits Terry Parrish of Saint Joe with saving the life of her daughter, Kelly. The 13 year old young miss swallowed a sucker part way at the Little League baseball tourney at Woodburn in July. Gloria tried pounding her daughter on the back but had no success. Terry saw the problem and stuck his fingers down Kelly's throat to extract the errant sucker.

Gloria said, "I'm convinced my daughter wouldn't be alive today if it were not for Terry Parrish."

Congratulations to Jerry Markle for his inclusion as an outstanding young man in America. The honor is well—deserved.

The main street certainly has been improved in appearance by the efforts of Lloyd and Marie Noel who recently purchased the brick building which formerly housed groceries, a drug store, "The Unicorn" and other activities.

The Noels have been repairing the brick building, including a major roof repairing job, replastering, painting and so on. The weeds have been pulled, the trim painted outside and attractive rustic doors installed.

Both have obtained auctioneer licenses, and I was kidding Marie about calling her "Colonel" from now on. She said she had already received mail addressed to "Col. Marie Noel."

In—a—word description of Marie—"vivacious."

Tom Parker, who has had his health problems before, ran into another bad situation recently.

He was mowing tall grass when the mower blade picked up a piece of fence wire about an inch and a half long and fired it through his leg. He received antibiotics and was immobilized for several days before the leg began to bother him. Reexamination showed that infection had started. So it took another stint of medication to cope with that development.

It was somewhat of a shock, upon returning from vacation, to learn of the death of Keith Davis. In fact, when I first read the obituary elsewhere, I did not realize it was "our" Keith Davis. It just didn't seem possible; I thought it was another person with the same name.

I talked with his sister, Lola Rucker, last week about his health. The last time I saw him was when we bought a used car from him and it doesn't seem possible, again, that that was almost three years ago; how time flies.

Lola said Keith had other health matters which brought the discovery of cancer. He lost considerable weight, it was thought the cancer was arrested when his weight stabilized, then he lost weight again and it was determined that nothing could be done for him. However, Lola said he kept on fighting until the end, even to the point of planning activities which he never got to fulfill.

We were not "close" personal friends, but I always liked Keith. He was an honest businessman. We bought several cars from him in the past, including new station wagons in 1958 and 1967, plus a few used cars. There never was any haggling over price. From the first time I dealt with him on a trade and he named the "boot," I knew he gave fair deals. And what he said was the price was what I paid.

His wife, Lillian, sends a note that "to fulfill the wishes of Keith, we will continue the 'Antwerp Ford Sales' as usual." I hope she is able to continue the business successfully.

Meanwhile—here's to a "good guy."

Report From The Fire Department

St. Joe—Concord Township Volunteer Fire Department
St. Joe, Indiana

We have been requested to publish, through newspaper and/or fliers, an article which will inform the public of our responsibilities as well as the responsibilities of the Town and Township. Also will be included a Financial Report.

As Volunteers, we serve without pay, at least as what we would refer to individual income. Many Volunteer Firemen in Indiana are paid a certain amount for every call to which they respond. Other Volunteer Departments employ a certain number of men to man the Fire Station twenty four hours a day, and Volunteer help when the alarm is sounded. This is not true in our department. However, we do receive $150.00 per year from the Town of St. Joe and $300.00 per year from Concord Township. This money is placed in the department's treasury and used to replace worn out equipment and repairings of present units. If you break this down, each fireman would receive $18.00 per year for his services. If each man accepted his share, it would place additional expenses on the Town and Township, but fortunately we have men who prefer to use it for department needs. If you were to check the cost of repairing or replacing fire equipment today, you will find that $450.00 does not go far. Our only other income (other than special projects, which we will cover later) would be from persons or insurance companies who appreciate our services and donate when we respond to an emergency or request.

What is expected of a Volunteer Fireman? We could answer by saying "Perhaps more than we are capable of performing," but lets go a bit further. With few exceptions, most people do respect the Fire Department. We respond to every call the department receives regardless of the nature of the call. We also assist other departments when the need arises. This is known as "mutual aid." We respond to accident calls, whether they be in the home, in a business, on the highway, railroad or plane crash. These may require the need for a resuscitator or use of first aid; your firemen have completed training for these emergencies. If you have never witnessed a tragic accident, a stabbing, a shooting or a drowning, we hope you never have to. We are on emergency service for severe storms or tornadoes and in the event of disaster from either of these, we have a tremendous job to do. In case of national emergency, fire departments are alerted and on the job before National Guard or other agencies are at the scene. Our nation is ever aware of the extensive training most firemen receive and it is becoming more and more mandatory that every fireman receive the required training if they want to remain on the department. After all, we don't take our automobile, TV, or appliances to our insurance agent, newspaper office, grocery store or druggist for repair, so why should you have untrained persons responding to your emergency needs.

For many years there was a waiting list for membership in a volunteer fire department. Today, it is difficult to recruit enough to complete the roster. WHY? Is no one community minded; the glory isn't there; application for membership too severe; required training too strenuous; responsibility too much; or can't take the criticism a few people are so eager to supply? We can't believe this. We feel it is a lack of communication and understanding for which we will endeavor to eliminate.

We are striving to further our relationship with the community by establishing a program in schools and PTA meetings. We believe this to be interesting as well as educational. A vast amount of material is available for this purpose at a "no cost" basis.

In addition to our regular business meeting (third Monday of each month) and a training session (first Tuesday of each month) we have a county meeting for all DeKalb County Firemen and a district meeting for all firemen in northeastern Indiana. These are also held once a month. Several of us try to attend these meetings as much information and new regulations are introduced at these meetings. Dues to the Indiana Volunteer Firemen's Association have been paid by the department each year and this amounts to $5.00 per member. The IVFA has qualified persons working with our State Representatives and have been able to save the taxpayer thousands of dollars by fighting against bills which have been introduced and would not benefit anyone. These are bills which you, the taxpayer, never hear about.

All equipment is insured and each member is covered by insurance should he lose his life while responding to a call. (It is not payable for death due to natural causes.) We were informed that as of August 1, 1975, this coverage amounts to $40,000.00. The premium for this coverage is far less than you would expect, and it is paid jointly by the Town and Township.

The Town and Township jointly supply raincoats and helmets, and this year have purchased boots. Some of the firemen own their boots and helmets. The dress jackets are owned by each member and the dress hats and badges are property of the department.

The appearanre of the equipment and the fire house is done by the volunteer firemen at no cost to the taxpayer.

The Town has a Dodge pumper which is on a lease—purchase contract. They own a GMC van which carries necessary equipment such as exhaust fan, power generators, oxygen and extraction gear. This van cost the town NOTHING. Through some department members we obtained it from General Telephone Company as a direct donation. Your firemen performed all the necessary labor and material to place it in operation. It replaces the ambulance which was found inadequate. The ambulance was sold at auction and the money was turned over to the Town Board.

The Township owns a Ford Pumper which was purchased some years ago. They also have a grass buggy which was built up by the firemen. They also have an Army vehicle which was made into a tanker by the firemen. The township expense on the tanker amounted to $450.00, about $300.00 worth of material was donated, the department purchased $460.00 worth of material and spent 1075 hours of labor. The grass buggy cost the township $400.00, the department $250.00 in material and nearly 500 hours of labor.

According to records, the radio system was purchased by the Town, Township and Department, each sharing equally.

Firemen are alerted by a ten conference phone service which is paid by the Town and Township.

We try to promote money making projects, some are successful while others are a lot of hard work. We tried beef raffles, 50—50 tickets and food concession at the St. Joe Days. We wish to correct an untrue statement of our earnings from the food concession which was recently published in the News. Since the bills were not all in, it was impossible for anyone to publish a statement of earnings. We received the last of expenses on August 20 (nearly a week after said publication) and after paying all bills we had a net earning of $130.40.

We are grateful for the success in our recent drive for a new resuscitator. The public response was great, and it showed the respect the majority of you have for your fire department. Again, to clear up another statement recently published which stated that we had enough money to buy it before we started the drive. The money in our treasury at the time was all earmarked for current bills or ones we knew were coming due with the exception of $100—00. This money was given to the department by a business in Fort Wayne in appreciation for the services rendered to a family member of one of their employees. We collected a total of $742.40 and spent $706.54 for the resuscitator and component parts. Again we thank you.

As of this writing, your department has a balance of $855.77 in its treasury. This total is the result of a lot of hard work by the men and women of the department, but we are proud to do it. In addition, the department also has $68.00 in a savings account which was given to us for a memorial in honor of our departed Fire Chief, Andy Monroe. How and what this will be used for is entirely in the hands of the voting membership of the department.

The fire barn is owned by the Town. The Township equipment is housed in this building and expenses are shared equally. Under joint contract, the Township equipment may be used within the Town limits, but should a fire occur outside the Town limits at the same time, this equipment would be dispatched immediately and any extra men and equipment would be called from neighboring departments.

Under Indiana law pertaining to Volunteer Fire Departments, each town or township served by a regularly organized Volunteer Department shall pay to the active and participating members a clothing allowance of not less than $50.00 nor more than $100.00 a year and each such member not to exceed $50.00 a year as an auto allowance for the use of such member's auto in the line of duty. This has not been done in our area as the members do not demand it. Again, this shows we have some concerned citizens.

We are proud of our Fire Department and are always striving to make it better, through extensive training and improved equipment. We welcome you to stop at the "Fire Barn" and look over the equipment that is there for your safety and emergency needs.

To the people of St. Joe and Concord Township, we thank you for your excellent cooperation and pledge to you that we will ever be available to serve you in whatever capacity it may be. We are always available to serve the needs of the Town Board, whether they be elected or appointd to that thankless task. If we should build a dislike or jealousy against the governing body or citizens of our area, we would certainly not risk our lives or work for the community as we now do. There would be nothing compelling any of us to remain on the department or live under such environment.

Again we wish to express our thanks, and God willing, we will be available when you need us.

—by the members of St. Joe—Concord Township Volunteer Fire Department.

Chest X-Rays Available Tuesday At Vulcraft Plant - 11:30-4:30

The Mobile TB X—ray Unit is scheduled to visit Saint Joe next Tuesday, September 16. It will be at the Vulcraft plant east of town on County Road 60 from 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Adults are welcome and no appointment is needed. The $1.50 fee now charged at the time of X—ray is supplemented with funds from the annual Christmas Seal campaign.

A report is mailed to each individual who gets an X—ray. If the physician reading the film decides the chest area is normal, a negative report card is sent. Any abnormality or pathology noted is reported to the person's family physician for medical attention. The films are kept on file for possible future review by the individual's doctor.

The visit of the X—ray unit is sponsored by and is one of the services of the Christmas Seal program. Other activities offered by the association, which replaces the DeKalb County TB Association, include a county—wide school testing program, education promoted on all phases of respiratory disease, and support of medical research in lung diseases.

County representation in the area association now includes Mrs. Sylvia Thomas and L. K. Mason of Auburn, and Charles Davis of Garrett.

Ag Outlook Meeting Set For Thursday Of Next Week

The annual Outlook Meeting of the DeKalb County Extension Service is one of the most important gatherings of the year for farmers, according to Jack Stark, extension agent for this county.

The wide fluctuations in prices, input shortages, rapidly rising production costs, uncertainty of the size of the corn and bean crops, and uncertainty of export demand obscure the future, Stark pointed out. These factors plus high feed costs and narrow or negative profit margins in several phases of livestock production make the 1975—76 farm outlook especially important.

The meeting is open to the public and will be held Thursday, September 18, at 8 p.m. at the Ag Room of DeKalb Central High School.

The nation has the smallest carryover supply of corn in the past 26 years. But 1975 corn production is expected to be substantially above 1974 production. The shortage and resultant high prices of feed grains has had a major impact on livestock production not only for 1975 but will continue into 1976.

How high will corn and soybean prices go? Will it pay to store grain crops this year? Should I increase my hog business? Can I afford to feed cattle this year? Have land prices topped out? These are the type of questions that many DeKalb County farmers are concerned about.

Ed Carson, Purdue Ag Economist, will lead the discussion which will include prospects for agriculture for the next several years. There will be a full discussion of the production and price prospects for the year ahead. Those attending will have an opportunity to raise specific questions.

This meeting is especially appropriate for farm operators and wives, landowners and representatives of agribusiness.

'Art For Religion' Competition And Exhibit Open To Artists, Poets

An "Art For Religion" Competition and Exhibit is being offered to all Indiana artists and poets by Bethlehem Lutheran Church in Indianapolis the first two weeks in November. It will be the 18th annual event offered by the congregation.

The juried show will be displayed in the Parish Hall of the church at 526 East 52nd Street from November 9 through 16. After that, the show will travel to several communities in Indiana and adjacent states.

Works of fine arts are to be submitted on October 30 or 31 at the Parish Hall. Poetry is to be sent to the church by October 25. Entry forms and information are available from Mrs. Roger Hunt, secretary of the congregation.

All entries will be juried on Saturday, November 1, by a professional artist and a theologian who has competence in the arts.

Further information can be obtained by writing Mrs. Hunt at the church, or by calling (317) 283—6559.

Another photo from Renee shows the DeKalb County 4H Dog Club as it participated in the centennial parade. There were some 55 or so participating units in the parade which was the highlight of the weekend due to the efforts of Roger Coburn and Jim Norris.

Temporary Rates Now Permanent; To Be Replaced By Temporary Rates Soon — Er — That Is - - -

"Temporary" mail rates were put into effect as permanent rates effective September 14, 1975, at 12:01 a.m., according to information supplied by Saint Joe Postmaster George Armstrong.

However, a new schedule of "temporary" rates is set to go into effect after Christmas and these will replace the "permanent" rates which have been "temporary" for about two years while a commission reviewed the Post Office Department's request for raises in the "permanent" rate schedule.

At the present time, the permanent rates include 10 cents for the first ounce of first class mail and 9 cents for each additional ounce or fraction thereof. Postcards are 7 cents each.

Thus, for about two years, anyone buying postcards has been paying 1 cent more on the "temporary" rates than was finally approved as a "permanent" rate. And those who put an additional 1o cent stamp on first class mail for each additional ounce were paying 1 cent more than was approved by the commission as a "permanent" rate.

The new "permanent" rates will be only temporary, however, due to the fact that new "temporary" rates will go into effect after Christmas raising the first class rate to 13 cents for the first ounce or fraction thereof. And postcards will probably be 10 cents each. These "temporary" rates will be in effect until the appropriate commission gives it decision on the Post Offise Department's request for new "permanent" rates.

No provision was made for any "rebates" to the public for the overcharges prevailing while the commission decided on the new "permanent" rates—a provision forced on some gas stations a year ago for "overcharging" during the gas shortage.

Lesson On How To Raze The Roof

A change in the profile of the business section of Saint Joe is now evident in recent weeks. Hep's Dairy Store, located on the main street in the center of town, removed the second story from the corner frame building in which a grocery has been located for many years under several owners and operators.

To show the progressive steps involved in the remodeling, which was carried out without the need of closing the store, The News mapped the accompanying photos.

August 14—off comes the old roof and the looks are changing.

September 12—the job completed and the corner has a "cozy" look. The work was done through Ed Snyder, Saint Joe contractor.

Teachers, Board Reach Agreement

The school board of the DeKalb County Eastern Community School District and teachers in the system have reached an agreement on a 1975—76 collective bargaining contract for teachers. Teachers ratified the contract Monday and the board took similar action Monday night.

Negotiations covered a six month period and utilized a mediator and fact finder from the Indiana Education Employment Relations Board.

The settlement calls for a 7% increase on the bachelor degree teachers base salary with experience increments increased from $190 to $203. "Increments" means that each year a teacher automatically gets a pay raise of a designated amount.

The masters degree base salary is increased 7.5% with increments increased from $205 to $225.

The news release from Gerald Goen, UNISERV director, states that "the salary settlement absorbs only about 44% of new state aid. The present ratio of salary costs to total budget is 60%."

The settlement reportedly includes provisions for improvements in the health and hospitalization insurance program; paid extra duty responsibilities; personal leave provisions; maternity leave as defined by state law; two additional teacher aides; provision for posting notices of vacancies; no work on Saturday and Sundays if a change is necessary in the school year due to emergencies; and payment of earned severance to the estate of a deceased teacher.

A provision for a sick leave bank was deferred for further study and implementation in the next contract.

Teacher association bargaining chairman Donna Hollabaugh is reported to have commented, "While the contract is not all that the teachers would have liked, we are pleased that the parties have been able to reach agreement. Teachers are most satisfied to see problems resolved in the area of personal leave, severance and the employment of two aides to provide more time for teachers to teach. The salary schedule is a start at building a schedule that will make Eastern DeKalb more competitive and that will attract and retain a quality experienced staff. We must continue to improve the total contract and are looking forward to next year's bargaining."

—that Eastside grad Janet Jones has been accepted as a student by International Junior College of Business in Fort Wayne. She will major in "secretarial science."

—that Senator Vance Hartke says that "Conrail," a plan for the development of all the nation's railroads, is a necessary step by government to improve rail service. Amtrak is another government program in effect the past few years to "improve" rail service.

—that a workshop on collective bargaining will be held this weekend in the House of Representatives Chambers in Indianapolis for all Indiana collegiate faculty members. It is sponsored by the Indiana Higher Education Association, an affiliate of the Indiana State Teachers Association, in cooperation with the Indiana Conference of American Association of University Professors.

Booster Club

The Booster Club of Saint Joe met September 10 at the fire hall for a regular quarterly meeting.

Secretary April Davis reported a bank balance of $4,544.07. It was decided to transfer $4,300 to a savings account.

A report was given on the coming opening of an insurance office and law office in Saint Joe. The offices will be located in "The Professional Building," a building owned by MM Roy Bowser. Years ago it was the home of the St. Joe Valley Bank. Tim Kuker is responsible for the insurance and law office venture.

Noted were the improvements made by Lloyd and Marie Noel in their brick building on the main street. Periodic auctions and a "Curiosity Corner" are planned for the building.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

Take note of the item in the "did you know thats" about the workshop for college faculty members on collective bargaining. Why? Because the workshop is being held in our STATE LEGISLATIVE CHAMBERS by an organization whose interests are not related to the taxpayers but to getting more material gain (money, benefits) for one specific group.

I personally don't enjoy the idea of providing a meeting place at public expense for a group whose motivation is selfish and will add even more to public expense.

I believe it is totally inappropriate for any such group to be granted the use of our legislative chambers. Those people will not be meeting in the public interest—it will be for their own interest.

I received a mail solicitation in the past week from "Classic Publications" in Covina, California, for a volume entitled, "The Breaking of a President 1974." Subtitles include: "Indictment, Impeachment, Resignation"; "Organized Crime Behind Nixon!"; "The Damning Tapes, The Resignation, The Criminal Trials, The Pardon"; and "The Coverup Trial, The New Tape Revelations, The End of the White House Gang, Behind the Rockefeller Story, The Final Act."

What got me was the first line on the brochure stated, "An Ideal Christmas Gift"!

Somebody has got to be sick.

Headline—"Assassination Attempts—Can They Be Eliminated?"

My answer—yes—when we quit "liberalizing" all over the place and establish the death penalty for those who assassinate or attempt to assassinate any public figures. And no fooling around with court delays. Set the trial no more than two weeks away, have the witnesses present to say "I saw him (or her) with the gun (or knife, or bomb or what have you)"—and plug in the electric chair.

Un-Christian? Yes. I don't believe in "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" under ordinary circumstances. However, the looseness and permissiveness of our American society in the past couple of decades has made protection of the innocent come in second to protection of the criminal.

Reason hasn't gotten through to those who plan violent measures to get their way. Somehow the fear of being caught must be firmly established in some minds. And for most people, the fear of dying is an influence in averting wrongdoing.

Our system of law has deteriorated to the point where technical points of law override the carrying out of justice.

Item from "Hoosier Farmer"—
"Converters may start fires: catalytic converters on 1975 cars or pickups could be a fire hazard in dry pastures or stubble fields. In tests, converter temperatures reached nearly 1,000 degrees F. when an auto engine was operated under full load. Engineers say a converter that hot could ignite dry grass, stubble, or other flammable substances."

—I wonder what it does to blacktop roads ??

There are probably those who are getting tired of the "feud" between the town board and the fire department on one side, and me on the other. However, there are statements being made in public places which must be clarified and explained—or refuted! I don't mind getting blamed for what I said or did; it's getting blamed for what I DIDN'T say or DIDN'T do which gets under my skin.

Last week, a letter was published, or rather an article was published, from the fire department. But if I had to prove it came from the fire department, I couldn't. Why? Number one — the article was stuck in my door so I don't know who brought it. Since I was not in when it was delivered, the deliverer can't be blamed for that. But I didn't get a phone call or any other message from anyone who wished to make certain that the article was received. Number 2 — there is no signature attached to the article, only the words, "By the members of St. Joe—Concord Twsp. Volunteer Fire Dept." There was no indication in the article that the fire department as a whole had authorized the article. So I, along with readers of this paper, must assume that the members of the fire department knew about the letter before it was published and agreed with it — but I can't prove it.

The letter was lengthy, but I published every bit of it. Technically, I could have thrown it out, since there was no identification. But that would have made matters worse. And I hope it helped to print the article, because it contained information which has already been passed along to the public by this paper. Some of the article was unnecessary in my opinion for that reason. But it appears that there are some — not all, I said "some" — of the members of the department who just cannot admit that The News has informed the public correctly on the relationship of the department to the town and township.

The information about what a volunteer is and how much the department receives from the town and township has been in this paper before. The services which the department offers were listed in the article and this is OK because a lot of people probably don't realize how much assistance they can get from the local fire department other than fighting fires.

The lack of a full roster of members was noted, and one of the suggestions for the apparent lack of enthusiasm was "responsibility too much or can't take the criticism a few people are so eager to supply." I presume that point was in reference to my statements about the department in the past regarding matters OTHER than fire protection. Reading between the lines, I get the message that I am one of the "few people" who are so "eager to criticize." I would point out that during my time on the town board, a story that I "heard" occasionally was that the town didn't do anything for the fire department; but no one came to board meetings to present any requests. They just talked about the board negatively in other places. It was during that time that a letter was sent to the fire department inviting them to present their needs at any time for the board's consideration. And for the past three years, the board has had a president "close" to the firemen. So, it is difficult to understand why the town is still criticized, according to information given me by those who have heard such remarks.

As for the educational efforts of the department, didn't I have a brief editorial not too many weeks ago pointing out the constructive results from the firemen's showing of a movie at the school? Talk about someone "eager to criticize"!!!

One point in last week's article which rubbed me the wrong way was the statement that the Indiana Volunteer Firemen's Association has "qualified persons" working with our State Representatives to oppose bills which could cost taxpayers "thousands of dollars." I'd like to know what bills were fought successfully; no example was given. But I do know from the publicity about the matter that firemen and policemen have been pushing to get increased pension benefits. And because of the pension program already in effect, many cities are facing a financial crisis in providing for the pension program forced on them by state legislation. It is a fact, as reported by the wire services in the past week, that it is possible at the present time for a fireman or a policeman to retire at the age of 41! That's ridiculous. And we wonder why we have inflation!

Easy now — I know our fire department is not involved in that situation as a volunteer unit. But — I want to keep things straight in that firemen and policemen working with the legislature have COST the taxpayers thousands of dollars and could cost even more if present efforts are successful in pension matters. The appropriate word is "lobbyists" and lobbyists don't work for the taxpayer; they work for the group they represent.

The description of equipment has appeared in this paper before, some of it only a matter of weeks ago when a series of articles was run, written by Guy Mausteller. And I have acknowledged, as recently as August 14, 1975, that many hours are donated by some firemen in providing and maintaining some of the equipment.

The fact that an unneeded ambulance was sold at auction and the money turned over to the town board doesn't change the fact that Saint Joe'ers did not know it was for sale. And any property owned by a taxing unit must be sold by bid after public notice is given. Trustee Merlin Simanton sold a tanker a few months ago to the highest bidder after giving public notice of such proposed sale. The ambulance was sold at the Butler firemen's auction, but no one around here knew about it, generally speaking. That is one of the "administrative matters" I have had in mind when I have expressed disagreement with the manner in which certain things are done in the fire department.

Incidentally, I wasn't too well liked when I (as did some others) expressed the view that the ambulance was a waste of time and space. The firemen put in hours and hours getting it all dolled up; then it gets sold at auction and we don't even know how much it brought or have a chance to buy it.

The two-way radio system was purchased jointly, as the article stated. And I have stated that fact in the past. Why did it need repeating???

Concerning the drive for funds for a new resuscitator, I again go to comments made to me recently by the fire chief including: "We've had the resuscitator ordered for a year." And at least one other fireman had told me that "actually we already have the money — we want to replace the cost of the resuscitator to build up the treasury."

Is there anything wrong in that? No. But why deceive the public when the public has always been ready to respond to a need? If the department now has $855.77 in its treasury, even after the resuscitator is paid for, it appears that the department DID have the money at the start. This is what I stated August 14, 1975. Why the upset???

Again on the money subject. If I published an "untrue statement" about the department's profits from the town centennial, it's not my fault. A fireman had told a recent meeting of the Booster Club that "about $300" was made, and this is what I stated recently. If the actual profit was $130.40, fine. But it is still a fact that on the Sunday night which closed the centennial and on a trip to Indianapolis on the sewage matter, the chief of the department said, "We about broke even — we didn't lose any money, but we didn't make any, either." I consider $130.40 as "making money."

Incidentally, I wonder if the firemen were told that when I asked a department member how they did at their raffle at Spencerville's Covered Bridge Festival, the answer was, "Usually we make $200 or $300. This year we only made about $85." I said, "Well then, tear up the bill for the raffle tickets; I'll donate 'em." (Isn't that typical of someone "eager to criticize" or who is "riding the fire department"???)

Concerning the clothing allowance, the article leads the reader to believe that the fire department hasn't "demanded" such monies. This simply is not true. When I was on the town board, fire department officers requested and got from the state copies of state law concerning such allowances plus a letter from a state official, to point out that the payment was mandatory.

Ever since, I have been aware that some firemen "hate my guts" because they didn't get that money. But consider the following:

The town board composed of Maurice Kline, Ralph Keeler and the late Cliff Billow refused to include such an allowance in the town budget as too costly. So, the board composed of Jack Bowser, Lynn Lake and I did not put it in the budget either. This is a case of State Legislators obligating a town financially and denying the town officials the privilege of determining themselves whether or not such an expense is needed. Most damages are covered by insurance, and it has been the opinion of recent town boards that a clothing allowance or any other allowance is unnecessary and inappropriate for such a small community and for anyone who functions in the true sense of the word "volunteer."

I don't know why the matter was mentioned in last week's article, except to put town officials on the spot and to gain public sympathy for "concerned" firemen who haven't "demanded" the allowances. Quite possibly some of the firemen don't know that a demand HAS been made in the past.

If the town were to pay the clothing and mileage allowances, it would raise the town tax rate approximately 25 cents per $100 assessed value for its share of the department members' allowances. That means higher taxes to hand out some money to those who seldom, if ever, have any loss uncovered by insurance. As for the mileage allowance, I didn't think anyone who wanted to be a volunteer fireman would ever have such a thought as "Hey, how about getting me some gas money?" As far as I know, none have. But the writer of last week's article brought the matter up to make some sort of point.

"We are proud of our Fire Dept.," said the article. So am I, and I have complimented the department's protection for the community from time to time in the past. However, any positive and complimentary remarks which I have made have been quickly forgotten, to all appearances. And personalities rather than factual occurrences have clouded my right of free speech, my right to express an opinion without malice, and my responsibility to inform the public. Too many people are being misled by what a few THINK I said. And some firemen are getting upset because of what I say without their reading carefully to make certain I said what they THINK I said.

You know who said it when I express an opinion or state a fact in this column. But the firemen hide behind anonymity (don't sign their names) when taking "pot shots" at the editor through false accusations or misrepresentations.

And, overlooked is the fact that, as a resident of Saint Joe for 28 years, as a taxpayer in the town, as one who values greatly the friendship AND RESPECT of others in this community, it is disappointing to feel the coolness and unresponsive glances of those also residing in this community; I like to be "liked" as much as anyone else, but not at the price of silence when something should be said.

Fulfilling an editor's responsibility is not always pleasant, believe me. Nor is an editor's family immune from the unfortunate conflicts which occur.

I have never, in this paper, ever described the efforts of the fire department in an uncomplimentary way when describing the protection given Saint Joe and Concord Township.

Next week: "That paper is full of b— s—!"

It Took Manpower-Horsepower For Old-Time Fire Run

In the "good old days," fire fighting involved manpower, as it still does. But that manpower was also "horsepower," as shown in the photo at right, provided by Doris Yeiser from a collection of old photos from Nancy Coburn who now resides in Fort Wayne.

In what was obviously a practice run "for fun"—they didn't wear "Sunday best" to fires even in the "good old days"—members of the local fire department are shown pulling the "fire engine" down a Saint Joe street—probably in the 1920's.

Public Asked To Give PO Service Ideas

On October 1, post offices across the country, including those at Saint Joe and Spencerville, will launch a nw program designed to solve any problems the public may have with their mail service.

A "Consumer Service Card" will be available upon request at all post offices, the card to be used to register any compaints, suggestions and inquiries from consumers—as well as any compliments the public may have. The purpose is to encourage the public to let the postal department know what their mail problems are. It is hoped that dissatisfied customers can be turned into satisfied customers.

The program was tested in the spring of this year in four states —Arizona, Illinois, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. It is reported to have been "highly successful." The program is reported to eliminate a lot of "unnecessary paperwork" and allows the department to "get right to the heart of the matter and concentrate our attention on improving service."

The Service Card will be available in post office lobbies and from rural carriers in this area.

UF Campaign October 6-18

Eastsile Campaign Chairman Jack Bercaw has announced that October 6—18 has been designated as the fund drive period for the United Fund of DeKalb County.

As in the past few years, the county is divided into three areas according to school district boundaries. Before that and for several years, there were six areas in the county, including the Riverdale area, which set up their own local soliciting committees.

This year's goal for the East-side area is $11,279. These funds will help to support the Salvation Army, Cerebral Palsy, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Pre—school for the Handicapped, DeKalb Cancer Association, DeKalb Heart Association, Mental Health Association, Red Cross, YMCA, Wee Haven School For Retarded Children and USO.

Girl Scouts from Saint Joe, Spencerville and Butler will be helping the drive this year by making posters and distributing collection cannisters at the Saint Joe and Butler branches of Knisely National Bank and other business places for the benefit of those who might not be solicited through personal contact.

It is hoped that everyone will give their fair share this year so that the campaign will be a success and these worthwhile organizations can continue the services they provide.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

The matter of credibility of information in this paper is an important one to this community, as is the case of every newspaper in every community. I don't deny that wrong information has been published here. But, it has been obtained from other parties much of the time, and I go on the assumption that I can believe what someone tells me—until an obvious confliet comes up from two or more sources of information. Even the report of our son's recent beating apparently had some errors in it—but they were of exact details, not of what had occurred in total.

A few local citizens "enjoyed" being an audience to a rather heated discussion I had on a recent Saturday with town board president Bob Stiver. It began when I expressed disappointment that he had described the Saint Joe News as being full of "b—s—" to a Saint Joe resident, according to a statement made to me by the resident's wife.

Bob said I didn't take time to find out the facts before I put something in the paper. It's strange; that's exactly the same criticism I have about the town board in its activities in certain matters.

Unfortunately the situation included the fact that the Saint Joe resident had not read my comments correctly; he had interpreted my reference to the present "unelected" board members as meaning they do not have any authority. They do, as much as any elected member.

Bob said I should come to town board meetings and express my opinions. I said I had expressed them several times in this paper (relative to a new town hall) and that I had attended a couple of town board meetings in the past at which I made some suggestions about the matter. This was before he was appointed to the board; but one of those occasions was reported in this paper, and he gets the paper. I also said the hush—hush tones with which board members conversed when I did attend another meeting gave me the impression my presence was was not exactly welcomed. Just by coincidence, two residents of Saint Joe expressed the same feeling to me this week about attending town board meetings—and THEY brought the matter up—I didn't.

Bob said I had said the taxpayers in town had paid for the antenna, radios and everything in the two way radio system now used by the fire department. I said I never made any such statement. He then backed off and admitted the article said town taxpayers paid part of the bill, which is correct (check the August 14 issue). But—his original criticism was that I said the town paid ALL the bill. How many people heard that incorrect assertion before he and I talked about it???

Who doesn't check first to make certain information and comments are correct???

Bob was joined by recently appointed board member Fred Rayle in the criticism that I hadn't said anything good about the board for six months or a year. I offer the following quotations to refute that statement:

From the August 7, 1975, issue: a compliment from Pauline Baumgartner of Spencerville on the excellent upkeep of town alleys, reported in this column. (I could have conveniently "forgotten" to report it.)

From the July 17, 1975, issue: "There is nothing personal intended by these remarks (criticism of the manner in which certain town affairs have been handled). The remaining board member (Mr. Stiver) has been 'running his tail off' in recent weeks because of the responsibility dropped on his shoulders . . . ."

From the June 19, 1975, issue: "Quite a bit of street maintenance is going on now . . . The town board is also installing new sidewalk on School Street . . . ."

From the same issue, in an editorial about the Hud "flood" prone area" situation for Saint Joe:

". . . . I support the town board in this action (passing a zoning ordinance) only in the sense that such passage is a 'protection' against a more trying situation later on." The board had already directed the town attorney to file an appeal against HUD's arbitrary action.

From the July 17, 1975, issue: ". . . There have been some accomplishments in the past three and a half years—the purchase of a needed new drain rooter, street improvement, . . . leasing and improving the bus barn for storage and perhaps other purposes, making two lots available for the new branch bank." (The two lots were purchased by the town while I was board president, as a move toward future needs at that time related to a new town hall.)

Both Bob and Fred used the appointment of President Ford and Vice President Rockefeller to refute my concern that none of the town board members now serving were elected. I don't believe the comparison is fair because the President and Vice President don't establish national budgets; it is through the Congress made up of many other elected officials subject to public support. I stick to my concern that the 1976 budget has been proposed by board members who have not been subject to public vote in their present positions. The proposed expenditure of some $21,000 next year for a "fire hall addition" is the biggest such proposal ever made by a Saint Joe town board.

And if Bob's repeated statement that "you're just mad because you can't do it your way" is what a lot of folks think, I'll say, you're damned right I'm mad and for this reason: I've devoted too many years to public activities in this community to sit by and watch what I think is a mistake get carried out (pardon the language, it's crude, but I reluctantly resort to such an expression at the suggestion of an individual who recently said, "Why don't you say what ou think in plain simple language so us dumb b—s can understand you.") He had asked why I didn't get off the backs of the fire department and the Emergency Medical Services program. After we talked a short while, he said "Thanks, now I know more than I did before." It was a friendly argument that brought out the fact that readers do not read carefully what I write oftentimes, and are misled oftentimes by someone's comment that all you read in this paper is b— s—

From the March 13, 1975, issue: "Firemen's program 'pays off'" about showing a movie at school.

February 6, 1975: photo of Bob Stiver and Kenny Roberts doing cleanup work on the local streets.

July 24, 1975, issue: "Thanks to the volunteer security men . . . Chuck Trumbull, Chuck Lenz, John Seckler, Guy Musteller and Joe Robinson—and maybe a few others." Unfortunately, I did not identify them as firemen.

From the same issue: "Thanks to the firemen for all their efforts . . . ."

The main thing forgotten by others is—what I write on these pages is subject to public scrutiny and criticism, and you know who said it. But—the criticism made against my views are made over a cup of coffee or a coke and not in my presence, and most of them I do not know about; I have no opportunity to defend my views. And I have firsthand information that a good portion of the dislike expressed against me is on the basis of misinformation; but there is no penalty paid by those expressing such misinformation. On the other hand, I MUST be pretty darn sure of what I say because it's right there in black and white.

If you hate my guts—do it for a good reason—not because you THINK I said something (which I did not) or because someone else gripes about what they THINK I said (which I did not).

The same day I conversed with Bob, I had a conversation with town clerk Emma Frank who was upset because of the way in which I stated the "fire hall addition" situation. She had explained to me beforehand that revenue sharing funds cannot be used for a town hall but can be used for a fire hall addition. I pointed out that I described the project as a "fire hall addition" and I admitted that my intent WAS to raise a question in the public's mind about the matter.

Since there are to be no "stalls" in the proposed addition to the fire hall and there will be only storage and office space, I must still stick to my opinion that this is an "in the back door" town hall project and my objection is to the location. Also the unusual interest shown by the fire department in the project suggests that my outlook may be more right than wrong—that any use of the addition for town purposes will be at the discretion of the fire department.

I understand Mose Yeiser told the town board recently that any addition for fire department use should be at the west end of the building. That's exactly what I suggested more than a year ago in presenting views on the town hall subject.

I had to sit in polite silence on one or two occasions during the recent centennial when an auxiliary member referred to the need for more space for the fire department. If there is such a need, let's talk about it in the open and add to the fire hall in a way which will be useful for the department. If not, let's drop it and consider the need of the TOWN as related to town hall purposes. Or—let's talk about a "community building" in a location where there is elbow room. Perhaps revenue sharing funds could be used for THAT kind of project.

And if you hear someone say, "He wants to build a dining room for Valcraft"—please— tell 'em to come down to the News Office so I can straighten them out.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Ted,

Enclosed you will find a check for my subscription to the Saint Joe News. In case anyone is interested in my whereabouts, I received my master's degree from the University of Kentucky in June and since July 1 I have been on the faculty of Georgia State University as a Reference Librarian and an Instructor in Library Science. In addition, I am also a member of the Decatur Civic Chorus which is the official bicentennial singing group of Georgia which means we will be doing some traveling around the state throughout the coming year.

I would also like to extend an open invitation to anyone visiting Atlanta or just passing through to look me up at Georgia State University. We are a large, urban university located in downtown Atlanta.

Stan Hall scored two touchdowns for the DeKalb Eastside Blazers Friday night as the locals defeated 'Busco 13—0 in an ACAC contest. The Blazers' record is now 2—2 while 'Busco dropped to 0—4.

Hall scored in the second period on a 7 yard run and in the third with a 17 yard run. He had 57 yards gained in nine carries.

Fumbles and 85 yards in penalties stopped the Blazers during the game. But their pass defense held 'Busco to only two completions in 13 throws and Kim Krafft of the Blazers intercepted one of 'Busco's passes. Eastside opponents have completed only 11 passes in 47 attempts this season.

'24 Homecoming, '75 Centennial Parades Similar

On September 6, 1924, Saint Joe celebrated a homecoming. In one respect, it was very similar to the recent centennial celebration held in July. That is, there was a parade, and in both instances the parade was considered the highlight of the celebration. Also, in both instances, there were over 50 units participating in the parade.

The winning float was entered by the Ladies Literary Club, shown in the above photo, provided by Doris Yeiser from a collection of Nancy Coburn. The wording on the float is: "Ladies Literary Club, organized 1895. Club motto: Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers." The sign on the side of the decorated wagon says: "Ladies Literary Club, 1895—1924."

Another entry in the parade was the decorated car of J. C. Hull, shown above with Mrs. Hull. The sign on the car door reads: "General line of insurance —Mutual Life Agency—J. C. Hull—Stop fire waste."

The home in the background is now owned by Jerry and Sandy Leeper.

FARM BUREAU

—Mixie Myers, reporter

The DeKalb County Farm Bureau board of directors met September 16. Martha Johnson gave devotions from the first chapter of Saint John. A letter of thanks was read from Chris Smith whom the Farm Bureau sponsored at the State Fair Girl's School.

Mrs. Carl Perkins and Adelino Stuckey reported on the Commodity meeting they attended at Albion. They told of two areas that need to be explored more; herbicide and pesticide use, and OSHA (Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1973). This is what is required when you hire employees.

There will be a citrus program again this year. We will have oranges, grapefruit and concentrated orange juice, popcorn and cheese. The Hoosier Farmer magazine will have order blanks in it. Blanks will also be available at the Farm Bureau office.

Orders must be in by November 14 and orders will be filled by December 1. Fruit is $6.50 a carton and the juice, which is a 5 to 1 concentrate, is $14 a carton of 24 12—oz. cans.

A committee was selected to study our bylaws. It includes Norman Gerig, chairman, David Dilley, Edith Mertz, Donna June Knox, Edna Perkins and Francis Nelson.

Townships were urged to get their policy development policies ready by October 16. Louis Lash is the District II policy chairman.

It was announced that State Farm Bureau vice president Glen Sample has resigned to become the president of Ivy Tech College.

Lloyd Mertz will have devotions in October.

Just for general information, here is the list of Indiana's 20 largest lakes with their acreage:

Monroe Reservoir	10,750
Patoka Reservoir	8,000
Brookville Reservoir	5,260
Mississinewa Reservoir	3,100
Salamonie Reservoir	2,700
Lake Wawasee	2,618
Mansfield Reservoir	2,060
Maxinkuckee	1,854
Geist Reservoir	1,800
Lake Murphy	1,700
Lake Lemon	1,650
Freeman	1,547
Morse Reservoir	1,463
Cataract	1,400
Big Pine Reservoir	1,390
Bass Lake	1,345
LaFayette Reservoir	1,320
Glendale	1,300
Shafer Lake	1,291
Lake James	1,034

There is an unofficial "King Soybean Contest" going on which was started by State Representative Dr. Floyd B. Coleman a couple of years ago. Last week Ralph Seiler had a plant with 398 pods, from the Ralph Warstler farm. That got Jim Shilling to looking on his father's farm, which Jim works. And he came up with a plant having 471 pods. And Jim says he's sure there are some plants with even more pods. That's some six times more than average.

I couldn't believe it.

A picture in one of the Fort Wayne dailies a couple of weeks ago showed an inmate of an Ohio prison, a convicted murderer, who had been named one of the "Outstanding Young Men of America." This is the same honor received by Jerry Markle of Spencerville recently and by three other young men in the county.

If the award is from the same organization, I wonder if someone played a trick. I can't feature categorizing someone in prison in the same class with someone who is not in prison, when you use the term "outstanding." That prisoner may be talented in some way. However, talent alone is not a measure of good citizenship. It's what you do with your talent that counts, in relation to other people.

I think it's an insult to put a prison inmate in the same class as the likes of Jerry Markle. Such an action has tainted the recognition which our local young man properly deserves.

I fired a letter of protest off to the sponsoring organization but haven't received a reply yet.

Headline: "Bayh Attacks Oil 'Club'" with a charge by Indiana Senator Birch Bayh that big oil companies are operating as a close—knit club that inhibits production of American oil.

Senator Bayh, what about the 'club' you belong to—the one called "the Senate" where a protective cloak of secrecy surrounds the activities of its members, a club which voted itself a pay raise at the taxpayers' expense in 1960 and has done it again in 1975? ?

Thank goodness, the headlines are finally telling that Richard Nixon was also deceived while he was in office, by the intelligence department—thanks to the investigative efforts of Senator Frank Church, a Democrat, of Idaho.

That evens the score just a little and illustrates how one—sided the picture was painted a couple of years ago.

Both houses of the Congress have rejected an 8.66 percent pay raise, going along with President Ford's recommendation of a 5 percent raise. With 1975 an election year, they backed off. BUT—they DID get a raise. If you ask me, there should have been no raise. Not until the Congress itself sets an example can we expect the American people to hold off on their demands for more. With every pay hike, we end up getting less for more money.

Hearings will be held next week at the court house on the proposed budgets of all taxing units in DeKalb County. The State Board of Tax Commissioners is in charge.

Next Thursday, October 9, will be devoted to township budgets, starting at 9:30 a.m.

Town budgets will be reviewed starting at 1:30 that Thursday.

On Friday, the tax board will review the eastern school district budget, among other units.

Taxpayers can present their views at the appropriate times.

Bicentennial To Be Observed With Dramas

The first of a series of student Bicentennial Celebration programs will take place Friday, October 10, at Riverdale Elementary School in Saint Joe.

Sixth grade students will present a program on the life of Christopher Columbus for the student body with the first presentation at 9 a.m. for grades kindergarten through three, and the second performance at 1 p.m. for grades four through six and afternoon kindergarten.

All students in the sixth grade are involved in the play. Some are working on costumes, some on the scenery, some on the stage. About 25 have speaking parts. There will be six scenes which will take Columbus from his childhood through the discovery of America.

The script for the play was written by a Riverdale fourth grade teacher, Betty Wagner.

In order that the entire school be a part of the Bicentennial celebration, all students are asked to wear red, white and blue clothing on the day of the play.

Blazer Football

West Noble downed the DeKalb Eastside Blazers last Friday night 40—12. The winners had 317 yards rushing and 74 passing while Eastside gained 152 yards on the ground and 40 on passes.

Larry McKown gained 127 yards in 20 tries for the Blazers. He scored both Blazer touchdowns, one in the third quarter on a four yard run and the other in the final period on a 18 yard jaunt.

The Blazers' record is now 2 won 3 lost for the season.

Headline:
"Postal Subsidy Hike Urged To Keep Stamp Rate Down"

In the story, Postmaster General Benjamin Bailar said that Congress should double the present $920 million subsidy to the Postal Department to keep the cost of stamps down for the public. The present subsidy was part of the 1970 legislation enacted by Congress when it made the Postal Department "independent." That's when the pay—your—own—way idea was really pushed to justify the tremendous increases in postage rates, including those for second class privileges under which this paper is mailed. The idea was to get the department "in the black" and was supported by, such as Indiana Senators Bayh and Hartke. They and many others like them in the Congress gave a poor lesson in history for the younger generation at that time, because they totally ignored the fact that EVERY American has a responsibility to help provide the means for disseminating public information, a responsibility recognized by our forefathers who made the postal subsidy a reality in the first place. The "pay your own way" idea was strangely forced on an area of public involvement which is least appropriate for such an approach, forced by our elected representatives including Indiana's two Senators. Yet, in other functions of public responsibility, "pay your own way" is overlooked in favor of government programs and control.

For all the "new ideas" and "new approaches" and "new techniques" which we are told about at their inception, it remains a fact that, whether it is in postage rate structures or in education or morality or what have you, the "new" changes or suggested changes are really "the old way" basically.

What the Postmaster General said in effect was, "It worked better the old way. Let's go back."

But—just increasing the subsidy is not the real problem. For the post office, as for schools, as for business and industry, the real problem is — too many people getting paid too much to do too little.

Headline:
"Newest Tax Return Form Complicated"

The story is that next year there will be more paper work to pay less taxes. That means, a lot of people being paid for non-productive activity. Any time that happens, inflation grows.

And who's responsible? The government.

Senator Hartke recently sent out an announcement of the opening of an outpatient clinic for veterans next spring. He is chairman of the Veterans Affairs Committee. The clinic is to serve veterans in the tri-state area—that's Indiana, Ohio and Michigan. But it is to be located at Evansville, 'way down south as far as "tri-state" area is concerned. It seems an odd location—until you remember that before being elected to the Senate in 1958 (he's been in 17 years now), Ms. Hartke was mayor of — guess — yep — Evansville.

You think Americans don't live "controlled" lives? Even the kids can't function without the government sticking its nose in.

I think it was Illinois where a young fella got into trouble running his own little business 'cause he wasn't 18 years old. And in California, an 11 year old was forced by the state Labor Relations Board to close his bicycle repair shop. He had hired a friend for an agreed upon pay scale, but the friend goofed off so the owner fired him. The friend notified the authorities of the matter and the owner had to either call his shop a "hobby" and make no charges for repair work, or close shop. He closed shop—but now he processes film for other people—as a "hobby."

So—government regulation (really, it's labor-sought control at the heart of it) has made a liar out of a boy who was learning how to run an honest business. He has been forced to call his business a "hobby" in order to stay in business.

No wonder "business" is looked upon with suspicion nowadays by the general public. Unfortunately, the general public doesn't know "the facts of life" about today's business predicament—that government regulations FORCE dishonesty and deception, or you're through—not only in business but in civil government as well, right down to the county and town level.

Think I'm kidding? Just ask around a little.

A headline recently said that Senator Bayh voted with the "antibusing" majority related to a Health, Education and Welfare appropriations bill.

By coincidence, he switched his outlook about forced busing just in time for the Presidential nomination race. He was for forced busing in education while it had its emotional appeal and was a tool to get popular support. But now that opinion polls show positively and consistently that the American public does not go along with the idea, he makes a switch.

—And to think that a couple of years ago, he was talking about Nixon administration "tricks"!

For years, I encouraged the young people in my Sunday School class of the past to get a college education—IF they had the opportunity and IF they had the qualifications.

But not any more am I so enthused about higher education. The main thing that's higher nowadays is the cost.

Why the disenchantment? A couple of articles about courses helped. One told of a course somewhere in trout fishing. Another last week told of a canoe course at DePauw.

Another course suggested was a trip to the Bahamas to study coral reefs and other biological life, then take a canoeing expedition in the Florida Everglades. The prof expected a dozen applicants. 60 turned up. Who wouldn't?

—And college profs are getting PAID for that sort of thing.

I think I'm in the wrong business.

Work Continues On Half-million Gen Tel System

General Tel has sent a letter to its Saint Joe exchange customers noting that construction is continuing on the $500,000 equipment and building project begun April 22 with a groundbreaking at the company property on Third Street.

All telephone numbers will be changed when the new electronic system is put into operation, effective July 17, 1976. The new numbers will appear in the new directory to be published next July.

The new switching system will give telephone users in the Saint Joe exchange "the latest in modern telephony," according to the company letter. This will include faster call completion; coin—free dialing to an operator from coin telephones; automatic number identification on direct dialed calls from one—party lines without interruption by an operator; and the availability of "touch tone" instruments on one and two—party lines.

Pancake-Sausage Supper At Butler

The Butler Fire Department will hold its 10th Annual Pancake and Sausage Supper Saturday, October 18, in the high school cafetorium at Butler. Serving will begin at 5:30 p.m. and continue to 8 p.m.

The department serves Wilmington, Franklin, Stafford and Troy townships, as well as the city of Butler. Each year the department sends some 1500 solicitations to homes in that area enclosing supper tickets for voluntary purchase and pledge cards. From these, the department raises funds to maintain and improve its equipment.

The public is invited to attend the supper. Tickets are $4.50 per couple.

PTO Chili Supper

The Riverdale PTO will have a chili supper on its regular meeting night this month, Tuesday, October 21.

The supper will be served from 5:30 to 8 p.m.

Price is $1.25 for adults and 75 cents for kids under 12.

Hallow'n Parties November 1

Saint Joe and Spencerville will have community Halloween parties this year on the same night, Saturday, November 1.

At Saint Joe, there will be a parade from the fire hall to the Riverdale elementary gym at 7:30 p.m. Games, prizes and refreshments will be enjoyed by all at the annual party.

The Saint Joe—Concord Township Fire Department is sponsor of the local party.

At Spencerville, the party will be held in the Community Building, with games, prizes and refreshments also available.

The public, young and old, is invited to attend and-or participate.

LCW Meets

St. Mark Lutheran Church Women of Saint Joe were hosts to the women of St. Peter Lutheran Church of Spencerville at a meeting held Thursday evening, October 2.

Mrs. Carlos Church, local president, welcomed 38 members and guests. Devotions were given by Mrs. Forrest Bevington who read from Romans 13:8—10.

The speaker for the evening was Mrs. John Graham, wife of the DeKalb County Sheriff. She told of her duties and responsibilities as matron of the county jail. Mrs. Graham told the group that she had many opportunities to bear Christian witness to women who are incarcerated in the jail.

Each group held a short business meeting, after which assorted desserts were served at beautifully decorated tables in the church basement.

The hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Clayton A. Baker, Mrs. Maurice Kline, Mrs. Orville Gick, Mrs. Clayton E. Bittner and Mrs. Richard Strombeck.

Mrs. Church and Mrs. Bevington are attending the Indiana—Kentucky LCW Synodical Convention at Indianapolis October 9, 10 and 11.

Winter Recreation Program Set

Information sheets have been placed in businesses in this area to announce that the Spencerville Community Club now has a winter recreation program. The information sheet states:

"Not only can you meet with friends, lose weight and have gobs of laughs doing the common sports of basketball, volleyball, badminton, shuffleboard and tennis, you can learn new things about new and interesting sports. These include hiking, cycling, and slimnastics."

Those who are interested can complete the survey form and take it to the Community Club Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday of next week and begin participating in the program. The sessions are held from 7:45 p.m. to 10:00 p.m.

The supervisor is Gary Warstler. The program is paid for by the federal government through "CETA," a training program set up to give jobs to individuals from minority and low income groups.

Parties Don't Matter-But Do!

The other night, when I was following my almost daily ritual of getting comfortably situated on the couch to go through the evening paper before supper, an item caught my eye. I should have clipped it immediately to have the exact quote. But I didn't, and I haven't found the item though going through several days' issues of the News—Sentinel.

What was so significant was that some three of the Congress' top "liberals" had made statements about our economy in general. And each statement reflected a significant change in outlook. Senator Ted Kennedy was one, Senator Ed Muskie was another and I can't immediately recall the third man. The general thought in each comment was: we can't go on spending as we have; a look must be taken at our expansive social legislation program because we can't afford to undertake such massive activities any longer.

Keep in mind that these are all Democrats who have gained popular appeal by being "for" anyone who says, "Help me." Keep in mind that Senator Kennedy is the one who has proposed a massive health care program at the national level which would cost (according to some estimates) $100 billion a year.

Along the same line, Vice President Nelson Rockefeller made a statement a couple of weeks ago that the nation's citizens were turning toward "conservatism" (cut spending and government programs) because of the financial crisis marked by alarming inflationary trends. He noted that "liberals" are the ones who propose social programs and presumably know how to take care of people. The "conservative" holds back on such efforts and brings stability.

Note that Mr. Rockefeller is a Republican. Also note that he has been one of the most "liberal" personages in New York state government, spending that state into big debt and helping to lead New York City into virtual bankruptcy; it can't pay the bills for "liberal" programs.

There is a message in the situation, but these learned men haven't gotten it, it would seem. That message is: we get into financial trouble because the liberal philosophy is unsound. I find it very aggravating that anyone who says "let's take it easy" on some high—sounding proposal involving massive expenditures is accused of dragging his feet or being "unprogressive." The most hated legislators and officials in the liberal and intellectual mind (which pictures itself as "humanitarian" and "concerned") are the likes of Ronald Reagan, John Tower, Barry Goldwater, James Buckley and so on. Yet, it is the practical guidance in the "conservatism" of such men which ultimately must be used to get us out of financial — and social — messes.

A very small percentage of the American people now align themselves with the Republican party. Yet, it is the Republican party which has basically supported the "conservative" approach to national affairs. There is a guilt association prevalent in our society which makes a Republican "bad," — unconcerned about the "needs" of the people, unsympathetic about people's problems, and so on — just generally "out of touch" with the populace. This unfavorable picture has been painted by liberal leadership which now says, "We must be more careful (conservative)."

Thus, it is the practical motivation of the Republican party which is relied on even by the likes of Ted Kennedy, Ed Muskie, Nelson Rockefeller and others who are supposedly more concerned about people.

I've said it before and I'll say it again, especially after the recent statements made by the leading liberals: It is not so much that you are Republican or Democrat; it is "how do you rate people and government"? If you want to be "left alone" and believe in the individual as the master of government, then you belong in the "conservative" camp and that (in my lifetime) has meant the Republican party. If you believe that government is the master of your life and should provide for your keep through social welfare programs, then you belong in the liberal camp which (in my lifetime) has dominated the Democrat party.

I know it is difficult thing to do. But a lot of Americans ought to "change their politics." With liberals and conservatives in both parties, it is inappropriate to stick to a party candidate UNLESS that candidate reflects the basic outlook of the voter. But loyalty to a party is much too strong for some people. Consequently, we have a breakdown in the confidence of the people in those they elect, because they didn't get what they thought they voted for.

In this respect, there are some outright liars now serving in the Congress of the United States. But they "get away with murder" because of their ability to "sweet talk" many citizens into supporting many ideas which the citizen, on his own intelligence, has doubts about.

President's Budget Wisdom

"There is no way we can enact a tax based on a spending ceiling." (House Ways and Means Committee chairman Al Ullman, Democrat of Oregon)

". . . simply not realistic" and more political than economic. There is no way of making spending reductions on the scale proposed by President Gerald Ford without cutting into such programs as Social Security, veterans' pensions, food stamps and educational programs, along with the defense budget. (House Budget Committee chairman Brock Adams, Democrat of Washington)

With the above words and thoughts, two committee chairmen assessed President Ford's proposal to cut federal income taxes by $28 billion AND cut government spending by the same amount. The President indicated the tax cut could not be tolerated without a corresponding reduction in the federal budget.

Isn't that what 99 percent of the American people say they want??? Isn't tax reduction AND reduced government spending what John Q. Public has been hoping for??? It seems to me that it is. And I must admit, however, that there might be a catch to the whole thing. The two Democrat chairmen MIGHT be correct—that the proposal is just "playing politics" and cannot be carried out. But they didn't say why.

The "why" is that a substantial portion of the federal budget (and state budgets, too) are wrapped up in programs which MUST be funded. And other programs are in effect in which a specified amount MUST be spent. Whether a lot of Americans realize it or not, the Congress has instituted programs which COMPEL the expenditure of a given amount of money. The amount spent is not based on actual need; it is based on some arbitrary figure arrived at by "expert" calculations, and that amount MUST BE SPENT.

An example of this is the hospital construction program. Hospitals are being built right now for which there is no actual area need. But Congress mandated the expenditure of those construction funds. And so we have people spending their time(and our tax money) finding places to build new hospitals which are not needed.

Thus, if certain categories of the federal budget require the expenditure of "X" dollars, then there cannot be a reduction; Congres has seen to that.

Keep that in mind while mulling over the President's proposal to cut spending when cutting taxes—that any problems in such a proposal lie at the feet of the Congress. Congress is to blame for excessive spending, not the President.

I&M Rated Most Efficient In Management

Indiana & Michigan Electric Company was recently graded the highest among 213 utilities in a study on utility efficiency made by the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners. Results of the study were published early this month, according to William R. Nimmo, I&M's Kendallville manager.

The study, "The Measurement of Electric Utility Efficiency," classified the 1973 performances of the 213 companies into groups according to energy sales and type of power sources. Performance was then evaluated in each of 23 categories, including the eight areas deemed to be where company management could exercise control over results.

I&M ranked in the top 25% of all utilities within its group in each of the eight management control areas, the only utility to do so.

The eight management-control categories were: capacity utilization; heat rate; production expense per kilowatt hour generated; net utility plant investment per kilowatt hour sold; total operating expense per kilowatt hour sold; total operating expense per kilowatt hour sold (excluding federal, state and local taxes, cost of fuel and purchasing power); total operating expenses per kilowatt hour sold (excluding federal, state and local taxes); and productivity of labor, annual kilowatt hour sales per employee.

The results of the study came in the face of recent apparent efforts to discredit I&M's management in metropolitan Fort Wayne.

Mental Health Gifts Sought

The News Office at Saint Joe is again the collection depot for gifts for those in mental health institutions. The Christmas gift program for mental patients is a project in the county of the DeKalb County Association For Mental Health. Carolyn Watson of Auburn is county chairman.

The gift drive runs from October 20 through November 29. Two gifts of $3.00 value each are sought for each patient. Last year over 600 gifts were contributed by county residents.

Gifts should be new and unwrapped. Special attention is drawn to the "unwrapped" request, since in years past gifts were to be wrapped or gift wrap provided with each gift. This year the county committee will take care of the wrapping so that the gifts will be known for presentation to appropriate persons.

The Riverdale area, as with other areas in the county, has been given a list of nine patient names, meaning that 18 gifts are sought from this area. Any additional gifts above that number will be distributed according to patient needs.

Needed from the Riverdale area are:

4—spray deodorant for women
5—spray deodorant for men
4—Lady's stretch mittens
5—size 34 man's belt

Gifts may be dropped off at the News Office any time from now until November 29. They will be given to patients in DeKalb County institutions and to patients at the Fort Wayne State Hospital.

Town Election Confusion

Confusion Unfair to Saint Joe

Voters in Saint Joe will face a somewhat confused situation when they go to the polls in just a short time to elect town officials. Administration of town affairs for the past four years has been far from consistent or organized. Resignations of two members occurred reportedly due to internal conflicts. Then the president resigned when he moved from the community. An appointee to take one of the first two vacancies then took over as president. And two other appointments made thereafter included two men closely associated with the fire department. This was noted by some local residents because of what appeared to be strong fire department influence on proposed construction of town hall facilities which have been designated "fire hall addition."

The confusion continues, even at election time, because the present acting board president was nominated at the recent Democrat caucus when his plans were already made to move from this community before the end of the year. The reported reason, given by him to others (who passed the information along to me) for leaving his name up for election is to prove that he can be elected. This is an obvious reaction to statements made in this paper expressing concern over the financial commitments being made by the present board which was not elected and has therefore never been subject to voter opinion of performance.

I can understand his desire to "find out" something; losing by five votes four years ago has left me with questions ever since, as I have mentioned before. However, the present situation is different — his running for election could leave the town in the same administrative "mess" as it has experienced more than once in the past three years, during which time the resignations occurred. If he is elected, someone must be appointed to take his place because he will not be here. It is even probable that he will not be around to finish this year.

Is this fair to Saint Joe? Others don't think so, and neither do I. If the purpose of remaining on the ballot is to prove he can be elected (or perhaps it would be more accurate to say "prove to the editor" he can be elected), then the town is being "used" for personal gratification. This is totally wrong.

Nominees CAN Be Changed

Those who think that his name could not be withdrawn from the nominees, after the caucus was held, have been misinformed. A candidate CAN withdraw; a replacement CAN be made. This has occurred on the Republican ticket in Saint Joe where a caucus nominee refused the nomination after the caucus and another person has been put on the ballot. It was a strange situation from the start in that instance, because the original nominee is a registered Democrat.

It may be "too late" NOW to remove one's name from the ballot; that's because ballot printing orders have a deadline. However, both party caucuses were held in August; there WAS time to make a change. However, it was up to the individual involved to make the circumstances known. The excuse that it's "too late" is therefore a "coverup" of the real picture — and that's infringing upon Republican tactics!

Politics And/Or Philosophy

Those who say "politics shouldn't be a factor in a small town election" are making a valid statement in one respect — that is, at the small town level we should be voting for the most qualified candidate, not for "our party's" candidate, simply because we can see first hand the motivation and results of local people. It's a good idea. However, politics DO enter into small town elections because, on occasion, political affiliation CAN be an indication of what a particular nominee will do in office, what "philosophy" he or she will follow (if that "big word" doesn't scare you).

Also, if it is better in small town elections to pick candidates "most qualified" for the job (and I agree), then what happened four years ago when two incumbent candidates were removed from office? Were they "unqualified"? Did they exhibit "poor performance" during their four years? Or was it something else which was emphasized or "pushed" behind the scenes, such as maybe their lack of "cooperation" in certain matters? Did a segment of voters vote then for qualifications, or " for spite"???

In the past four years, the fact that elected and appointed Democrats controlled town affairs DID influence how things were done. The submissiveness of the elected board president to the wishes of fire department leaders didn't just happen to be coincidence (board president and two fire chiefs Democrats). And now, under a Democrat appointee who is serving as president, Saint Joe has become a "welfare" town. The president has brought in two unemployed workers through the CETA program or township welfare. The town doesn't have to pay them, so the selling point is "we're getting town workers 'for free' ." But they aren't free; their income is from tax money. At the federal level, to pay a worker for 40 hours a week at some $3.25 an hour or so, the federal government must take in some $10 in taxes for each hour paid at $3.25. It is not just an opinion, it is a statistical fact that, generally speaking, for every dollar coming back from the federal government, three dollars had to be taken in. Why? Because it costs money to pay federal employees to collect the money, to print the regulations, to maintain accounts of the money and to allocate the money—and that doesn't include mailing costs. On top of that, there is the cost of full time administrators in hundreds of communities, plus clerical help, to account for local distribution.

This is the type of program typical of Democrat leadership for the past 40 years or more. And this type of program, which is called "creating jobs" by proponents, is a prime reason why the city of New York is in such a mess financially. The cost of just keeping people busy under the comforting word "job" just cannot be met; the idea is unsound. Now Saint Joe is a part of that false "employment" under local Democrat leadership. I think that type of administrating is degrading to the town and is a contributor to our total economic mess. It helps to promote spending more than we take in and therefore makes every dollar in your and my pocket worth less and less.

Street Money NOT All Spent

The local situation is even more disturbing because a retired man in town, who has worked for the town part time for many years and responded to calls for help of all kinds in even the worst of weather, is no longer employed by the town. He has been told, "There isn't any more street money. It has all been spent."

He has been deceived; there IS more money. What was APPROPRIATED for the year has been spent, but there is more money available, unspent from previous years. The proof of this (I'm not just "shooting off my mouth") is in this very issue of The Saint Joe News. There is a legal notice for an additional appropriation of $1,100 for more street work. Such a proposal would not be possible if there were no funds available.

I think it's a shame that a long time local resident, who may be a bit slower than you and I because of age but who is still physically able, is shunted aside, is lied to—a senior citizen who has served the town and has helped himself by part time town employment—he is cast aside in favor of two welfare recipients who are really costing the taypayer more than anyone likes to admit. To top it off, one of them turned down a job at the Vulcraft plant a year ago because the pay was "too low"! And this is the same one who pressured the town board to get in on the program, from which he is benefitting. By coincidence, he happens to have family ties of a sort with a member of the town board. And this activity has come under Democrat leadership.

If you say "politics don't count," you are dead wrong, in my opinion.

Which Side?

I have not made the statement in this paper, but I have made it to several persons in private conversation: the candidate on the Republican ticket to oppose the present board president in the coming election, is a Democrat. Evidently my statements got back to her, and I was informed by one of my family that she has been a registered Republican for six years; she had checked at the court house.

That's strange. Six years would take it back to 1969. Yet, in 1967, at the REPUBLICAN town caucus, she was named treasurer for the town GOP organization. I didn't know her political affiliation at the time and didn't question the validity of her presence at the caucus; neither did anyone else. But some time later someone informed me of the situation; but it was left alone. However, it IS confusing. And my statements as to her Democrat affiliation are no more misleading than her participation in Republican affairs in 1967 while presumably still a registered Democrat.

Incidentally, because town candidates are chosen by party caucus, there is no registration of town voters; you don't have to "declare" your politics as a voter in our town election as you do in a primary election.

"Politics" Are Essential To Freedom

Representative government begins at the grass roots. That is not an original statement. You have heard it time and time again from members of both major political parties. Democrats and Republicans alike recognize the importance of the BEGINNING processes of our election privileges; that means town elections like ours. "Politics" has a bad reputation in the public's mind, generally speaking. However, the truth of the matter is: POLITICS IS THE BASIC PROTECTION A FREE SOCIETY HAS TO PRESERVE THAT FREEDOM. Politics properly participated in gives the American voter a choice. Those who "play around" with public responsibilities in seeking, or after having gained public support for, an elective office are doing a disservice to their community and to the entire process of representative government.

Town $800 Poorer—At Least

At a time when sewage treatment matters needed attention, at a time when an arbitrary and unfair "flood prone area" classification was given to a part of Saint Joe and should have been challenged at the start, at a time when total community need as far as a town hall or a "community building" (within our means) was appropriate, at a time when expenditure of the state-reimbursed street monies called for "being honest" about how much is available, at a time when making use of local citizens who can be and want to be of help laborwise is appropriate, Saint Joe has had to suffer painful and uncalled for neglect of duties by our "grass roots" officials, the town board—not all members, but enough to make it "hurt."

Because the "flood prone area" matter was neglected, we have had to pay (or will have to pay) for legal services which might have been avoided, and we have had to enact (and pay legal fees for) a zoning ordinance which makes town residents like puppets on a string who must ask if they can do this or that. Because the town hall matter has been mishandled, the town board was billed just this month for $800 for "engineering services" in planning the "fire hall addition." Out the window went time and effort by the local Vulcraft plant which had already drawn up plans through their engineers FOR FREE. The local industry had also offered to provide any necessary steel roof beams FOR FREE.

Parties Don't Count—But Do! — ???

Forgive me, Democrats, for once again pointing out that these things occurred under town Democrat leadership. But I think it necessary because it is your spokesmen who have appealed to the public's feeling of being "underprivileged" or "oppressed" or or whatever it is you may call it that leads to accepting "aid" of some sort without considering such essential things as principles or cost. There have been responsible Democrats in office in Saint Joe, and I don't recall that they were inclined to live beyond the town's means when it comes to handling town affairs. They have had the knowledge to recognize that there is no such thing as "it's free' in government aid programs.

With these matters still pending, related to certain projects, Saint Joe faces an election when experience is needed, when sticking to a tight situation until it is resolved is needed, when being honest with the public and informing townspeople of what is going on is needed. But the list of candidates includes one whose politics are undecided, one who is moving away but wants to prove something first, and one who is on welfare and working in town because he talked the board into taking a federal handout —and he is "related" to one of the present appointed board members who seeks to be elected, too.

If you are a Democrat, you are no doubt offended by some of the above, even though you may not like what has gone on in town affairs. If you're a Republican, you may be smugly satisfied. Don't be; you're not totally "innocent."

The fact remains, these matters have been complicated by neglect, by ignorance (which is nothing to be ashamed of unless you make no effort to find out something from the proper sources), and on occasion by just plain bullheadedness. They have been complicated under Democrat control of the town board and they reflect in some instances the "liberal" philosophy (shared by some Republicans) of government involvement, government handouts— and ultimately government control.

Our Steadfast Clerk-Treasurer

There is no telling what further problems we would be experiencing were it not for the faithfulness of town clerk-treasurer Emma Frank who has stuck to the job despite board instability, board neglect, board abuse of power and privilege, and so on for the past four years. She deserves credit for doing an excellent job under trying circumstances. A less dedicated person would have resigned long ago.

However, the clerk-treasurer does not establish policy, does not vote in town administrative functions. It is the town board which has that duty; the clerk-treasurer sees that the technical details are carried out, whether in agreement or not.

Personal Reflections

Some of my fondest and most cherished memories as a town board member relate to former clerk-treasurers Harvey Carr and the late Donald Kinsey, both Democrats. Party affiliation was not a factor in our relationships, as far as I am concerned. I felt they functioned with the same attitude. Though we had clashes on occasion, they were beyond "politics." In fact, if "Republican" or "Democrat" came up in our conversations at board meetings or outside, it was in jest—we were "putting one another on." And I consider one of the most gratifying moments in my life at Saint Joe the evening a few years ago when Harvey stopped me as I rode by his home on bicycle on the way to the ball diamond—and out of a clear, blue sky said, "I know we had our differences sometimes at board meetings, and I know you catch a lot of h— on the board. But I want you to know that I appreciate all that you've done for the town." I mention this to point out that, despite what other comments here may seem to indicate (blind party loyalty), there are others who have shared with me recognition of the individual as the important ultimate factor—not party affiliation.

The Town's Predicament

We in Saint Joe have a responsibility to exercise our voting privileges at the town election in the near future. But the slate of candidates presents a problem if you are looking for experience, forthrightness, no family ties, no undue outside influence, no playing around with political affiliation or philosophy, no playing round with responsibilites to all local citizens.

School Board Issues Statement On Procedure Under Federal 'Title IX'

GRIEVANCE PROCEDURE TO BE USED BY ANY PARENT, SCHOOL PATRON, STUDENT OR SCHOOL STAFF MEMBER SHOULD THERE BE A CONTENTION THAT ONE SEX OR THE OTHER IS BEING WRONGED AS PER THAT WHICH IS SPELLED OUT IN FEDERAL TITLE IX:

Anyone who thinks he or she has a grievance i.e., one sex or the other is being wronged as per that which is spelled out in Federal Title IX should go to the office of the appropriate building principal and request a "Title IX Grievance Form."

The grievant should then fill out the first portion of the aforesaid grievance form and through the appropriate building principal make an appointment to meet with the School District Grievance Committee. (This grievance committee is to be constituted in each particular case by two school patrons having children in school, by two students from the particular school that is the source of the grievance, and by two faculty members from the particular school that is the source of the grievance.) The grievant is then to meet by appointment with the grievance committee, present his or her statement of grievance along with appropriate arguments and/or evidence and seek a solution. The grievance committee is to weigh the arguments and the evidence heard, and using the grievance form indicate their disposition of the case.

The grievance form is then to be passed along to the appropriate building principal who after studying the grievance form is to make an appointment to meet with the grievance committee and the grievant. The principal then is to hear evidence in argument by both the grievance committee and the grievant, and using the grievance form, the principal is to indicate his disposition of the case.

The grievance form is then to be passed along to the school superintendent who after studying the grievance form is to make an appointment to meet with the grievance committee, the grievant, and the appropriate building principal. The superintendent then is to hear evidence in argument by the grivance committee, the grievant and the building principal, and using the grievance form, the superintendent is to indicate his disposition of the case.

The grievance form is then to be passed along to the school board for their consideration at their next regularly called meeting. The school board then at the aforementioned meeting is to study the grievance form and hear a complete report from the school superintendent. If at this juncture the school board members are not prepared to rule in favor of the grievant, then the school board must invite the grievance committee, the grievant, the appropriate building principal, and the school superintendent to present evidence and argument at the school board's next regularly called meeting. Having heard the evidence and arguments, and using the grievance form, the school board members must then indicate their disposition of the case.

If after hearing the school board's disposition of the case, the grievant is not satisfied, then the grievant has recourse to law as does any other citizen.

Obviously this chain of events could rightfully draw to a conclusion at the end of any one sequence spelled out above; however, in no instance involving a Title IX grievance is there to be a final decision before the disposition of the case in point has been reviewed all the way up the ladder including a review by the school board members.

'Pot'? Before School?

—by The Editor

The other morning, I was working in the shop as three local young girls came trotting past the shop — well, not exactly trotting — it was a little faster than that. I thought, "Hey—that's pretty good — they're doing some jogging before the school bus comes to keep physically fit." One was pudgy enough to need some jogging.

What a jolt it was to then see and hear evidence to show how wrong I was. They weren't concerned with physical fitness; they were instead doing the opposite; they were destroying their minds and their bodies.

After they rounded the corner at the shop and were out of sight of the main street, they stopped. And I saw these beautiful creations of God passing one cigarette between them.

Or was it a cigarette? The way in which it was held—just by a pinch between thumb and first finger—and the quick sucking "drags" especially by one of the kids—gave me second thoughts about "cigarette." The way it was carefully passed among them added to my doubts. I tried to rationalize the situation, telling myself. "It's probably the only cigarette the one with the shoulder handbag could sneak from home without arousing any suspicions."

Then two more girls came running around the corner to join the original three. More puffing went on before my rationalizing was destroyed. Out came another cigarette, as the girl reached again into her handbag. But this one was smoked differently; there wasn't the extreme care in handling. (There may have been still another cigarette involved; I'm not certain.)

About then, a thundering herd of some half dozen boys came racing from the bus stop corner around the shop corner, obviously "the word" was out about the girls' activity. And I heard one of the girls say, "It's all gone," to the boys.

"It's" all gone!!? With other cigarettes in evidence, what was "it"? That's the thought which came to my mind as I recalled the first "cigarette" I had seen.

The group then walked back to the bus stop corner and my suspicions were even more aroused, because two of the girls had fresh cigarettes going, one lighting up as the group crossed in front of the shop and post office, the latter a popular place for kids to smoke their heads off, especially after school. (If you have lung trouble, don't go in there right after four o'clock when the school bus has dropped off local kids—unless you take a deep breath before entering. It might be cloudy in there.)

While I don't know all the kids involved by name, I do know some of them. Most reside within one, two, three or four blocks of our place. I'll probably get taunted by some of the kids for saying what I am saying here; it's the usual pattern. But whether they appreciate it or not, I am concerned about their welfare, about their health, about their LIFE. I'm concerned about them (because I love 'em all. But love doesn't mean letting someone do what they want. Sometimes it means a swat on the fanny, literally or figuratively. And these kids deserve a swat because they are abusing their bodies, they are violating the trust of their parents, they are setting themselves up for more dangerous and destructive activities.

It may seem "smart" to these kids to be "in" on the action with a cigarette dangling from the lips or fingers, to be getting into something more daring than cigarettes. But actually, kids, it is the height of stupidity. The "smart" ones are the stupidest in the crowd.

I know what some are thinking: "Didn't he read in the papers that the President's oldest son has used 'pot'? Didn't he read the recommendation of a Presidential study commission which said law enforcement should back off on 'pot' users and concentrate on more dangerous drug abuse?"

Yes, I saw. And I shuddered. If the President's oldest son is a marijuana user, then he is stupid, President's son or not. I also saw where the President's younger son DIDN't support the use of marijuana. So who said what in that instance doesn't answer any questions.

Now I'll ask one. Did you read the ENTIRE article about the marijuana study committee report? It also said: marijuana is not as harmless as was once thought. I don't know to whom they refer as "once thinking" marijuana is harmless; only users have fostered that argument—like the Manions and the Frommes whose marijuana "culture" involves murder or attempted murder.

And I have read in more than one instance that hard drug users have almost universally begun on "pot." It is the first step to destruction for those seeking a thrill, something different, an escape from reality, or what have you.

I think that study commission goofed terribly in saying "back off on pot users." To me, this is an absolute contradiction to the adage (which is undeniable): An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

For too many drug abusers. THERE — IS — NO — CURE.

If you are a parent and you live within one, two, three or four blocks of us, and you are concerned about what your kids do and want to know if your son or daughter was involved in that episode the other day, ask me and I'll tell you.

Then it's your baby. I'm just warning some good families about what may be going on when their kids leave for the school bus 30 or 45 minutes before it arrives in the morning, or what they are doing in the evening when not at home.

Cigarettes have always been a fascinating part of teenage exposure; some kids smoked when I was a teenager and I imagine the ancient Greeks and Romans were having the same problem—youth practicing or participating in that for which they are not ready, physically or mentally. (No, I'm not saying adults can use "pot.")

In this particular decade, however, smoking cigarettes at an early age has much too frequently led to "pot." It's the pattern. And "pot" leads to hard drugs. THAT'S the pattern, too.

Where there's smoke, there's fire — or maybe something else.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

In fairness to teacher organizations—since I have been very critical of their program content when they have a meeting and its seems attention is devoted primarily to their own personal interests (pay increase, collective bargaining and so on)—it seems only fair to note that teachers' institute last week had many workshops devoted to the techniques of teaching. Sure, there were those discussions yet related to teacher interests of a personal nature. But it appears that more attention was devoted to classroom matters than was evident in recent past years.

That doesn't mean everything is in good shape. The workshops had to do with such things as open classrooms and other new ideas of the recent past, with which many parents are displeased. But at least there was an apparent change of major subject matter.

I've been told that one of the reactions to my comments concerning Saint Joe's election situation had to do with the $800 spent for an engineer's fee to design the "fire hall addition." It was said (not to me but to someone else) that the plans prepared by Vulcraft were rejected. The reason supposedly is that it requires a "licensed architect" to prepare such plans.

I've known Charlie Miser a long time. I have never heard of his professional status as an architect; but I have known of his status as a "licensed engineer." Also, as a former member of the Indiana State Legislature (Joint State Representative), he knows who to see for what.

As far as "licensed architect" is concerned, it seems you would need "licensed engineers" to do the actual planning and drawing of specifications. Architects are involved in design ideas and layout; engineers put it all together.

I'll still stand on the position that Saint Joe is $800 poorer because of something other than state regulations about "licensed architects." We're paying out some "gravy" which ought not be required from a little town such as ours. The money would have gone to better use for paying the actual cost of construction of a simple thing such as an addition, rather than pay out for frills such as "architect fees."

Also, the content of my comments has been softened apparently by an admission that our troubles are due to inexperience. Though I mentioned the point, it was only one of several. The situation still involves "playing around" with public responsibilities—and most of the time on the basis of either comparatively minor matters or on the basis of putting someone down.

Another reaction to my comments came from a family involved in the "free" labor Saint Joe is getting through a federal government program. The young man and his wife were very upset about the word "welfare" and they told me about it the other evening. Though they were very upset (or "mad" as some might call it), we had what I consider a constructive conversation, though neither they nor I were happy about the whole situation.

There was one statement I made which the young wife jumped on, and rightly so. I said, "There are more people on welfare than like to admit it. They don't like the word 'welfare.' Every family in the United States with a child in the public schools is on welfare. The school lunch program is subsidized for all students, regardless of family income. We could pay for our kids' lunches, the true value, but the government has subsidized the whole thing, making all of us welfare recipients."

The young lady replied, "Why don't you put THAT in your paper instead of this other stuff."

I didn't answer because it would have led into a long discussion away from the subject at hand. And since they had not been regular subscribers, they could not be aware of what I have said in the past.

But, the truth of the matter is, I HAVE said something about it before, though not specifically mentioning the school lunch program. Any time I comment on displeasure at the number of government agencies and programs set up to assist this group and that group, I am protesting against placing so many Americans on welfare. And that's what it is when anyone gets money without there being any productivity involved or when a job is "created" just to keep a person busy, or assistance is given on a mass scale including those who don't need it.

The United States has become a welfare state and it has been at the hands of those in control of our Congress who sell programs to the public on the promise of "a better life."

Better? Take a look around.

I received a call from a representative of the "Outstanding Young Men In America" organization after having sent a letter of protest about a convicted murderer getting such an award. I mentioned the matter here before, but incorrectly identified the state of Ohio as the place where the convict was confined; it should have been Hawaii.

The young lady who called said she shared the same concern about the matter, and that the organization was negotiating with the JayCees who sponsor much of the award program.

I told her I didn't object to giving recognition to a convict who has made good use of his time on constructive efforts while in prison. But in no way did such efforts merit an implied "good citizenship" example as is implied when you talk about "Outstanding Young Men In America."

I think this is a good example that, when something strikes a person as being wrong, communicating with involved agencies or individuals can bring reassurance that there are those who are not in agreement with what is carried out even when they are directly involved. It remains to be seen whether or not the national JayCees adjust their awards procedure. But I'd bet a dollar to a plug nickel that the Auburn JayCees didn't like the situation either, if they were aware of the Hawaii matter.

I commented before about the work Lloyd and Marie Noel have done on the corner brick building in Saint Joe. They're getting a lot of items in now for auction and for general sale in their "Cozy Nook." The corner really did look cozy the other night as I crossed the street—what with the ornamental lamps turned on at the front, a small lamp giving a glow to the inside, the fresh paint job the Noels have done and the window drapes Marie put in.

And right next door, things have been brightened up in the Bowser building in preparation for the opening of insurance and law offices.

I doubt whether that corner has ever looked better.

Things I don't understand—

Why, if we are trying to cut down on petroleum consumption, the state of Indiana promotes the "Third Annual Tourism Conference" for October 30 and 31. Tourism means travel, and travel means energy use.

Every so often I get a note from Marjorie Ramsey in Fort Wayne to say hello and tell of the visitors she has had. Marjorie was the switchboard operator at the telephone office back in the good old days before 1960.

The October issue of "Universal News" told of the retirement of Mary Nusbaum of Spencerville and Phil Mooney of Saint Joe in September.

Study Team Here Oct. 28-31

Robert E. Williams, principal of DeKalb Eastside Jr.—Sr. High School, has announced that the North Central Association Indiana Committee has appointed the team members who will visit the school October 28—31. The team of 15 will have Dr. Billy Abel of IU—PU at Indianapolis as chairman.

NCA teams are composed of educators who volunteer their time and talents in the association's regionwide efforts to help member institutions study and appraise the quality of their programs.

NCA membership requires that every school undergo a complete evaluation once every seven years. The evaluation includes a comprehensive self—study by the school, then a review by a team of outside educators.

After the team's visit, the staff will consider the recommendations made by the team and the recommendations that resulted from the school's self study. The staff will then decide upon the areas of the program that need to be strengthened, and will devise a schedule of steps towards improving those areas. Principal Williams called the eveluation "a difficult but productive task."

The North Central Association is the nation's largest regional accrediting agency and is a voluntary association of some 4,000 secondary schools and more than 650 colleges and universities in a 19 state region. The association "works with individual schools to improve the quality of education through a continuous process of evaluation and accreditation," Mr. Williams said.

Leave repairable toys at Knisely Branch Bank for benefit of Hospital Guild of DeKalb Memorial Hospital

November 29 deadline for Mental Patient Christmas gifts

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Evidently I misplaced a note about the need for repairable toys for the Curiosity Shop at Auburn, the shop operated to provide funds for DeKalb Memorial Hospital.

Someone called in to give me the information several days ago and I must have lost the note.

Repairable toys are prepared for sale in the Curiosity Shop in time for Christmas.

Anyone wishing to donate toys for the project may leave them at the Knisely Branch Bank in Saint Joe. The Hospital Guild will be grateful.

Esther noted the other day that Roy Bowser is doing his bit to doll up the corner where the Nosey Nook and the Professional Building are located. He has been repainting the wrought iron fence in front of the Bowser residence. And maybe you don't think that's a tedious job.

He had ulterior motives Monday, however. He said he was working there so he and John Coburn could go fishing Tuesday. That way, Kate couldn't give him a hard time about not doing anything.

Audrey Wade of Spencerville provides readers with a bit of history related to the recent 100th anniversary celebrations of St. Mark Lutheran Church at Saint Joe and the original platting of Saint Joe in 1875.

Mrs. Wade found a clipping in her mother's diary on the date February 1, 1917. It concerns the death of Rev. Enos W. Erick who served as Lutheran pastor here from 1875 to 1880. The clipping from "The St. Joe News" reads as follows:

"Rev. Enos W. Erick was born in Pennsylvania, May 2nd, 1835, and died at his late home, Feb. 1st, 1917—81 years, 8 months, 29 days. He moved with his parents to Huntington, Co., Ind., at the age of 6 years. He united with the church at the age of 13. He was married to Sarah C. Hoffmire, Feb. 7, 1854. To this union were born 7 children, five boys and two girls. Five children having preceded him.

"He entered the gospel ministry at the age of 19 years. He organized at least two churches, the Erick Chapel and St. Joe congregations. He preached in school houses in early days going on horseback much of the time, and walking when it was too bad to take a horse out. He raised the 39 Company Indiana Volunteers and served as Captain in the Civil War, and was then promoted to chaplain of the regiment.

"He served Albion as his last charge and resigned about 8 years ago. He was active in the ministry for 55 years. He leaves one son, W. G. Erick, of this place; and one daughter, Mrs. Fred Hileman, of Elkhart, Ind.; one sister, Lucinda M. Shank, of Huntington, Ind., 7 grandchildren, 2 great grandchildren and a host of friends. His work has ended and he has gone to his reward. Funeral services were held from the Lutheran Church Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock Rev. A. K. Mumma, officiating, assisted by Rev. Valentine and Rev. W. S. Oberheiser, of Hobart, the latter speaking in the interest of the Synod. Interment in White City Cemetery. Henry Beams, director."

On the back of the clipping is an interesting headline and subhead:

"[illegible] Returns From the Canadian Wheat Crop"

"United States Settlers Becoming Rich On Western Canada Lands."

—So, what was much in the international news 58 years ago, as it is today.

Son Phil has his moments at WIFF radio. Being exposed to news for just about every one of his waking hours, he experiences the same kind of frustration I do occasionally when it is necessary to report facts, but the facts AND other circumstances sorts get to you.

So, Monday one of the ridiculous results of women's lib obviously led him to suggest to AM listeners to "tune in to our brother station on FM."

Lions Observe 35th Anniversary

—Andy Crow, reporter

Monday, October 27, 1975, at the Spencerville Community Building was the time and the place for the observance of the 35th anniversary of the founding of the Saint Joe Lions Club.

President Jerry Storer called the meeting to order by leading the Lions and Lionesses and special guests in singing one verse of "America" and giving the pledge of allegiance. A fine meal was served by the Community Club and enjoyed by all.

After dinner Tail Twister Ron Beard started the activities moving by holding a "raffle"—won by Walter Morr.

After a secretary and treasurer report showing income of $6970 and expenses of $4197 at the fair stand, the meeting moved to the anniversary recognition.

One of the highlights of the evening was the presentation of past presidents of the club and a comment or two by master of ceremonies Harold Murphy.

Among the guests were Lion and Mrs. George Sockrider and Lion Hubert L. Stackhouse of the Auburn club which was responsible for our existence and sponsored our club to charter 35 years ago.

Recognition of the sole remaining active Lion of the charter group, Willard Harni, was also a highlight of the evening. Lion Harni's memories of the history of our club are always an inspiration to the younger members of our club.

Region II Deputy District Governor Art Resler of Churubusco added his congratulations for the club and made a few short comments. Zone Chairman and Mrs. Charlie Capp of Butler were also present and Lion Capp presented some awards of the local club.

The meeting closed with a fine presentation of slides and sound by Lion Lavon Hart depicting the 35 year history of our club, its members and the various community projects.

The next meeting will be November 10 when the budget will be set for the coming year's activities.

Junior High Is ACAC Co-Champ

The DeKalb Eastside junior high football team recorded the best record ever for a junior high team with 6 wins, no losses and 1 tie.

They received a trophy as ACAC co—champs with Leo.

Coaches Bob Brown and Rex Bolinger cited balanced blocking and backfield speed as reasons for the 210 points scored over the season. Also, a strong defense allowed only 20 points.

Light Vote In Town Election; Part Of Election History Recalled

104 Saint Joe residents turned out to vote Tuesday to elect a town board and clerk—treasurer for the next four years.

The results were as follows:

Loretta Loy (R) defeated Bob Stiver (D) 52—48 for trustee Ward II.

Emma Frank (R) won over Rick Wannemacher (D) 86—18 for clerk—treasurer.

The turnout Tuesday was the second lowest in Saint Joe's voting history after candidates began running as "Democrat" or "Republican" in 1939. The November 4, 1943, issue of the Saint Joe News carried the following explanation of the change in party names:

"The city elections were always carried on as Citizens and Independents, until four years ago, when it was decided by Democratic leaders to swing St. Joe into line."

1971—136.
1967—154.
1963—124.
1959—138.
1955—115 (approximate).
1951—107 (snow, sleet, rain).
1947—124 (approximate).
1943—100 (approximate).
1939—162 (rain; first year as Republican and Democrat candidates).

Additional information in the November 4, 1943, issue of this paper also included the following, as presented by the late Fred B. Leighty who was editor at that time:

"The first election was held on January 1, 1899, to decide incorporation and at this time 105 votes were cast with 65 favoring incorporation and 40 opposed. The first election was held March 20, 1899, when Alex B. Filley, Samuel L. Widney and Abner Copp were elected trustees; Sylvester Widney, clerk; Herman H. Grubb, treasurer; and J. C. Fremont Abel, marshall. The first meeting of the board was held on March 25, 1899."

Blazettes, Pep Band To Perform For Boosters

DeKalb Eastside Band Boosters will meet Monday, November 10, at 7:30 p.m. in the high school cafetorium.

The Blazettes and Pep Band are scheduled to perform.

Band Booster members and other interested residents are invited to attend.

Blazers Win Final Game 7-3

The DeKalb Eastside Blazers ended their 1975 football season with a win, downing Leo by a 7—3 score Friday at Butler.

The Blazer touchdown came on a 95 yard drive with Larry McKown scoring scoring from the 1 yard line. Jeff Hudson kicked the extra point.

Leo then scored a field goal and that was it for the night.

The Blazers gained 252 yards rushing to 142 for Leo. Leo had 74 yards on passes.

McKown gained 125 yards in 23 carries to give him 1,217 yards gained for the season. He scored 15 touchdowns. Mike Wood gained 56 yards in 7 attempts Friday.

The Blazers' record for the season ended at 6 wins and 4 losses.

A week ago, the Angola Hornets downed the Blazers 36—21 after the locals came from behind at 20—7 to take a 21—20 lead. But two scoring passes in the fourth quarter gave the Hornets the win.

McKown, Wood and Paul Roberts scored touchdowns for the Blazers.

Mental Health Gifts Sought

The News Office at Saint Joe is again the collection depot for gifts for those in mental health institutions. The Christmas gift program for mental patients is a project in the county of the DeKalb County Association For Mental Health. Carolyn Watson of Auburn is county chairman.

The gift drive runs from October 20 through November 29. Two gifts of $3.00 value each are sought for each patient. Last year over 600 gifts were contributed by county residents.

Gifts should be new and unwrapped. Special attention is drawn to the "unwrapped" request, since in years past gifts were to be wrapped or gift wrap provided with each gift. This year the county committee will take care of the wrapping so that the gifts will be known for presentation to appropriate persons.

The Riverdale area, as with other areas in the county, has been given a list of nine patient names, meaning that 18 gifts are sought from this area. Any additional gifts above that number will be distributed according to patient needs.

Needed from the Riverdale area are:

4—spray deodorant for women
5—spray deodorant for men
4—Lady's stretch mittens
5—size 34 man's belt

Gifts may be dropped off at the News Office any time from now until November 29. They will be given to patients in DeKalb County institutions and to patients at the Fort Wayne State Hospital.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Harold and Alice Kagey visited a nursing home at Fort Wayne last week and brought me the information that Marjorie Ramsey will celebrate her 72nd birthday Tuesday, November 25. Her address is 1400 Medical Park Drive, Fort Wayne 46805.

Harold Murphy passes along the fact that there is a dog problem in the area. Strays are killing sheep. Dog owners should keep their pets confined or under control to help prevent the loss of livestock.

Ivan Brown found a key for a Yale lock lying in the street in front of the post office this week. It looks like a house key. The owner can claim it at the News Office.

The notice about a hearing on Vulcraft's bonding program appearing in this issue is not for another expansion. It is related to the expansion already completed.

—Just to keep things straight.

There may be others who are wondering whether I had any response to my recent comments about the marijuana problem. A few have inquired during the past couple of weeks.

The answer is yes, there was a response. Three worried mothers called to ask if their kids were involved. Two were relieved when I could say "no" but the third (who probably already knew) moaned when I reluctantly had to tell her "yes."

Unfortunately, it's not one of those things you can just go out and do something about. It's a matter which the kids must reset to themselves because it's a matter of self preservation, self respect and respect for parents and adults, one's own family primarily.

There were a couple or three other comments to support my comments, which helps. It's not a pleasant task to report destructive activities, especially when it's kids and their self-destruction.

—Oh, one other response. The kids now remind me to take a deep breath before I go into the post office. No antagonism—just putting me on.

PTO Tuesday

All parents, grandparents, other relatives and friends of students at Riverdale School are invited to an Open House to be held next Tuesday, November 18, in conjunction with the regular PTO meeting. The PTO will meet at 7:00 to 7:30 p.m. in the cafetorium with the Open House to follow until 9:00 p.m.

Butler Elementary School will have its Open House a week later. Both events will have a bicentennial theme and will coincide with National Education Week. Refreshments will be served at both places.

Principal Charles Bay said this is a good opportunity to show all the classrooms, see the work being done by students, meet the faculty and view the new additions at both buildings.

Business Open House Set For November 15

Underwriters Assurance Group of Saint Joe and John Rogers, attorney, will hold an open house Saturday, November 15, in the Professional Building at Saint Joe. The open house will be held from noon to 4 p.m.

The Professional Building is located on Washington Street, the main street of Saint Joe, and in years past housed the Saint Joe Valley Bank and the Roy I. Bowser Store.

With the opening of these offices, residents in the Riverdale area will have convenient access to all types of insurance, bonding and legal counsel.

Tim Kuker and Mark Schnabel are associates of the Underwriters Assurance Group of Saint Joe.

Saturday Movies For Riverdale Kids, Too

Saturday movies are being shown in the old gym building at Butler under the supervision of Rudy Fabik, supervisor of the Butler park program.

To give kids from the Riverdale area an opportunity to see the movies, Frank Sechler of the local pickle processing plant is paying the expense of bus service from Spencerville and Saint Joe to Butler and back. The only cost is 50 cents admission for those who wish to attend the Saturday movies. All ages are welcomed.

Saturday of this week the feature is "Davey Crockett" with cartoons also to be shown. A feature movie plus cartoons are planned for every Saturday, Mr. Fabik said.

A bus will leave Chaney's Restaurant at 10:30 a.m., leave Hoy's Dairy Store at 10:40 and arrive at Butler in time for the 11 a.m. showing of movies. Kids will return at about 1:30 p.m.

Harvest Supper Planned For November 22

Members of the Spencerville United Methodist Church are planning a "Thanksgiving Harvest Supper" to be served at the church Saturday, November 22, in the educational unit.

Serving will start at 4:30 p.m.

Prices are $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for children.

A bake sale and bazaar will be held in conjunction with the harvest dinner.

Charles Arnett

Funeral services will be held Saturday for Charles Arnett, 48, of north of Saint Joe who died Wednesday of a heart attack. He had suffered a severe attack several months ago but had been active theafter in his plumbing and heating business plus farming.

Mr. Arnett was born January 24, 1927, the son of MM Russell Arnett of R1 Saint Joe. He married Edith Russi April 3, 1948.

Survivors include his wife; his parents; four children, Diane Updike of Brentwood, New Jersey, Charles of R1 Auburn, Christine Bryant of Fort Wayne and Mark at home; and one grandchild.

Services will be held Saturday at 11 a.m. at Immaculate Conception Church in Auburn where the deceased was a member. He was also a member of the Saint Joe Concord Township Volunteer Fire Department and was a veteran of World War II.

Monsignor Leo Hoffman will officiate at the funeral and burial will be in Auburn Catholic Cemetery.

Mr. Arnett was at the DeKalb Farm Bureau Coop east of Waterloo when he suffered the attack.

EMS Services Shown Students

Volunteers from the Emergency Medical Services from DeKalb County presented a public education program to the two elementary schools in the eastern school district last week.

Presenting the program were William McAlpin, director of the DeKalb County EMS, of Auburn; Steve Monroe of Saint Joe; Jody Zimmerman and Fred Harper of Butler.

Equipment and materials used by EMS were demonstrated to the youngsters by Mrs. Zimmerman and Mr. Monroe. This included the explanation of patient transfer equipment, cardio—pulminary resuscitation equipment and extrication equipment.

Two movies, "Wanted Alive" and "Cry For Help," were shown to the students by Mr. Harper and Mr. McAlpin. The movies demonstrated the training technicians must take before completing their course, as well as simulated emergencies taken care of by EMS.

Coburn Corners CC Seeks To Raise $2700 For Korean Orphan Gifts

Members of Coburn Corners Church of Christ are this year attempting to raise $2,700 to buy clothing, food and other necessities for the nearly 200 orphans who have no one to remember them at Christmastime in Inchon and Geon orphanages in Korea.

The "Operation Christmas Cheer" project is administered by missionary Jaikwan Ahn. A similar Christmas project was sponsored last year by the local congregation.

Jaikwan and his wife, soonok, have been missionaries in Seoul, Korea, since 1969. Both orphanages looked after by the Ahns are Christian and are supported primarily by congregations of the Church of Christ. The Korean government pays only 10% of orphan expenses, leaving the remainder to be raised by other means such as the Christmas appeal.

Ruth Wilmot and Doris Mann are in charge of the fund drive. Because of the high import duty on merchandise gifts, cash is sought from donors and it is sent to the Eighth Army Chaplains who make the necessary purchases.

Contributions should be made by December 1. Checks may be sent to: Coburn Corners Church of Christ, R1 Saint Joe, Indiana 46785. They should be made payable to "Operation Christmas Cheer."

Despite the high import duty, the congregation sent 84 knitted stocking caps last year. This year 90 caps are ready for shipment.

Sports Banquet, ACAC Coaches Bring Honors For EHS Athletes

The DeKalb Eastside Fall Sports Banquet was held last week with a potluck dinner in the cafetorium.

Larry McKown, son of MM Larry McKown of Saint Joe, was named most valuable player for his outstanding efforts on the football field.

Jim Burns, son of MM William Burns of RR Butler, was named the cross country team's most valuable player.

Janet Willebey was named the most valuable player for the girls' volleball team.

ACAC coaches named running back Larry McKown and offensive lineman Gary Sipe of DeKalb Eastside High School to the conference all—star offensive team. McKown was also named on the all—star defensive squad.

Honorable mention for their defensive efforts went to Eastsiders Chuck Timmerman, Stan Hall and Phil Staley. Dave Dove was given honorable mention for his offensive play.

Six Blazers were named to the all—stars, with Woodlan, conference champs placing five on the team, Heritage four, and Southern Wells and Leo three each.

50 PLUS CLUB
—Galen Markle, secretary

The Fifty Plus Club met in the basement of St. Peter Lutheran Church in Spencerville October 23 with MM Faye Wilmot, Mildred Jarrett and Kathryn Shockley hosting.

At 6:30 p.m. the group was called to order and after prayer by Mildred Jarrett all enjoyed the bountiful potluck suppee.

Mrs. Wilmot then introduced her daughter in law, Mrs. Jack Wilmot, and her daughters and friend who entertained us with several musical selections which were greatly enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Jarrett then introduced Ana Kagey who showed pictures and told of her experience as a missionary for eight months in India. Her pictures and talk were very interesting and enjoyable.

Our president, Ida Reed, then conducted a short business meeting. She named our club members who had October birthdays and their birthday offering was received. She also told of several historical events which occurred in October and read several poems.

Each present received an apple as a Halloween treat. The meeting was then adjourned.

The next meeting will be held Thursday, November 20, with Elva Hoover, Alma Ransom, Kathryn Shockley and Betty Rediger as hostesses.

School 'Self-Study' Needs Parent. And. Student. Input

The recent self study in our school district had as its purpose maintaining or improving the quality of education in the district. Publicity has appeared in this paper as recently as two weeks ago about the program when a visiting team of teachers and educators were in the community. Self studies are required every seven years by members of the sponsoring organization, the North Central Association.

The purpose is good. But I think there is too much of an opportunity to give schools a pat on the back rather than give much criticism, since the association is made up of schools. Who in education tells others in education "you're not doing the job" these days??? And, as in contract negotiations between teacher groups and school boards, the public is totally in the dark as to what is said, suggested, debated and so on.

—But the public pays education's bills.

There are two suggestions I would make to the association concerning the self study program. One is that, in the months devoted to the self study, participation by laymen (parents and adults) be made an integral part of the effort. I know the answer I'll get to that: "Laymen ARE asked to participate in the study." I know that; I was asked to participate this year by Frank Sechler who had originally been asked to distribute questionnaires to individuals of his choice in this area. BUT — the questionnaire I was given to fill out had to do with general conditions in the community possibly related to school matters, NOT with opinions and suggestions directly related to the educational program in the school system. Frank had added his own question to allow comments as the individual might wish to make. The significant thing is that the self study team didn't provide the opportunity; someone else did on their own.

For that reason, I didn't bother to return the questionnaire; it didn't have a thing to do with classroom education primarily. My impression is that the layman's part in the self study is just a courtesy; certain individuals are asked to distribute the questionnaire to a few others to give the impression that school patrons are a part of the self study. The content of the questions brings that impression. The impression includes the feeling that the self study is comparatively worthless—unfortunately.

The second suggestion is that opinions be sought FROM GRADUATED STUDENTS. Especially significant would be the outlook of those who continue their education at the college and university level—but I would not say their outlook is any more important than that of many who do not go into "higher" education. You don't need a degree to be intelligent, to be conscious of what's happening — or not happening — in the everyday world as related to your ability to fit in or find a place in society. I think our high school graduates could provide some very constructive suggestions if they were included in the self study effort.

As it now stands, there appears to be too much of a tendency toward what you might call a "whitewash" in the self studies as they have been programmed. Fear of embarrassment for a faculty member if a certain department or subject is thought to be weak is an obvious hindrance. And so, the self study is made under very controlled circumstances wherein neither school patrons nor graduate students are asked for opinions about the quality of the school's overall program.

It's rather strange in a way. The same teachers who are protected from possible embarrassment under a real self study are not embarrassed to threaten or condone a strike, picket line or defiance of a court order when THEY want something for themselves. Why should the paying public be denied the opportunity to say what IT wants when it comes to evaluating local education in a self study effort???

Improvements aren't made under a "loose" approach and pats on the back. They come from disciplined action and constructive criticism sincerely and reasonably offered. THEN comes the pat on the back, after such criticism is heeded and improvement is noted.

Isn't that what "education" is all about ???

'2% Clubs' Fill Need

A lot of attention has been directed recently toward the alleged or implied "corrupt practice" of levying a 2% fee on certain elected, appointed or hired public servants. Congressman J. Edward Roush is offering legislation to eliminate such "2% clubs." In fact, his proposal would make such practice a federal crime.

(What happened to states' rights and "home rule"?)

On the other side is the comment by Indiana Governor Otis Bowen that such a system is acceptable if it is run right.

If you are impressed by Mr. Roush's "reform" suggestion, consider these questions:

When was the last time YOU made a contribution to your political party organization?

Do you make regular contributions to your party's treasury?

If you are not a regular contributor, or if you have never made such a contribution, would do you think you might like to attend election campaigns?

Careful now. If the answer comes out, "From those who have money and can afford to contribute substantial sums. I haven't felt there was a need for me to contribute" — if that is your answer to the third question, then why is there so much public resentment against large contributors? Why have corporations and some individuals become valuable for providing campaign funds which YOU haven't helped to pick up the tab?

Remember, "election reform" (which was picked up as a political football due to Watergate, if you ask me) is intended to ELIMINATE the chance of gaining favor or advantage through political contributions. The idea was sold to the public primarily by those already in Congressional offices, and it sounded good.

But it hasn't worked. Instead of reform with a "fair" system, it came out so complicated that it would take months or years for lawyers to determine just what is or is not allowed under "reform" legislation. And it is a known fact that those already in office have a distinct advantage over anyone trying to unseat the incumbents.

This is "reform"?

The public has been sold a bill of goods in the matter of election financing. The public did not ask itself some vital questions before being led into the current confusion of "2% clubs". And the primary vital question is: "How much of MY contribution to the party each year?" The answer definitely is NOT the "checkoff" privilege on your federal income tax return. How any member of the United States Senate or House of Representatives can condone their practice is far beyond me. Why? Simply because the American citizen thereby contributes to ALL candidates, ALL parties, whether the citizen supports them or not. This supposed "easy way" to finance election campaigns is a direct threat to freedom of choice.

There is nothing basically crooked or unfair about a "2% club." If you, as a candidate, expect party support, you must support the party. The money must come from somewhere and the general public is not inclined to make political fund contributions a regular part of its planned expenditures.

I hope Congressman Roush takes another look at his proposal. He has been the most inclined to have an open mind on such matters in the past, as compared to Indiana Senators Birch Bayh and Vance Hartke.

And once again, Governor Bowen has stated an opinion which indicates his common sense and his knowledge and understanding of what a situation involves in total.

—that some five or six street lights have been turned off by order of the town board because there were not adequate funds appropriated to cover the full year's expense. It is assumed they will be back in operation again after the first of the year. While the rate per light went up in 1973 when a total general rate increase went into effect, town street light costs are not affected by fuel cost adjustment factors, according to William R. Nimmo, I&M district manager at Kendallville. Street light costs are exempt from the fuel adjustment factor. A complete new lighting system installed about six years ago has provided Saint Joe with as desirable a lighting system as any small town could seek. There are virtually no areas in town where the new lights have not provided nighttime visibility on streets, sidewalks or private property. Included in the expansion program six years ago was the installation of three lights on State Road 1 just outside the south town limits. The purpose was to provide additional light for protection against vandalism at the Riverdale School as a cooperative gesture in view of the use the community has had for many years of school property for recreation purposes.

The metal hit his arm with such force that the arm was not only broken but it slammed into his glasses causing facial cuts and bruises. Had he been but inches closer to the wheel, the plate would have hit him in the face.

—that funeral services for Edith Wade McGrath were held at St. Paul's United Methodist Church in Melbourne, Florida, November 3. Survivors include her husband, Milton; a son, Kevin; her mother, Mrs. Audrey Wade of Spencerville; and two sisters, Mrs. Gale T. Bowser of Spencerville and Mrs. Russell Hellen of Memphis, Tennessee.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Ted.

This has been a long time coming! I really didn't forget your thoughtfulness in sending the back issues of the News last winter during our transfer and moving. There were many reasons I didn't send you this candy and then it got so hot here when I did feel better.

We surely hope Mike is doing much better now and recovering nicely—we were so sorry to hear that he was hurt so badly. Do hope they find out who did it. It is really hard to believe that it could happen in St. Joe. But then—where is it safe!

Do hope you enjoy the candy the people here in Arizona and California think is the best.

Sincerely and thanks again.

Marcelleen Hennes

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

When I passed the Arnett place this week on a trip to Butler, I found it difficult to believe that Charlie is no longer among the living. He was so young. This is a sad thought, but it also has a positive side to it. The positive is in the pleasure remembered of his friendship, the knowledge that he has a wife and family who are living reminders of his fulfilled responsibilities as husband and father.

I never saw Charlie mad. I never heard him speak ill of any other person. I'm pretty sure he wasn't perfect; but he was so much a positive and constructive man, in a quiet way, that it is impossible for me to name a fault.

Most of my association with him had to do with business, we were not "social" friends. Yet, it also was not a "strictly business" sort of thing.

I think the greatest loss to everyone is that someone you could depend on is no longer here. When we had a fire in the house last year, Charlie was the first one there, not waiting for a smoke mask but instead puting on a kerchief around his mouth and nose so he could do what he could as quickly as possible. And when I had to call on him because of furnace problems in the house or at our church, he was there to help in a matter of minutes sometimes, or maybe an hour. "Dependable" is the word for him.

It may sound inappropriate to take a familiar expression from a comic page, but I mean it in a sincere and appreciative way when I express the thought that popped in my mind at the time of his death:

"You're a good man, Charlie Arnett."

Harvest Supper Planned For November 22

Members of the Spencerville United Methodist Church are planning a "Thanksgiving Harvest Supper" to be served at the church Saturday, November 22, in the educational unit.

Serving will start at 4:30 p.m.

Prices are $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for children.

A bake sale and bazaar will be held in conjunction with the harvest dinner.

MEMORIAL

In loving memory our dear daughter, sister and Mother, Linda Lou Hahn, formerly of St. Joe and Auburn, and who was residing in Allegan, Michigan, at the time of her death on November 23, 1974.

Some call it death—this seeming endless sleep;

We call it birth—the soul at last set free.

'Tis hampered not by space or time—you weep.

Why weep at death? This immortality.

Farewell dear one—'twill not be long, your work is done.

Now may peace rest with thee, your kindly thoughts and deeds—they will live on.

This is not death—'Tis immortality.

Right To Work Committee Fights To Prevent Union Take-over

Apparently stung deeply by recent legal action to wipe out compulsory unionism and the use of workers' dues for political purposes, lawyers for 10 labor unions filed suit recently in Washington in a bid to destroy both the National Right To Work Legal Defense Foundation and its founding organization, the National Right To Work Committee.

The suit was announced in a press conference during which right—to—work supporters were assailed as "dogs nipping at your heels," "animals," "right—wing," "ultra—right," and "idiots," and the now—familiar charge that leaders of the organization are "members of not only these two organizations, but the John Birch Society, the Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers, the Farm Bureau."

The unions accuse the Committee and Foundation, which are separately financed, of illegally conspiring with employers by using tax—exempt employer contributions to finance anti—union lawsuits.

In their complaint, filed in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia, the unions allege that this violates the Landrum—Griffin Act, which states "no interested employer or employer association shall directly or indirectly finance, encourage or participate in, except as a party," and "action in any court" instituted by union members.

The chief spokesman for the union lawyers, Joseph Rauh, one—time chairman of the Americans for Democratic Action (ADA), said the Foundation is currently supporting 20 court cases, filed on behalf of individual workers. He said although there are exceptions, most of these are "against any form of union security." (Union security is Rauh's euphemism for the compulsory union shop, which requires all employes to join the union or lose their jobs, or the so—called agency shop, which extracts a fee equal to union membership dues from all workers as a form of compensation for the union's "bargaining" on their behalf.)

Although Rauh was the chief lawyer—spokesman for the unions, Stephen J. Schlossberg, chief counsel for the United Auto Workers, was by far the most acerbic legal representative at the press gathering.

"It is very expensive to defend against these dogs nipping at your heels," said Schlossberg. "As the Machinists Union can tell you, they've gone through literally thousands of dollars in meaningless discovery with those animals."

The Right To Work Foundation has indeed been more than just a thorn in the side of the International Association of Machinists. Backed by the Foundation, laborers at McDonnell Douglas and North American Rockwell plants in California have had suits pending against the alleged use of their dues without their consent by IAM for political campaigns. These suits have caused a good deal of legal headaches to the IAM union officials.

In addition, a few weeks ago Florida airlines mechanic, supported by the Foundation, filed suit against the IAM, charging its officials with harrassing him for his refusal to display hostility toward other employes who refused to take part in a strike against National Airlines. The suit asks for $500,000 in damages for the union's working clandestinely to secure his demotion.

Schlossberg also aimed his verbal darts at legislators who actively take part in fund—raising efforts on behalf of the right—to—work groups, especially Freshman Rep. Steven Symms (R.—Idaho).

"I wrote him a letter," the UAM attorney boasted, "and said he ought to check his files, because some idiot is lending his letterhead to the ultra—right in this country. But I didn't get any answer to that."

Schlossberg also claimed that the Committee and Foundation had members who were also linked with the John Birch Society. When "Human Events" asked the lawyer for the names of these individuals, he replied, "I don't have that information now."

Reed Larson, a prime target of the 10 unions for his long—term activities on behalf of voluntary union membership, told "Human Events" that he would not know who Schlossberg was referring to in his charge.

"We don't evaluate people on that basis—race, creed, color or otherwise," he said. "They're all good people who believe in the freedom of the individual. I don't know of anybody who is, but I don't ask people. And I don't know if we have any members of the American Civil Liberties Union or not. I expect we've got some people who are members of the National Council of Churches, and that certainly is a group that is out of step with many of the things we are doing. I don't know. I don't think so, but it certainly doesn't make any difference."

"Since the sole function of the Right To Work Foundation is to help the rank and file worker when he is kicked around by union officials, they — the union officials — naturally resent this and will do their utmost to cut off such help," he said.

He added: "While we are not surprised at the officials of the 10 unions who are disturbed by our activities on behalf of the rank and file workers, we are surprised that a self—described libertarian, such as Joseph Rauh, should join forces with those who would take away the civil liberties of the working man."

In addition to the IAM and the UAW, the unions listed in the complaint are the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes, the American Federation of Teachers, the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, Cesar Chavez's United Farm Workers Union, the Sheet Metal Workers, the Laborers' International Union of North America, the Communications Workers, and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers.

'Rapping' With Youth About. . . .

What Are Children Worth?

Some of the feature articles appearing in newspapers and magazines from time to time indicate that you, the "learners" in our educational system, have been misled in some instances about history. As recently as the youth of your parents, history has seemingly been either ignored or a one-sided outlook presented. For instance, it has been a popular statement in recent years to say that "today's youth are facing more pressures and more problems than their parents did." I have heard the specific example stated something like this, in talking about our involvement in world conflicts: "In World War II, you (the parental generation) know what you were fighting against; you had greater unity because the enemy was obvious." They mean by "enemy" Germany and Japan, and specifically Adolph Hitler and the Nazis. It's almost as if Hitler was a typical German and the suicide bombers of the Japanese Navy were typical Japanese.

'Tain't so.

Hitler was a fanatic. He came into power because Germany was looking for some hope, some inspiration, to bring them out of the depression they were thrown into at the conclusion or World War I represented by the dismantling of their industrial structure. True, it was a "war machine" to a great extent. But it meant jobs and employment.

I ask you: what is the United States depending upon today but the jobs and employment represented by our "defense" program? How many adults, right here in our own area, would be so enthused about a drastic reduction in "defense" spending when such a cut would mean, for instance, Magnavox or Harvester NOT getting a new defense contract? Other industry would be involved, too. That makes the picture a bit different, doesn't it?

Thus, the outlook or "complacency" as it might seem of many Germans becomes more understandable when Hitler began his rise to power. And in the military conflict that followed, it was one man and his Nazi MINORITY GROUP which dominated the picture. We were fighting Hitler, true. But he controlled Germany because of practical reasons in a downtrodden nation, rather than from support of his "ideals" of a super race.

One of the things you probably have heard about (or maybe you haven't and that's our problem) in connection with Hitler and the Nazi movement is the youth camps set up to indoctrinate and train young men and women to serve the state. But it probably wasn't stated that way. Instead, it probably was so stated that attending the camps was a way to serve their homeland, a way to provide useful training by "experts". Young women were encouraged to have babies fathered by the young "elite" male, meaning those who were products of youth camps. No, marriage wasn't encouraged — just having babies — and they were then taken from the mother to be raised and trained by the state by the "experts." The family unit was destroyed; "love" was only for one's country (Germany under the Nazis), not for young man and young woman, not for husband and wife, not for parent and child — to repeat, not for parent and child. There were still the "old fashioned" Germans and their families, but they had a rough time of it, fighting the appeal of a "better life" aimed toward young minds by Nazi teachings.

To some, the following comparison will seem "far out, 'way far out." Don't try to compare detail for detail; think in terms of overall relationships.

I consider the trend to "day care centers" in our nation today every bit as dangerous to the family unit as was Hitler's pointed effort with youth camps to indoctrinate youth into subservience. The fact that a House Committee of the United States Congress has approved "tax breaks" for working parents who leave their children with someone else indicates a trend to let someone else other than the parents raise the children of those parents in the little tots' formative years. And our government, through the Congress, is encouraging the movement through proposed tax breaks and increased federal funds for "day care centers."

I shudder at the inhuman attitude of many of today's parents who say they "must" work to make ends meet. A more honest reason is: we want more luxuries.

Some say they are doing it for their kids. What ABOUT those kids? Is it any wonder that, despite the life of plenty they enjoy, so many young people feel insecure? Our nation has based its existence on the motto: "In God we trust." We have put that declaration on our currency. But there is every reason to believe that many Americans DON'T trust in God; they trust instead in the money on which the motto is printed.

Tax breaks and day care centers are wrong, if you ask me. They break up the family unit, the home. That's just what Hitler tried in order to maintain his plan for an elite German society. No, I'm not calling those who work in the day care centers "Nazis." But I do say that, as licensed personnel, they compare with the coaches in German youth camps because they represent a teaching force and influence other than Mom and Dad. We give it a "nice" name, but the result is the same — influence by those who quite often consider themselves experts more capable than parents in guiding children.

The answer to the matter is that we must put the family first, as God intended it to be. We must de-emphasize "things" (money, material wealth) and put person-to-person family and community relationships first. And I definitely DON'T mean through a government program or tax breaks.

The suggestions from some people and some Congressmen (including Indiana's Senator Birch Bayh) that day care centers ought to be increased in numbers is an implied endorsement of "working mothers" as an acceptable part of American society. Perhaps in later years, a job for Mom is OK. But while there are little tots and grade schoolers in the family, the mother's place is in the home. (Of course, certain conditions provide a few exceptions.) Her presence is what gives basic security to little ones. If a woman is not willing to submit herself to that obligation willingly and lovingly, she shouldn't bring any children into this world.

There is another point, a practical one. If a tax break is given for child care for working mothers, that means there will be less tax revenue from them which must be made up from other taxpayers. Why should I pay for their child care exemption privilege with higher taxes??? If they want to work, let them pay their expenses, just as I must pay mine.

Obviously, kids, not many adults are ready to give up material wealth and possessions for the sake of their children. How about you, a few years from now????

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Betty Brown reports finding a little boy's brown corduroy coat with a pair of red mittens at the hardware Wednesday of last week. The owner can pick them up at the hardware.

There is nothing personal in this because it involves several people through the years.

But I cannot undrstand why the first game of the basketball season ALWAYS must be on Thanksgiving Eve. It is my understanding that the school board several years ago set aside Wednesdays during the school year when school activities were NOT to be scheduled. This was to allow for other community activities without conflict with school activities.

But for some reason, Wednesday, Thanksgiving Eve, has been used for the basketball opener.

—And then we blame "the church" for its faltering influence in the lives of young people.

Readers know that I am a strong sports fan. But I become "anti—sports" when those activities become to extensive that they interfere with other important aspects of our total living.

I have mentioned a few times in the past the stacks of papers and clippings lying around the News Office. They accumulate because I see this or that item or comment from other sources and I intend to make use of them. But they just keep piling up. If you have been in the shop recently, you know what I mean. Right now I have some of these clippings under my chair at the linotype, and sometimes under my feet.

So, to eliminate some of the mess, I'll just reach down and pick out some of the pieces of paper and tell why they struck my fancy:

Headline: "Gulf Employe Reveals Campaign Contributions"—a story from UPI about campaign contributions by Gulf to members of BOTH major political parties. But they gave details only about such gifts to Republicans and speak of cash payments made in a hotel men's room and behind a barn, making it sound very sinister. On the list of recipients were Democrats Wilbur Mills, Henry Jackson, Vance Hartke, Howard Cannon, James Burke, Julia Hansen—but detailed accounts are related only to Republicans.

Biased national news media tactics? You bet.

Statement by Senator Vance Hartke in a speech at the Hillel Foundation November 2:

"Americans should not be lulled into a false sense of mutual friendship with the Soviet Union. She is neither friend or ally. She is a traditional adversary whose vital interests differ from our own even though we share the desire to minimize dangerously overt conflict that could result in war."

If we are to protect ourselves against untrustworthy Russian leadership, we must be strong. Yet it is the Senator's party which controls Congress and it is his party which just in the past few weeks de—activated an anti—missile protective system.

From the weekly review of his voting record sent to the news media each week by Congressman J. Edward Roush:

"HR 7222. Federal Employees' Life Insurance Benefits. Passage of the bill to increase to 50 per cent from 33 1—3 per cent the contribution of the federal government to the costs of government employees' life insurance programs. Rejected 173—225. Mr. Roush voted yea."

Mr. Roush is always an effective campaigner in his "walks" throughout the Fourth District by which he associates himself with the average voter. Yet, voting to use TAXPAYERS' money (they call it "contribution of the federal government")—how can he justify using TAXPAYERS' money to pay half the cost of life insurance for government employees when government employees pay absolutely NOTHing to the taxpayers' life insurance program?

(Note: Mr. Roush is fighting the proposed massive "Wabash Canal" project in Indiana, opposition with which I heartily agree. It's another potential bureaucratic "monster" in addition to involving destruction of natural resources including thousands of acres of land—all for "the almighty dollar.")

News story: "The 1976 Indiana Legislature will get a recommendation from the Public Utilities Study Committee to utilize a new agency combining federal, state and local government and private organizations in providing emergency fuel and heat assistance to poor people."

What? Another government bureau? Another stamp program when the bureaus we have and the stamp program we have are not efficient and are riddled with abuse? Also, would I qualify as a Hoosier "on low income who cannot pay rising electric and fuel bills"?—since I am still paying on LAST YEAR'S home fuel bill? They're barking up the wrong tree, if you ask me.

"Mosquito Control Bill Proposed." A headline for another UPI story from Indianapolis that the "sleeping sickness" scare of the past summer has prompted a bill to create districts to control mosquitoes. I say "nonsense." Here is ANOTHER government bureau which would mean more government workers which would mean more taxes. If they want to protect the public from insects, we don't need a government bureau controlling districts. We need the release of DDT, the most effective chemical our local "mosquito district" had over the years in its locally paid—for mosquito control program. People and communities can take care of themselves if they are allowed to. Granted: the use of DDT can be harmful, if we can believe government reports. But it seems to me that DDT CAN be used if sensible precautions are taken about quantities.

Headline: "Economy Rises 11.2 Per Cent." The rise is measured in terms of the "Gross National Product (total of business transactions). With an inflationary dollar constantly going down in value, the GNP is a meaningless figure, except to sound impressive. What is really important is: how much do you get for the dollar you spend? "Purchasing power" is the name of the game, not "Gross National Product."

Headline: "Bacon May Be Taken Out of Grocery Stores." A spokesman for the Agriculture Department says that a preservative, sodium nitrite, can combine with other chemicals to form nitrosamines, "among the most potent cancer causing agents yet discovered." What is not stated is how much bacon must be consumed to create the danger level of chemical combinations feared. So, government puts out another "scare" item about food products with scant detailed information. Question: instead of taking bacon out of the grocery stores, why not take the sodium nitrite out of the bacon???

—Forgive me. That's too simple.

Headline: "Unstuffed Turkey Safer." A story from Virginia Knauer, Special Assistant to the President and Director Office of Consumer Affairs, Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Another "food scare" incident to show how ridiculous our bureaucratic system has become. For CENTURIES we have been stuffing turqeys before roasting them, and I have never heard of any problems because of the practice. So, in this era of enlightenment, we the taxpayers are paying someone in the $30,000 bracket (a guess) to tell us what instead should be passed along from mother to daughter in food preparation or taught in the home ec program in schools—that certain precautions must be observed in preparing ANY food. If you're a women's libber, just to please you I'll add that the boys ought to be given the same information, too. But, quit stuffing the turkey before roasting? Nonsense.

Note: remember the cranberry scare of several years ago? It turned out to be a false alarm—unless you intended to eat cranberries 24 hours a day for days and weeks and months.

Headline: "Federal Mortgage Subsidy Program Set up; Aimed at Low, Middle Income Families." Help for homeowners in the $9,000 to $11,000 a year income bracket are involved in this. A reduction in the interest rate from 9.5 per cent to 5 per cent is one of the benefits. The government will subsidize the difference—which means that the taxpayer NOT involved in the program will pay not only his own mortgage interest on his own property but also the 4.5 per cent interest on the subsidized homeowners' mortgage. With the "poverty" income level going up and up each year, more and more Americans are becoming wards of the state—more and more Americans who think they are "independent" are actually on welfare.

—But the programs SOUND good, don't they???

Headline: "To Tell the Truth" on a column from Newspaper Enterprise Association. An item to point out that, contrary to what you and I have believed all along, the Congressional Record is NOT a record of what was said in Senate and House deliberations from day to day. The Congressmen have had the opportunity to change or remove what they please before the Congressional Record is published. Well, what do you know—and many of these Congressmen were raising hell about the Watergate "coverup"! Republican Senator Bob Packwood of Oregon is one of the principal sponsors of a resolution which would require that any changes, alterations or additions be so designated by a different type face, and any unidentified changes be limited to grammar and not substance.

Headline: "Little Being Done To Clean Up Air." Environmental Protection Agency chief John Quarles is quoted in that article and he mentions in particular the automobile and its polluting qualities. S'funny. I'm certain I've read articles stating that, compared to cars made in 1965 or thereabouts, later models have cut down on certain pollutants by as much as 75 per cent. I don't get it.

Headline following the November elections: "Voters In No Mood To Increase Spending." Oh boy—and they turn right around and at the same time vote more Democrats into office than Republicans, even though it has been the Democrat Party which for over 40 years has promoted the idea, "We can SPEND our way to prosperity!"

87 Visit 'DC'

87 juniors and seniors from DeKalb Eastside High School flew to Washington, D.C., Wednesday of last week to tour the nation's capital. Three faculty members accompanied the group including Marcia Pullen (economics and government), Al Pengeot (United States history), and Jerry Zonker (guidance).

The group left Baer Field at 7:30 a.m. and landed at Washington National Airport at 8:45. Boarding two 50 passenger tour buses, the group visited the Bureau of Engraving and Printing where they saw stacks of paper currency, postage stamps and government bonds being printed. At 10 a.m. they toured the White House, then met Congressman J. Edward Roush of the Fourth District at the Capitol Building where they were photographed on the east steps of the House of Representatives.

Lunch was followed by a tour of the Smithsonian Museums of Technology and History. A visit was made to the Washington Monument, plus a study of the city itself.

The group saw the changing of the guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery. They visited the graves of the late President John F. Kennedy, and his brother, the late Senator Robert Kennedy.

Other steps were made at the Lincoln Memorial and the National Archives. Just before leaving for home, the group saw the Kennedy Center for Performing Arts.

Title IX Invades Privacy

Did you read the notice published in this paper a few weeks ago about the procedures to follow for "anyone who thinks he or she has a grievance i.e. one sex or the other is being wronged as per that which is spelled out in Federal Title IX"? A grievance committee has been set up in the school district because of federal regulations.

I wonder if it has occurred to anyone that, through these regulations, invasion of privacy IS MANDATORY if you have a grievance. It shows that government is contradictory, because there is legislation now on the books and more proposed to supposedly guarantee one's "right to privacy" at the same time that other government regulations on school matters expose private affairs to other people.

The grievance committee is made up of two school patrons having children in school, two students from the particular school that is involved in the grievance, and two faculty members from the school that is involved in the grievance. It means—if you have a grievance (something is wrong or unfair, in your opinion), you cannot discuss it privately with school officials and any others who might be involved in order to work the situation out by mutual agreement. Instead, you must make your situation known to six other people. There are those who obviously think this is a good procedure or we wouldn't have it forced on the schools of the nation. I call it a breakdown, a destruction, in private matters—an invasion of privacy—and another liberty taken away from you and me.

Suppose I have a complaint about a classroom condition, or the relationship between a teacher and our son in school matters, or whatever else may bother me OR school personnel. We are not to talk to one another and with consultation with the principal or superintendent to work the matter out, if I read the information correctly. Instead, we are to get a printed form, go through meetings with six other people FIRST, then the principal, then the superintendent and finally the school board. If I wish to avoid embarrassment to myself or to anyone else, what chance is there with so many people brought into the picture BY GOVERNMENT EDICT, not by mutual consent of the parties involved?

I have no visible evidence right at hand, but I would suspect that this is a product of the efforts of militant teachers and educators who have successfully, thus far, taken responsibility and authority away from school boards, principals and superintendents. This has been done by pushing legislators to institute programs which virtually eliminate the right of school administration to make decisions without having to go into detailed and lengthy explanations of why those decisions are made. Primary situations which brought the "right" to a hearing for a teacher who was not offered a new contract has expanded now to ALL situations, involving ANYONE in school-related problems.

The move has a high price tag. Consider this. In our own school district, the combined basic salaries of superintendent, principals and assistant principal total just under $76,000 for last year — that's right, seventy-six thousand dollars — according to the annual report published in August. These salaries fall in the "administrative" category which in the past has included resolving problem situations as they developed. Our elected school board has had the responsibility to hire these administrators on the basis of the administrators' good and sound judgment in all matters, including grievance situations. When necessary, the elected board has established or affirmed school policies.

These are now, in effect, FORMER responsibilities. Because now, under the mandatory grievance program, such matters are not only made public but they are also taken out of the hands of those who are getting paid to do that job. What sense is there in paying salaries in the $20,000 to $30,000 bracket for administrators who can't administrate? What control does the school administration have over the quality of education in the system if every move they make can be made a matter of "proving" a condition to be fact? We have been forced to become so legalistic in school matters that it is virtually impossible for school administration to exercise its judgment of a total situation. And it is judgment, not facts alone, which ultimately determines how strong a school system will be.

The saddest part is this, that any parent who has a reasonable grievance will probably NOT do anything about it because of the red tape involved and the intrusion into a private matter by a mandatory committee of six, including of all things, two students!

This is an "un-American activity" if ever there was one.

Next week: "We're all afraid."

Kennedy-Johnson 'Bugging'

—by William Safire, in the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette, November 24, 1975.

ROBERT KENNEDY AUTHORIZED 'TAP'

On Oct. 10, 1963, the then-attorney general of the United States put his personal signature on a document that launched and legitimatized one of the most horrendous abuses of federal police power in this century.

In Sen. Frank Church's subcommittee hearing room this week, the authorized wiretapping and subsequent unauthorized bugging and attempted blackmailing of Martin Luther King Jr is being gingerly examined, with the "investigation" conducted in such a way as not to unduly embarrass officials of the Kennedy or Johnson administrations.

With great care, the committee has focused on the FBI. Tuesday when the committee counsel first set forth the result of shuffling through press clips, it seemed as if no Justice Department had existed in 1962; Wednesday, an FBI witness pointed out that it was Robert Kennedy who authorized the wiretap of Dr. King, and that "the President of the United States and the attorney general specifically discussed their concern of Communist influence with Dr. King."

NO KENNEDY ROOT

But the Church committee showed no zest for getting further to the Kennedy root of this precedent to Watergate eavesdropping. If Church were willing to let the chips fall where they may, he would call some knowledgeable witnesses into the glare of the camera lights and ask them some questions that have gone unasked for 13 years.

For example, he could call Nicholas Katzenbach, Attorney General Kennedy's deputy and successor, and ask what he knows of the Kennedy decision to wiretap Dr. King. Who at Justice concurred in the recommendation? How does the FBI know the President was consulted or informed?

After Katzenbach assumed office, and the wiretapping continued, he was told by angry newsmen that the FBI was leaking scurrilous information about Dr. King. Why did he wait for four months, and for a thousand telephonic intereceptions, to discontinue the officially-approved tap?

Of course, this sort of testimony would erode Church's political base. That is why we do not see former Assistant FBI Director Cartha "Deke" Deloach, Lyndon Johnson's personal contact with the FBI, in the witness chair. What did President Johnson know about the character-assassination plot and when did he know it? What conversations took place between Deloach and President Johnson of the tapping of Dr. King, or about the use of the FBI in any other intrusions into the lives of political figures?

The committee is not asking embarrassing questions even when answers are readily available. A couple of weeks ago, at an open hearing, an FBI man inadvertently started to blurt out an episode about newsmen who were wiretapped in 1962 with the apparent knowledge of Attorney General Kennedy. The too-willing witness was promptly shooshed into silence, and told that such information would be developed only in executive session. Nobody even raised an eyebrow.

That pattern of containment by the Church committee is vividly shown by the handling of the buggings at the 1964 Republican and Democratic conventions which were ordered by Lyndon Johnson. Such invasions of political headquarters were worse than the crime committed at Watergate, since they involved the use of the FBI, but the Church investigators seem to be determined not to probe too deeply.

If FBI documents say that reports were made to specific Johnson aides, why are those men not given the same opportunity to publicly tell their story so avidly given the next president's men? If Lyndon Johnson committed this impeachable high crime of using the FBI to spy on political opponents, who can be brought forward to tell us all about it?

CONGRESSIONAL DECORUM

But that would cause embarrassment to Democrats, and Church wants to embarrass professional employes of investigatory agencies only. A new sense of congressional decorum exists, far from the sense of outrage expressed in the Senate Watergate committee's hearing room. When it is revealed that the management of NBC news gave press credentials to LBJ's spies at the 1964 convention, everybody blushes demurely — and nobody demands to know which network executive made what decision under what pressure.

I have been haranguing patient readers for years about the double standard applied to Democratic and Republican political crimes, and had hoped the day would come when the hardball precedents set by the Kennedy and Johnson men would be laid before the public in damning detail.

Obviously, Democrat Frank Church is not the man to do it. His jowl-shaking indignation is all too selective; the trail of high-level responsibility for the crimes committed against Dr. King and others is evidently going to be allowed to cool.

Pity. You'd think that after all the nation has been through in the past few years, our political leaders would have learned that the one thing that brings you down is the act of covering up.

Letters to the Editor

The Saint Joe News
Saint Joe, Indiana 46785

Dear Friend:

Please take a moment now to read this letter. If it weren't so important, I wouldn't be writing you today asking you this personal favor.

Frankly, I'm more worried and concerned than I've been in many years.

The bosses of 10 giant international unions have filed what they call "the largest multi-union legal action ever undertaken" against our Committee. With resources approaching $500,000,000.00 a year from compulsory dues, these union czars aim to force us against a wall and make us quit.

They want to kill Right To Work.

That's why I must write you and all our other friends in Indiana and every other state and ask for your help in this emergency situation.

Their formal charge against us under Title 29, U.S. Code 433 (b) has already been thrown out by the United States Department of Labor and their other charge is even more far-fetched. They know we'll eventually beat them in the courts. But their object is totally sinister.

The union lawyers aim to tie us up in court, force us to use our funds in self defense, bleed us white by legal machinations, and end our effectiveness. If we permit this to happen, Right To Work is finished. That's why we need your help now and I'm sending you this special additional appeal.

Actually, I'm sure you understand this lawsuit against us is a back-handed compliment. It's because we're hurting their "good thing" that the oligarchs of these giant unions are spending so much to fight us.

Big Labor poured over $25,000,000.00 into the elections last fall to buy a veto-proof Congress. But, so far at least, we've stopped them cold.

We've got their bill, meant to force all state and local public employees to pay union dues, tied up in committee. And earlier this year, letters from thousands of Right To Work Committee members killed H.B. 56—a bill to extend compulsory unionism to postal workers.

It's been the same story in the state legislatures. Since January we've mailed over 260,000 urgent bulletins to members and friends, alerting them of impending state legislation.

And we've had great success so far.

But you and I know the union fat cats won't peacefully abandon the billions they confiscate every year from workers forced to pay the union bosses to hold their jobs. George Meany and his henchmen still hope to repeal Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act—not to mention their goal of forcing all public employees into unions.

I believe we must stop these labor tyrants from taxing everyone who works for a living—from buying votes, swaying the news media, and creating the climate in which the rights of an individual count for nothing.

That's why I'm writing to explain this crisis situation to you, ask for your help, and urge you to send $10, $15 or whatever you can.

Unless we can raise at least $168,000 at once to continue our legislative activities and meet the legal costs connected with this law suit against us, Right To Work will be in serious trouble. That's why I'm so concerned.

Please, will you send me your check today?

Sincerely,
Reed Larson

P.S. Just ten years ago in the toughest fight of my life, we beat the Labor bosses' grab for more power when they tried to repeal 14(b) after the 1964 elections. If you agree to help now, I'm sure we'll beat them again.

Newville Twp. Homemakers

—Bivere Brush, reporter

As each person came to the November 12 meeting of the Newville Township Home Ec Club at the home of Kathryn Kreig, they were handed a small peanut butter for a hickory nut piece and asked to guess the number. Bivere Brush guessed the closest and received the nuts. Dorine Singer was co-hostess.

After a delicious potluck, President Doris Hart called the meeting to order and all repeated the home ec creed. Rosella Mickelson gave devotions using an article from "Awake." "Memories" was the song of the month led by Chorister Dorothy Meek.

Doris Hart gave a lesson on house plants. Then 18 members and one guest told what they would like to receive for Christmas from their Secret Pal.

Mrs. Velva Smith is a new member of the club.

A produce auction was then conducted and the meeting closed with Dorine Singer's Prayer Song. Gladys Impton had three contests for social hour.

Birthday girls for the month were Elva Hook and Belva Smith. "Happy Birthday" was sung for them and for Kathryn Kreig who was absent in October.

The December 10 meeting will be at 11:30 a.m. with Annabelle Cullier at 919 East High Street in Hicksville. It will include a potluck dinner and revealing of 1975 Secret Pals.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Ted, 11—25—75

I want to tell you how much your column about Charlie Arnett meant to me. I know the entire Arnett family feels the same. It was not only a beautiful tribute, but a truthful one. Mere words can not express my appreciation. I shall always treasure your words about him.

You gave me something more than one of Daddy's material possessions, you gave me my father as he was and as he will always be.

Thank you.

What a feeling of fulfillment — to know that one has done justice to the live and love of a fellow human being. —Ed.

Pickle Employees Honored At Thanks'g Dinner

Sechler's annual Thanksgiving Dinner for employees and business associates was held Wednesday of last week. In addition to the usual delicious pot luck prepared by the ladies employed at the pickle processing plant, there were some surprises.

Sally Smith was presented with an Acutron watch in recognition of her 20 years with the company. Bob Musser received an Acutron watch for his 21 years with the company, and Art Lyons also received a similar watch for his 25 years with Sechlers. Owner Frank Sechler made the surprise presentations with the comment that, by that time he had run out of money and couldn't buy anything for himself for his years with the firm.

The watches were specially engraved for each individual.

1,300 Attend Elementary School Open Houses Here, At Butler

More than 1,300 parents, relatives and friends of the students attended the DeKalb Eastern Elementary Schools' Bicentennial Open Houses, according to Principal Charles Ray.

The Riverdale Elementary School featured a colorful, three dimensional time line of historical events covering the past 200 years. The display was in the hallways and separate bicentennial displays were in each classroom.

Riverdale also had "town criers" presenting historical announcements periodically during the evening as well as a choral group under the direction of Dorothy Whitney, featuring patriotic selections. In addition, there was a videotape presentation in the new library which had three to five minute historical segments given by each class.

Ideas for the Bicentennial Open House were devised and carried out by a committee including Betty Wagner, Claudia Winn, Judy Baker and Linda Madden.

Refreshments were served by the PTO under the direction of President Lynn Kaiser.

Highlighting the Butler Elementary School Bicentennial Open House was the featuring of a famous historical character or event outside each classroom. There were also flag displays, a Snoopy question and answer exhibit, a Little Hoosier display of old school houses as well as numerous individual bicentennial presentations in each classroom.

In addition, Judy Waahler's sixth grade chorus sang patriotic songs at various times during the evening.

Ideas for the Butler Open House were created by Gayle Aylsworth, Peggy Mansfield, Cheryl Yarger and Sandy Saunders.

Refreshments were served by Mayola Walter and her staff.

Poor Conduct At EHS Games Prompts Plea

Due to unsportsmanlike conduct at football and basketball games this fall, DeKalb Eastside High School Principal Robert Williams has found it necessary to issue a plea to Blazer fans to help in curbing such conduct.

In issuing a statement this week, Mr. Williams pointed out that the school's athletic program attempts to sponsor good sportsmanship as one of the important parts of that program.

He said, "It has been apparent at some of our athletic contests this year that some of our fans, both student and adult, have lost sight of this objective. During the football season we had a lot of foul language and booing of the officials and even very critical comments of our own team members, and now that the basketball season has opened it has continued. Also, at our last game some individuals in our crowd were throwing objects at the officials and players. This is very dangerous and could cause a person to lose an eye, or to slip on the object on the floor and cause serious injury. We certainly do not want anything like this to happen."

Continuing in his statement, Mr. Williams asked, "Please be a good sport and help us to stop these acts of poor sportsmanship of throwing things on the floor and booing the officials' decisions and play of your team.

"The officials are hired to call the games the way they see the play and probably will make a call occasionally that you disagree with from your place in the bleachers. The players also make an error that hurts at times, but all of them are giving 100% and do not need to be told that they made the error.

"Try to adjust your thinking to bring a better sport and help us stop the unsportsmanlike acts before someone gets hurt.

"Parents, please emphasize to your children that these things must stop. Anyone who is seen throwing objects on the floor will be removed from the gym."

RIVERDALE MENU

Tuesday—hamburger sandwich, french fries, pears.

Wednesday—turkey and biscuits, green beans, fruit jello.

Thursday—beef and noodles, lettuce salad, mixed fruit.

Friday—hot dog sandwich, baked beans, pineapple.

Fine Arts Group Plans For Three Spring Concerts

A significant step in adding to DeKalb County's cultural endeavors was announced this week by the Auburn Community Arts Council in a press conference at the Auburn Cord Duesenberg Museum.

The Fort Wayne Philharmonic Orchestra's director, Thomas Briccetti, will host a series of three concert performances in the spring of 1976. The first will be presented March 9 at the museum and will be a Bicentennial Program featuring works by two American composers. Samuel Barber and Aaron Copland, along with selections by Paul Creston and Eugene O'Brien.

The second concert will be presented April 7, highlighting a European classical guitarist in combination with the Indiana Chamber Orchestra. The third concert May 11 will feature the Michiana Ballet from Elkhart and the University Singers from the Fort Wayne IU—PU Campus.

Tickets will be $10.50 for the series of three concerts or $4.00 per concert on an individual concert basis. However, individual concert tickets will be available only if there is not a series ticket sellout. And with the response to other cultural programs recently, a sellout is anticipated.

Phil Butler, president of the Auburn Community Arts Council, expressed his great satisfaction Tuesday with the spring program, calling it an "impossible dream come true."

Tickets are available at the museum and Keltech Pharmacy in Auburn and at Streck's Men's Wear in Angola.

The concerts will be a cultural first for this area as well as being unique nationwide in that they will be presented in an unusual and historically significant auditorium, the Auburn Cord Duesenberg Museum.

CARD OF THANKS

The members of the Charles D. Arnett family want to thank everyone for their thoughtfulness during our time of sorrow. Your sympathy and kindness are greatly appreciated.

Editor 'Boycotts' UniServ Social, Brands It 'Influence Peddling'

It won't make any national headlines—but the editor of The Saint Joe News "boycotted" a "DeKalb County Media Reception" sponsored by the UniServ office at Auburn, a division of the Indiana State Teachers Association. The reception was set for Tuesday afternoon at the Greenhurst Country Club in Auburn with cocktails and hors d'oeuvres to be served. The UniServ office said in its invitation that the reception was to thank the news media in the county for their cooperation in publishing articles concerning education.

The local editor replied by letter to Gerald Goen, UniServ director, stating that the affair was "entirely out of place" in considering the total situation. He noted that being "wined and dined" by a union organization was an effort to "use" the news media to give the appearance of the media's "working with" the union organization to improve public relations. He noted that public relations efforts and ideas are the union's responsibility, and that the media has the responsibility only of passing on to the public what has been prepared by UniServ.

The reason for being so concerned about the situation, the editor noted, is that private business and industry are being fined and given jail sentences for alleged "influence peddling" or seeking favors for their interests, through such "wine and dine" activities. He noted that, if one sector of society is subject to criminal charges, "how can your organization in clear conscience, resort to the same tactics but without suffering the consequences cast upon others?"

It was suggested by the editor that any expressions of appreciation to news media in the county should properly come from the teacher groups themselves in their respective areas. He objected to the instrusion by a third party (UniServ) in matters better handled on an individual community basis.

Noting that a faculty member in the eastside district had recently taken the time to make a personal visit to the News Office to find out why the editor was "against" teachers, the letter revealed the constructive results of the conversation because of first—hand discussion. The faculty member noted after the conversation that "there aren't as many differences as I thought."

The letter noted that the intrusion of third parties in negotiations between teachers and the school board had resulted in the fact that many teachers in the eastern district did not even know what their own negotiation representatives were asking for. The editor also noted that the school also has a third party involved, their legal counsel. He and the faculty member had mutually agreed that removing UniServe and the school board's attorney might very well lead to greater mutual understanding and respect for the opposite side.

The editor noted that, had the school boards sponsored such a "wine and dine" meeting, "UniServe would have immediately come out with charges of 'influence peddling' or 'seeking favor' or some such accusation."

For these reasons, the editor said he felt it his "duty and responsibility NOT to attend" the Tuesday gathering. He also said this did not imply that The Saint Joe News would refuse to publish news releases from UniServ. "Our responsibility is to inform the public of all sides involved in matters of question and debate, especially when they (the public) are paying the bill. We shall continue to abide by that responsibility."

To make certain that all parties involved would know firsthand of the local paper's position, the editor distributed copies of the two page letter to all county newspapers, WIFF radio, all classroom teacher associations in the county, and all school boards and superintendents in the county.

In commenting on the letter's contents and his "boycott" of the social gathering Tuesday, the editor said, "Publicity about school matters has been almost totally from one side. The ISTA, UniServ, classroom teacher groups and so—called experts in education have had the limelight for years. But the public has not one advocate for its interests. The school boards are supposed to be the public's representative. But they have been so handcuffed by regulations that they have virtually no power whatsoever. Strikes are always blamed on school boards nowadays. And a significant portion of the criticism directed their way by teacher—oriented groups is misleading. We hear about 'low minimum salaries' when contracts come up for renewal. We hear minimum salaries constantly, but never do we hear about the automatic pay raise a teacher gets each year under the title 'increment.' The only time a teacher makes the absolute minimum is in the first year of teaching. They automatically get a raise of $200 to $300 or thereabouts their second year and each year thereafter to a certain point years in the future. And when a new contract is negotiated for a raise, they get the higher base pay PLUS the regular increment increase. But the general public is unaware of this or forgets about it. And you certainly don't hear teacher negotiators mentioning that automatic increase. So, my 'boycott' was not only to call attention to the unfair practice involved in a media social; it was also to serve as an advocate for the public, because the public has absolutely no one to speak for them in educational matters."

Anyone interested in reading the letter in its entirety may do so by obtaining a copy at the News Office.

'Living Pictures'

"Living Pictures" were presented to the student body of Riverdale Elementary School by the fifth grade class last week as their part in the school Bicentennial Program.

The "Living Pictures" depicted famous historical scenes over the past two hundred years in which the students dressed as the characters of the period, and remained in a still pose for the time it took the narrator to describe the picture.

The "Living Pictures" were as follows: First Thanksgiving, Washington Crossing the Delaware, The Boston Massacre, The Boston Tea Party, The Spirit of '76, The Signing of the Declaration of Independence, Betsy Ross, Grant and Lee at Appomatox, Meeting of the First Transcontinental Railroads, The Wright Brothers, The Marines Raising the Flag At Iwo Jima, Neil Armstrong On the Moon, and Thanksgiving 1975.

All students in the fifth grade took part as a character in the "Living Pictures." Fifth grade teachers Lori Fox and Judy Baker were in charge of the program.

However, the Blazers only trailed by 14—12 with three minutes remaining in the first half. Then Norwell scored 11 in a row to lead 25—12 at the half. Norwell's lead went to as many as 36 points in the second half as they outscored Eastside 47—28.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

Some additional comments on those scraps of paper lying on the floor and elsewhere:

Headline: "Britain's Doctors Step Up Work Slowdown Protest." They've had Socialized Medicine now for 27 years and doctors work an 80 hour week for $6,000 a year. It takes months to get in a hospital for appendectomies and the like. Meanwhile, back in the U.S., Sen. Ted Keanedy, union czar George Meany and others push for a "national health program" which is just another name for Socialized Medicine. And these pushers for socialism distort statistics and make totally false statements about how "bad" is the health of the U.S. citizen. They never say anything good about our health care in this nation, care which has been outstanding as long as doctors are left alone to deal with their patients on a private basis. But the likes of Kennedy and Meany would have us set up another buresucratic bungle.

Headline: "Health Plan Offered To County Employes." I have not yet figured out why the taxpayer should foot the bill—or part of it—for such things as health plans and pension programs for public employees, starting at the township trustee level and going on through the county, state and national levels. I don't have enough left over to set up my own retirement program, but as a taxpayer am required to take care of everyone else in governmental positions who benefit from statutory pension programs. Read those "Commissioners Claims" reports and see how thousands of dollars each year are going toward Public Employee Retirement.

A recent article about the volunteer services provided at DeKalb Memorial Hospital under current chairman Thelma Baker prompted me to do some figuring. On the basis of the number of hours given by volunteers, I figure their work represents at least a half million dollars a year, a cost which patients don't pay due to the willingness of the volunteers to give their time and patience to patients.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

I would like to take this opportunity in behalf of the DeKalb County Association for Mental Health to thank you for your help in making our Christmas Gift Program to the County nursing homes and the state school a big success. Your time and effort is genuinely appreciated. It is my sincere hope you found this work to be both fulfilling and satisfying, and that this Christmas will mean a bit more to you than it normally would for what you have done for those people who can't help themselves.

Again, thanks for a job well done. We hope you have a happy holiday season.

Sincerely,
Arthur Geo. Rahe
President

Boosters To Plan Bicentennial Program For '4th'

The Booster Club of Saint Joe met Wednesday at Knisely Branch Bank. There were only five present due to an unnoticed conflict with a fire department district meeting.

However, a discussion was held on the suggestion by President Ted Haberkorn that a bicentennial observance be planned for the Fourth of July at Saint Joe. The consensus was that such an observance should be held.

To get more ideas on the matter, a special meeting of the club was set for Wednesady, January 7, at 7:30 at the bank building.

Further investigation of the installation of additional tennis courts is planned.

Attending the meeting were Tonda Miller, Charles Carnahan, Cindy Carnahan and Mary Beatty.

50th Anniversary

Invitations are being received by relatives of the Spencerville area to a reception honoring Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dean of Richmond, Indiana, on December 21 honoring their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

Mr. Dean was born in Rock Island, Illinois, and moved south of Spencerville in 1916. Mrs. Dean was born in the old hotel in Grabill and was raised in Cedar Creek Township. She is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Eck Hursh and has three sisters living in Spencerville and a brother living in Leo.

Following their marriage in 1925, the couple lived near Leo while Mrs. Dean completed teaching the school year in the Leo school. Mr. Dean completed the machinist apprentice course at the Wabash Railroad shops in Fort Wayne.

They lived in Spencerville a number of years, later moving to Fort Wayne where Mr. Dean began working at International Harvester. During the course of nearly 30 years with the company, he was transferred to the Chicago office where he served in Consumer Relations. He later returned to the Planning Department at Fort Wayne and the couple then lived in that city. In 1962 he left the Harvester company to set up a Dental Laboratory in Richmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean have been retired for several years, but remain active in church and in the Richmond community. Mr. Dean is a member of a small orchestra called "The Entertainers" and plays frequently for many charitable groups, churches and nursing homes. He is chairman of the trustees of the First English Lutheran Church.

Mrs. Dean is active in church work, serving as secretary-treasurer of the Memorials Committee, chairman of Miriam Circle, teacher of the Chapel Class and president-elect of the LCW.

The couple has one daughter, Joyce, wife of Dr. Everett Ringenberg of Richmond; and seven grandchildren, Paul Ringenberg of Lincoln, Nebraska, Steven Ringenberg of Columbus, Ohio, Cathy Stout of Goldsboro, North Carolina, and Janis, Tim, Tom and Mark at home. There are two great grandchildren, Alison and Benji, of Columbus, Ohio.

Relatives and friends are invited to attend church with the Deans at the 10:40 service, have lunch with the Ringenbergs and then attend a reception from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall of the church at 2727 East Main (US 40 East).

School Program Next Tuesday

In keeping with the bicentennial celebration, the Christmas program this year at Riverdale School is entitled, "Christmas In America." It will be presented Tuesday, December 16.

Since different parts of the United States were settled by peoples from various countries of the world, the Christmas carols and customs they brought with them also vary. The first grade will represent the settlers from Germany. The third grade is depicting the Swedish customs and carols. The fifth grade will show the Spanish—Mexican influence. The sixth grade chorus will represent the colonies from England.

Songs to be performed by the first grade are: "Silent Night," "Away In the Manger," "O Come, Little Children," "O, Christmas Tree," and "Mince Pie or Pudding."

The third graders will sing "St. Lucia's Day," "Hejom, Fejom," "Christmas Is Here Again," "Carol of the Birds" and "O Come, All Ye Faithful."

In the fifth grade, songs will be "El Nacimiento," "The Pinata," "Fum, Fum, Fum," "Zumba, Zumba," and "To Bethlehem We Go."

The sixth grade chorus will sing "Deck the Hall," "Here We Come A-Caroling," "The Twelve Days of Christmas" and "Joy To the World."

Christmas Prog'm December 21

The public is invited to attend the First Annual Community Christmas Candlelight Service to be held in St. Peter Lutheran Church at Spencerville on Sunday evening, December 21, at 8:00 p.m.

The mass community choir, under the direction of Jay Blauser, will present: Bach's "Wake, Awake For Night Is Flying"; Gordon Young's cantata "The Holy Birth"; Cassler's "Glory To God, the Saviour King"; as well as leading the congregation in appropriate Christmas carols.

Mrs. Kathleen Emme—McMaken will be guest accompanist. John Bowyer and Mrs. George Doll will narrate the service. Guest soloists will be Mrs. Gerald Blauser, Mrs. Robert McNabb, and Mrs. Terry Rhine.

Rev. Terry Rhine will officiate.

Cooperative Effort In Branch Bank Project Brings 'Amazing' Results

—Special report by the Editor

As the year 1975 draws to a close, and with the season of Thanksgiving just observed, it is appropriate to note what is happening in the local community as a whole. There are those things for which individuals and families may draw a feeling of satisfaction, accomplishment and thanksgiving. Each knows his or her own circumstances.

There are also other matters which affect all who live in this area. And one of them is the presence of a branch bank to serve the Riverdale area.

Merchants had long expressed a need for such commercial services, as had individuals. But there was also a shadow of doubt accompanying such need. The ability of this area to support a bank facility was questioned, even by some who wanted such services.

In the spring of 1974, a community survey was published in this paper and was available in local stores. It was authored by Booster Club President Ted Haberkorn who had accepted the leadership of the club the year before on the condition that bank and supermarket facilities for the area be the main objective of the club, a condition prompted by the fact that no other board member offered the presidency would accept it. The survey was submitted to the board and was approved by it.

The survey was particularly aimed at the public's outlook toward bank and supermarket facilities, if they wanted these facilities, and, if such facilities were available, would they use them. There was no door to door solicitation for survey answers, no "push" or effort to get the "right" answers; it was strictly a voluntary project.

Over 70 questionnaires were eventually received, most of them turned in within two or three weeks. Some 80% of those responding to the survey said they wanted a bank, 75% said they wanted a supermarket. The results were announced in March.

In May, just two months later, Knisely National Bank of Butler announced tentative plans for opening a branch bank at Saint Joe, after survey results had been mailed to three county banking institutions. The Knisely Bank board of directors had talked about the matter for several months prior to the survey. When the Booster Club president sent the survey forms to the bank board for its inspection, the positive results of the survey appeared to prompt a definite decision.

Also a matter of influence was the Vulcraft plant constructed at Saint Joe in 1972 providing many new jobs in the Riverdale area. The plant, which assembles steel girders, at that time expressed its plans for expansion. That expansion has been completed in the last year, and will provide even more jobs in this area.

Another announcement by the bank board, also in May of last year, indicated that a permanent structure would be built. It had been planned to make use of a modular unit at first. But this proposal was changed.

In July of last year, two lots on the main street of Saint Joe were purchased from the town board, which at that time included John Heyman, president, Bill Hubbard and Dick Roberts. The lots had been purchased by the town under the previous board composed of Mr. Haberkorn, president, Jack Bowser and Lynn Lake, for use as a town hall site. When the bank proposal came up, however, the lots were made available for that purpose. The lots, along with three other sites, had been suggested by the Booster Club president for consideration by bank officials. They picked the main street site and, through the cooperation of the town board, purchased the two lots.

Then followed months of waiting for the necessary approval of plans before actual construction began on a branch bank building. The building was completed in July of this year.

What has been the result of the bank effort?

In a conversation last month with Mary Beatty, manager of the branch, a few facts were brought out which indicate the response of this community has been beyond the expectations of all involved. For instance, the branch opened without fanfare some three weeks before its official open house week which was set up to coincide with Saint Joe's centennial celebration in July. In that time, not one day went by without at least one new account being opened, and the total was some 300 new accounts.

Then, last month, in an update on the matter, Mrs. Beatty reported "just under 600 new accounts since we opened and only four days when no new accounts were opened." That was in four months' time.

But the eye-opener was this: as of the middle of November, the branch had over one-half million dollars in deposits. It was stated that it took about two years for another nearby new bank to reach that amount of deposits.

Thus, as the past two years are reviewed, there is seen a small community organization seeking the opinion of the people in the community about want and need for basic family and business conveniences, a presentation of the results without a "hard sell" effort but rather with a "tell it like it is" approach, a response by a bank board which involves an investment of over $150,000 in a community in which others have "feared to tread" in the past, and a further almost amazing response by the community in making use of branch bank facilities.

Much of the credit for the branch bank's success thus far is due to its friendly atmosphere created by the branch's personnel, Dennis Kepler of Butler, Arla Sechler of Saint Joe and Mrs. Beatty who, as a "veteran" in the Knisely Bank organization in years past, has "taken to" the local community in a big way.

By working together, by mutual response, Knisely National Bank of Butler (and now Saint Joe) and people living in the Riverdale area have reestablished a strong financial business foundation in this community which is and will be of benefit to all concerned.

The situation is significant for two reasons. One is that, in the face of the economic woes facing this nation generally, a small community has grown. The second point is even more significant. A small community has grown by its own initiative—it didn't need any outside "planners" or a federal grant!

'We're All Afraid'

It was very gratifying that an Eastside faculty member took the time a few weeks ago to drive to Saint Joe with a sincere desire to find out why I am "against" teachers, as it was put. The faculty member's appearance was prompted by a couple of letters to the editor in the county daily, one from the district representative of UniServ in which high praise was given to that teachers' organization for improving education (his opinion). He gave the credit to "collective bargaining."

My reply challenged him, UniServ and teachers themselves to answer the question: why are high school graduates scoring lower and lower (in the past twelve years) in achievement tests? "New ideas" have been in effect at least that long. A coincidence??

A phone call as soon as my answer was published came from our school district and an employee in the district said, "I agree one hundred percent." A message came from a faculty member in the DeKalb Central district: "Tell the editor at Saint Joe he is right." That faculty member also expressed disappointment that teachers have become "labor" rather than maintaining the "professional" image prevalent in years gone by. Another teacher from this area commented that "there is no way to weed out the incompetent teacher. And everything in education is supposed to be 'fun.' But it takes work to learn, not 'fun'."

The person to person conversation with the Eastside faculty member who wanted to clarify things ended with the faculty member's observation, "Well — there isn't as much disagreement as I thought." It was a pleasant, fruitful discussion, as far a I am concerned, not only because I had the opportunity to correct a wrong impression (that I am "against" teachers), but also because it presented an opportunity to talk about matters first hand without an "inbetween" or third party. The two of us agreed that, with all the regulations, rights and legal entanglements involved today in "education" but having nothing really to do with classroom progress, teachers tend to depend on UniServ for protection and the school board tends to rely on its attorney for its protection. So, the thought, "We're all afraid," results from the lack of communication due to fear of being sued when disciplinary action is taken by a teacher, or when a contract is not renewed for a teacher by the school board, or when a view or opinion or comment is expressed and it is blown 'way out of proportion and leads to misunderstandings and accusations.

The conversation between that teacher and me was so gratifying for both of us that I suggested they (the teachers) toss out UniServ, disband it, and the school board conduct its meetings without legal counsel present. Why can't these two parties meet and discuss matters openly, honestly and sincerely, without interference from a third party? I know — it's probably illegal nowadays; we're so bound up by regulations.

I think there is a lesson in this. More progress is made by two parties meeting first hand than by two third parties stuck in between, in most instances.

That faculty member and I found that out a few weeks ago. We spoke openly, honestly and frankly, because we trusted one another, because each of us recognized the interest and concern felt by the other.

Why can't teachers and the school board do the same thing???

Lions Club News

—Andy Crow, reporter

OUR MOTTO: WE SERVE.

The Saint Joe Lions Club met at the Spencerville UM Fellowship Hall November 24. After a fine meal, our guests, Jerry Markle of Spencerville and Nelson McGuire of Indianapolis, were introduced.

During the business meeting, Lions Harold Kagey and Forrest Bevington reported the purchase of a color television. The TV was presented on loan to Marjorie Ramsey for her use. The TV was purchased from Bridges TV and Appliance in Leo. When the purpose of the purchase was explained to Mr. Bridges, he was very enthused and made the club a very good "deal" and expressed his desire to help the local club in this project.

The next major topic on the agenda was the annual budget. The club has for the first time in several years proposed a balanced budget with a total expenditure of just over $6300.

The program for the evening was a presentation by District Governor Ed White who introduced District Secretary Vern Hecht and Zone Chairman Charlie Capp. Governor White then presented some local club awards: Harold Murphy and Robert Wilder were presented the Key Award for sponsoring two or more new club members. Frank Sechler and Lavon Hart were presented with Advanced Key Awards for sponsoring six new club members.

Governor White then made the following remarks about Lions as an international organization. There are 28,000 clubs with a total membership of over one million one hundred thousand in 148 countries. The Lions organization was founded 58 years ago in Chicago.

One of the projects to be undertaken by Lions International will be the formation of Ladies' Lions clubs called Lioness clubs. The state projects were outlined including a $500,000 expansion project for the Leader Dog Center at Rochester, Michigan. The second is a $300,000 renovation of a hospital in Indianapolis for an Eye Care Center to be suplemented with federal funds.

A District 25 project is the purchase of $6,000 worth of equipment for expansion of the Kidney—Renal unit at Lutheran Hospital in Fort Wayne.

A short board of directors meeting was held at the conclusion of Governor White's program. The meeting was then adjourned.

50 PLUS CLUB

—Galen Markle, secretary

The Fifty Plus Club met November 20 at St. Peter Lutheran Church in Spencerville with Elva Hoover, Alma Ranagan, Kathryn Shockley and Betty Bodiger as hostesses.

At 6:30 the group was called to order and all repeated the Lord's Prayer, after which all enjoyed the delicious potluck supper of turkey and all the trimmings.

Mrs. Hoover then introduced The Brush College Quartet who favored us with a number of musical selections, greatly enjoyed by all.

Ida Reed, president, then conducted a short business meeting. She told of a number of historical events occurring in November. She read, "A Thought For November." Miss Reed and Gaylon Markle were reimbursed for supplies. It was voted to purchase two poinsettias for the altar of the church in appreciation for the use of church facilities for meetings.

Gaylon Markle, Mildred McKinley and Nellie Schaeffer were appointed to make programs for next year.

Marie Ward will host the Christmas meeting along with MM Arther Bottoms and Elizabeth Hart. It will be held December 18. Please bring a white elephant gift for the exchange.

Same time—same place. See you there.

—Lisa Parker, reporter

On a recent Saturday, the officers attended a workshop at Cambridge City. This year it was a one day event due to the fact that Spring Mill Inn was under remodeling.

We have several new members so far. Two are from Leo. They don't have an IJHS Club there so they were intbrested enough to join our club. We are very glad they are coming.

On December 29 we are going to Glen Oaks to have a party with everyone there.

We want to invite all junior and senior high school kids who are interested in a really great time learning on projects that teach us more about Indiana History to please call Lisa Parker at 337—4096 or Ronny Schmucker at 238—4324 for more information. We are having great fun. We hope you can come also.

Judge's Action, Proposed Legislation Threaten Parental Authority And Responsibility; 'The State' Put In Control

—by The Editor

Two significant situations are in the news today affecting the responsibilties and rights of parents. They present a possible revolution in the social life of America, specifically related to what has been considered a traditional and basic foundation of American free society — the family.

In the past week, Judge Arthur Garrity of Boston removed administrative officials of a Boston school, transferred them to other schools, and took over the operation of the school. The reason; forced busing as mandated by the judge in the past was not being carried out fast enough. Irate parents and violence have been a part of the Boston scene because of forced busing.

Judge Garrity, who authored the forced busing formula for Boston, was quoted in the November 9, 1974, issue of "Human Events" (a Washington, D.C. publication) as follows:

"Parents do not have the right to keep their children out of school. Parents' rights are limited. The state has responsibility for their (the children's) education and welfare. It is not a moral doctrine. There is a danger in talking about parents' unrestricted rights regarding their children."

Thus, this judge, whose decisions affect thousands of people and establish a precedent in court decisions, places the state ABOVE the parent in regard to the welfare of children.

This is absolutely contrary to every basic human instinct of a man and a woman who have become "as one" and bring forth new life in what is called "the family."

But there is another relevant situation in the matter, this one in the halls of the U.S. Congress where legislators are considering "The Child and Family Service Act of 1975" (Senate bill S262 and House bill HR2966). The proposal would take responsibility away from the parent and give it to the government in the raising of children. The proposal includes establishment of more day care centers with tots supervised by government approved employees. This is a proposal strongly favored by Indiana Senator Birch Bayh.

Lavern Voirol of near Saint Joe brought in an information sheet distributed to members of Immaculate Conception Church at Auburn. He is concerned about the proposal, as are many other parents. The sheet refers to the "Child Advocacy Clause" in the proposed legislation and points out, from the Congressional Record:

"If, in the judgment of those who are in charge of such a program (the State by way of the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare), parents are not doing a good job, the advocate (a 'specialist' appointed by the government) would enter the home and direct the education, even within the home, and, if the parent would object, the authority in the home would, de facto, be transferred to these advocates."

The "Charter of Children's Rights of the National Council of Civil Liberties", is becoming a part of the "Child Development Act." The charter includes the following dumbfounding provisions:

(1) "All children have the right of protection from and compensation for the consequences of any inadequacies in their homes and backgrounds." (Note: in other words, never punish your child because he may come back to you with a civil suit.)

(2) "Children have the right to protection from any excessive claims made on them by their parents or authority." The question was asked, by way of example, what do you mean by the fact "excessive claims", and the example was given: "If the mother or father asked the child to take the garbage out, and the child doesn't want to, the parents have no right to insist on it."

(3) "Children have the right to freedom from religious or political indoctrination." That means that you have no right to insist on taking them to church, if they do not wish to go. That also means they have the freedom to insist that they be taught nothing, or any ideas, about God.

(4) "Children shall have the freedom to make complaints about teachers, parents and others without fear of reprisals."

This legislation was vetoed in 1971, but it is back in Congress again and reportedly has the votes to be passed.

It is puzzling how such un-American legislation can be proposed by those who are elected by the American people. But, strange things are happening in our society today, destructive things. The frailties of American patriots are being exposed, as if they were thought of as "gods" by past generations. Their successes are being set aside and young American minds led to think in terms of how "bad" historic personages were rather than how much they accomplished in their moments of trial and strength.

In the investigation of undercover activities of the past several years, many of the activities NECESSARY to protect this country have become "crimes". J. Edgar Hoover is pictured as an arrogant, self-serving, power-hungry individual by today's "investigators" in the press and in the Congress who forget the concern felt by the majority of Americans in years past about the threat of Communism.

And our young people of today, who admire the crusader for right, are so impressed by the sensational headlines of so-called "wrong doing" by such as Mr. Hoover as head of the FBI, don't see that these crusading Congressmen and journalists are themselves helping to carry out one of the prime objectives of Communism — the destruction of the family unit.

Another target is the destruction of respect for authority and that includes parental authority. Read the above "Children's Rights of the National Council of Civil Liberties" and then try to explain that the provisions do NOT destroy the family, do NOT destroy parental authority.

Unless the public acts, un-American legislation will be passed. The action to take is to write Senator Birch Bayh, Senate Office, Washington, D.C., Senator Vance Hartke, Senate Office, Washington, D.C., Representative J. Edward Roush, Rayburn Building, Washington, D.C., and President Gerald Ford, The White House, Washington, D.C., and express your disapproval of the above legislation.

This is no cry of "wolf" just to see people react. This is the real thing. The American family is threatened by such legislation, parental authority AND responsibility is threatened by such legislation, and our children are threatened. Under the guise of leading children to think for themselves and to assert themselves, such proposals instead would lead them to not think at all, to subject themselves like puppets to go in whatever direction the government "specialist" might chose.

The land of the free is becoming "the land of the planners."

Again I say "Many, many thanks" for your wonderful cooperation.

Sincerely,
Geraldine Hursh

Witnesses Issue Statement

The Auburn congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses issued the following statement this week relative to foreign affairs:

"Today, when just one person is made captive by terrorists, that event is widely publicized. People follow with interest the efforts to free the hostage. But in Malawi, since September of 1975, tens of thousands of Jehovah's Witnesses, native Malawians, have been subjected to a rule of terror. Three years ago they fled to Mozambique and Zambia to escape Malawi's reign of terror. Now they have been forced to return. In their own homeland they have been made the target of verbal abuse, of physical violence and all manner of indignities. They have been robbed of their few possessions and left without the means of sustaining life for themselves and their children.

"And why all of this? Are these people a dangerous element to the country — subversive, treasonous, plotters of revolution? Exactly to the contrary. They are undeniably among the most peaceable, hard working, law abiding citizens in the whole land. The brutality and indignities heaped upon them are for one reason only. That is because they are non political. This is due to their conscientious beliefs in the Bible and the teachings of Christ Jesus, who said that his followers were 'no part of the world.' (John 15: 17—19). And so, their conscience does not allow them to purchase a card declaring them members of Malawi's ruling political party — the Malawi Congress Party. Because of this, they are treated as if they merited less consideration than humans normally grant to animals.

"But could the atrocities in Malawi be made to cease? Yes, they could. If those in authority respected the Malawian constitution, such inexcusable attacks could be brought to a halt right now."

Blazers Lose

An oddity in foul shooting statistics brought defeat for the DeKalb Eastside Blazers Friday night as Lakeland took a 59—57 win.

Though Lakeland had 11 fouls, the Blazers got only four free throws attempts and made but one of the charity shots. But the Blazers committed 15 fouls, so committed that Lakeland was entitled to 22 free throws and made 15 of those shots. This gave Lakeland the win, though the Blazers outscored Lakeland from the field 28—22.

Lakeland held an 8 point lead in the final quarter. But the Blazers tied the score with two minutes remaining. Lakeland scored two free throws and Eastside missed on two attempts thereafter to make it 59—57 at the final buzzer.

LAKELAND 59—Riner 0 0 0; Taylor 4 2 10; Reyenga 2 3 7; King 7 1 15; Webb 0 1 1; Bender 2 0 4; Bachman 7 7 21; Thomas 0 1 1; totals 22 15 59.

Rural Housewives

—Sarah Amstutz, reporter

The December meeting and potluck of the RHC was held at the home of Sarah Amstutz.

The table was set with white linen tablecloth, places were marked with Christmas place cards.

Doris Stuck was assistant hostess and brought tame rabbit for the main dish for the dinner.

After the meal that was enjoyed, President Audrey Wilmot called the meeting to order.

Opening number was read. Roll call response was "a Christmas I remember." Secretary read the report as did the treasurer. The January meeting will be held at the home of Inez Smith.

Audrey read the following verse as a thank you for help during the last two years:

"Listen, dear ladies, and you shall hear

Some of the boners I pulled this year.

The months. I couldn't remember,

Didn't know if it were May or December.

And when birthdays came around,

I didn't utter a sound.

Didn't mention a 50th wedding anniversary,

Should have gotten on my knees asking for mercy.

So I'll turn things over to Ida so dear.

Not 'Goodbye,' but 'Good Luck' for the next year."

A Christmas exchange was held.

Letters to the Editor

Mr. T. E. Haberkorn, Editor

The three and a half years I spent as part—time supply pastor of the Spencerville United Methodist Church gave me an interest in the community and its people. There also developed lasting friendships for Mrs. Tingley and myself.

Most praiseworthy is the ways in which members of the Methodist congregation have met the challenge to place the Rev. Terry Rhine as full—time resident pastor, with a modernized parsonage. This required funding more than twice that of previous years.

Many special projects, in addition to the regular contributions of the members, were necessary to make this possible. As the year closes, the congregation has all bills and apportionments paid, and a small surplus.

I believe that the placement of an active, resident pastor in Spencerville can be an important factor in strengthening the life of young and old in the entire community. It deserves the support of your paper and the community.

I think that the news, observations and editorial comment, from the local point of view, have a special and wholesome significance. So much of the output of the news media, which bombards us all, comes from those who focus on the big—city, national or international scenes. These are so large that those who write usually have no direct or significant involvement in what is happening there. In their writing, they seem to rely on expanding rather casual or partial observations of their own, or on the drift of the writings of others, or on Public Relations sources. The sensational is often exploited, overlooking the basic and significant news of what is really developing.

You can report the news from a position of local concern, involvement and personal acquaintance. This is obviously important in the local community where people live; and I believe it has importance in the total scene of American life. "Stay in and keep pitching!"

GS Camp Applications

Limberlost Girl Scout Council is now accepting applications for the Kay Hough Camp Grant and the Evelyn Blitz Fine Arts Grant. Girls wishing to apply for the camp grant must be a registered Cadette or Senior Girl Scout and have a good camping background.

The Evelyn Blitz Fine Arts Grant is awarded to promote study in the field of fine arts. Any registered Girl Scout may apply but must be currently studying in an area of fine arts.

Each grant, worth $100, will be awarded at the annual Recognitions Dinner. Additional procedures for application are available at the Limberlost Girl Scout Council office, Foellinger Center, 227 East Washington, in Fort Wayne.

The deadline for applying for both grants is January 31.

Each year the council asks its members to nominate other adult volunteers who have dedicated their efforts to further Girl Scouting in their community. The deadline for these nominations is also January 31. After a selection process, these special volunteers are recognized at the annual Adult Recognitions Dinner.
